Tyrolese cribs may be divided into two general classes, the oriental type and the Tyrolese. In the latter class the crib owner takes it for granted that Christ was born in Tyrol, hence scenery, people and dress are purely Tyrolese. In all the cribs the stable of Bethlehem is either the ruin of a castle (according to legend, Christ first saw the light of day in the ruins of the tower of David) or a part of a temple to show that the stable of Bethlehem was the first Christian temple, or else it is a simple cave on the mountain side.

The stable of Bethlehem and its inmates always remain the center of the great scene, the rest is merely the setting. The crib means much to the family. After weeks of careful, painstaking labor everything is ready, but the holy family is not there. After supper on Christmas eve the parents, domestics and children gather about the crib, the gospel scene is read aloud, and the little ones, quick to detect the absence of the "Christkindl," are told that the holy family are still seeking a shelter and finding none. The sadness that at first expresses itself on their innocent faces soon gives way to joy as they recall that perhaps there is room in their own home—at least they will make room. At midnight the solemn church bells call all to mass, and when the family returns, lo! there lies the infant in the manger, while Mary and Joseph kneel in humble adoration at its side.

On the Day After Christmas

OUR word Santa Claus is a corruption of the Dutch San Nicolas, and the story of the original saint from whom the name and the custom come is told in the Encyclopedia Britannica as follows: "St. Nicholas, bishop of Myra, in Lycia, a saint honored by the Greeks and the Latins on Dec. 6.

"His cult is as celebrated as his history is obscure. All the accounts that have come down to us are of a purely legendary character, and it is impossible to find any single incident confirmed historically.

"The main facts of his life are usually given as follows: He was bishop of Myra at the time of the Emperor Diocletian, was persecuted, tortured for the faith and kept in prison until the more tolerant reign of Constantine and was present at the council of Nicaea.

"It should be observed that this last circumstance is ignored by all historians and that St. Athanasius, who knew all the notable bishops of the period, never mentions Nicholas, bishop of Myra. The oldest known monument of the cult of St. Nicholas seems to be the Church of Sts. Priscus and Nicholas built at Constantinople by the Emperor Justinian. In the west the name of St. Nicholas appears in the ninth century records of the martyrs, and churches dedicated to him are to be found at the beginning of the eleventh century. It is more especially, however, from the time of the removal of his body to Bari, in Apulia, that his cult became popular.

"The inhabitants of Bari organized an expedition, seized his remains by means of a ruse and transported them to Bari, where they were received in triumph on the 9th of May, 1087, and where the foundations were laid for a new basilica in his honor. This was the origin of a famous and still popular pilgrimage. There are nearly 400 churches in England dedicated to St. Nicholas. He is the patron saint of Russia, the special protector of children, scholars, merchants and sailors.

"In art St. Nicholas is represented with various attributes, being most commonly depicted with three children standing in a tub by his side. Of the various interpretations of this none is absolutely certain.

"One explanation has been sought in the legend of St. Nicholas miraculously restoring to life three rich youths who had been murdered, cut up and concealed in a salting tub by a thievish innkeeper or butcher in whose house they had taken lodging.

"A legend of his surreptitious bestowal of dowries upon the three daughters of an impoverished citizen who, unable to procure fit marriages for them, was about to sell them is said to have originated the old custom of giving presents in secret on the eve of St. Nicholas, subsequently transferred to Christmas day.

"Hence the association of Christmas with 'Santa Claus,' an American's corruption of the Dutch form 'San Nicolaas,' the custom being brought to America by the early Dutch colonists."

It's a waste of time to attempt to dodge a hypocrite. He knows more dodges in a minute than you can learn in a lifetime.

A Christmas Eve Adventure

ONCE on a time in a queer little town
On the shore of the Zuyder Zee,
When all the good people were fast asleep,
A strange thing happened to me.

Alone the night before Christmas,
I sat by the glowing fire,
Watching the flame as it rose and fell,
While the sparks shot higher and higher.

Suddenly one of the sparks began
To flicker and glimmer and wink
Like a big, bright eye till I hardly knew
What to do or to say or to think.

Quick as a flash it changed to a face,
And what in the world did I see
But dear old Santa Claus nodding his head
And waving his hand to me!

"Oh, follow me, follow me!" soft he cried,
And up through the chimney with him
I mounted, not daring to utter a word
Till we stood on the chimney's rim.

"Now, tell me, I beg you, dear Santa Claus,
Where am I going with you?"
He laughingly answered: "Why, don't you know?
To travel the wide world through.

"From the crystal palace, far in the north,
I have come since dark, and see
These curious things for the little folk
Who live on the Zuyder Zee."

Then, seating himself in his reindeer sledge
And drawing me down by his side,
He whistled, and off on the wings of the wind
We flew for a midnight ride.

But first such comical presents he left
For the little Dutch girls and boys—
Onions and sausages, wooden faced dolls,
Cheese and gingerbread toys,

Soldiers that marched at the word of command,
Necklaces, bracelets and rings,
Tiny gold watches, all studded with gems,
And hundreds of exquisite things.

Straight to America then, where I,
Perched on a chimney high,
Watched him scramble and bustle about
Between the earth and sky.

Many a stocking he filled to the brim,
And numberless Christmas trees
Burst into bloom at his magical touch.
Then all of a sudden a breeze

Caught us and bore away to the south
And afterward blew us out west,
And never till dawn peeped over the hills
Did we stop for a moment's rest.

"Christmas is coming!" he whispered to me,
"You can see his smile in the sky.
I wish merry Christmas to all the world.
My work is over. Goodby!"

Like a flash he was gone, and I was alone,
For all of this happened to me
Once on a time in a queer little town
On the shore of the Zuyder Zee.

How would we like to see all the kickers and knockers fight to a finish?

FASHION HINTS

Many and varied are the lines of the new blouses; possibly the most noteworthy feature is the peplum or skirt sections which are seen on many of the new models. To be sure, these peplumed blouses were introduced some time ago, but they have not attained the wide popularity which they would seem to deserve as pleasingly different and affording splendid opportunity for effective trimming.

New blouses of this type are of crape, taffeta and satin, and when in matching color with the separate skirt give the appearance of smart dresses that eliminates one of the chief objections to separate blouses and skirts—that of giving the figure a cut in half look that is disastrous to the average figure.

A very striking example of this peplum blouse is of taffeta, the wrist length sleeves set in at a drop shoulder line; the peplum a straight gathered one about eighteen inches long and the sleeves and bodice generously trimmed with tiny buttons. Still another feature is the draped or hoodlike collar of the blouse material.

Striped silk used on the bias is another fashion feature, and an interesting blouse made thus is finished as a basque and is to be worn without a belt or girdle. Most of the dressy washable blouses and many of the silk and crape ones are enhanced by effective hand embroidery, for the vogue of this attractive trimming is now assured.

Sleeves are long or short as one prefers in dresses and blouses and set into regulation extended or drop shoulder armholes, so you see fashion is kind just now and does not restrict us to one and only one style. Probably there will not be a narrowing of new fashion features, such as was the case a few years ago. Women do not like to be dressed like an aggregation of twins, and we have come to know that there is not one particular fashion that suits us all to perfection.

Where Men Are Cheap.

When earth embankment can be placed by man power at a cost of 3½ cents per yard it is evident that there is little use for excavating machinery in Chinese railway construction, even if that machinery cost no more in China than it does at the point of manufacture. Accordingly, in building the Canton-Hankau Railway, which according to the Engineering Record will be, in point of population served, one of the most important trunk lines in the world, mechanical equipment is used only where absolutely necessary, as on bridge work. On one of the larger bridges four caisson piers were sunk with air locks which contained their own hoisting engines, and the air compressors and boilers required for this work were the only plant used on the entire section.

PAISLEY DESIGNS

Patterns Borrowed From the Shawls of Grandmothers' Days.

Paisley designs, the latest things of the moment among the smartest fashionables abroad and which are the shawls of our grandmothers reproduced in silks, are to be a fall feature. A woman may take a couple of yards of one of these lovely things, drape them around her, and she has a cloak that cannot be surpassed.

Paisley is the fashion term used, but Kashmir, Persian or oriental will describe the new silks. They are all after the designs of grandmothers' shawls, not nominally, but actually, for the real shawls were used to obtain the designs. The material is in satins, in fleur de sole, a soft taffeta like silk; in a soft tick ribbed crape and in luvetyn, a silk that has the consistency of the old time cashmere.

Hats will be one of the things in which the silks with the less strongly accentuated designs will be seen. The Paisleys may also be combined with plain silks for evening gowns; they will go into handsome blouses, but they will find their best use probably as cloaks or linings for elegant fur or velvet wraps.

The familiar palm leaf, which appears frequently in all oriental designs, in rugs and other textiles as well as in the old time shawls, is prominent in the silks. That wonderfully brilliant scarlet so familiar in the shawls is notable as a foundation in some of the silks on which are variants of the palm leaf design in dull gold tones. On a white ground the palm leaf is in those soft hues that one knows on the old white shawls. The black foundation has the design with gold or green tones predominating and a soft warm blue foundation has peculiar magenta pink tones in the design.

FALL SWEATERS.

They Come In Gay Tones Like Autumn Leaves.

It will be good news to the sportswoman to know there are shower proof sweaters. The latter have been put through the water proofing process and are therefore impervious to rain, mist or other "elements of the weather."

These sweaters are knitted in plain stitch and have an all around belt, a roll collar and deep pockets. They come in such colors as Dutch blue, hunters' green, old rose and yellow. They are just the thing not only in point of shape and general style, but also in colors, to accord beautifully with the fall requirements and autumn foliage.

Then there are sweaters made of brushed wool that are mixed with fiber to give them an attractive gloss. When in color such sweaters usually are finished with white collars and cuffs, and in some instances the latter take on the appearance of soft fur.

Chutney Sauce.

Twelve large apples, four large onions, six large green tomatoes and two bell peppers, all chopped fine. To one quart of vinegar add two cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of chopped raisins and one tablespoonful each of salt, cinnamon and cloves. Drain the tomato mixture dry, add to sirup and cook slowly one hour. Bottle while hot, and if sealed it will keep a year.

"Who Gave Us Christmas Day?"

A happy, happy Christmas
Be yours today!
Oh, not the failing measure
Of fleeting earthly pleasure,
But Christmas joy abiding,
While years are swiftly gliding,
Be yours, I pray,
Through him who gave us Christmas day!

Valuable Now

"See here," said the irascible man, "you don't amount to a hill of beans."

"I won't deny that," replied the unassuming person, "because I am modest. The high cost of living has given the hill of beans considerable value."

FULL TEAM PRACTICES FOR 247TH BN. SEVEN

Intermediate Team of Lindsay Looks to be Strong.

The 247th Battalion talent for the intermediate O. H. A. team which will represent Peterborough on the ice this coming winter are down to regular practices and at their workout held last night all the players were out and had a good practice. It is rather early to get a line on the real strength of the soldiers, but it must be said that the showing made last night looked good.

Lindsay Intermediates, who will meet the locals in the opening game of the district, held their first practice Wednesday night, and The Warder says:

Lindsay Intermediates held their first hockey practice of the season last night, the following being out: C. Carew, A. Carew, N. Wetlaufer, J. Haugh, L. Richmond, C. O'Loughlin, W. Griffis, C. McElroy, H. Wilford, Clarkson, Heels, Weldon, Bishop and others. Reid of Bobcaygeon who was a favorite with the fans last year, has signed with Lindsay. The two Bishops of the 252nd Battalion, will be added to the strength of the intermediates.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Ciros Club, one of the most fashionable drinking places in London, has been closed by the police for illegal sale of liquor.

Sir Horace Plunkett, a leader of Irish sentiment, interviewed in New York, said that Ireland will send from 130,000 to 150,000 more men to the front.

The Cynic

"The world is full of poetry," exclaimed the optimist.

"Yes, I daresay there is almost as much poetry in the rest of the world as there is in the waste basket," added the pesimist.

As to Balls

First Convalescent Soldier— Did you go to the big society party they gave for us fellows yesterday?

Second Convalescent Soldier—Yes.

"What did you think of it?"

"Believe me, Bill, I'd rather have another ball go through me than go through another ball."

Just Off Our Coasts

A NIGHT'S sail to the north of Prince Edward Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence one happens on the Magdalen Islands. Low-lying and scattered Amherst, Grindstone Entry, Alright, Coffin, Bryon, and the Bird Rocks—a group of romance-filled islands which if they were better known would have visitors by the hundreds through the summer months.

La Grande Demoiselle et la petite Demoiselle are the two smoothly rounded combinations of mountain and cliff which together with sandbars, miles in length, form the chief landmarks of the approach.

Here in these islands, whose history dates back to the French discovery and possession of Canada, one happens on rare things—women in sunbonnets riding in carts, knitting in hand; berry-pickers, ready with a pleasant smile to have their pictures taken; hay-makers, whole-family groups, the women and children all helping with the hay while the good weather lasts; little boys sailing toy boats that they themselves have modeled and fitted; men and women wearing homespun garments and home-made shoes of sealskin; basket-makers, and hookers of gay-patterned rugs.

The soil is rich, the farms are good, and the houses are generally good-sized, attractive, and comfortable. The chief employment is lobstering. There are several very large lobster canneries scattered over the islands, cod-fishing, with the attending stages of salting, drying, and packing, and mackerel fishing. This last mentioned involves yet another work. That of clam digging. For the clam is the tempting morsel that is used to bait mackerel hooks. A more foreign looking sight cannot be imagined than the clam diggers at work on the flats. Carts, buggies, dog cars, and even a cow drawing a box cart may be seen on the clam banks in shallow water quite a distance from shore, the horses munching hay while the women and girls in bright kirtles and long boots or bare-footed, three-pronged forks in hand, did for the claim upon which the success of the mackerel fishing by the men depends.

Havre Aubert on Amherst island is the capital and here one is likely to meet with interesting people who are always ready to give one interesting bits of information concerning the islands.

In the winter time sealing is very successfully carried on, and sealing vessels from Newfoundland frequently come as far into the gulf as the Magdalens for their season's catch.

Excellent modeling clay is found in the islands, and one sculptor, Seumas O'Brien, whose work is well known on both sides of the Atlantic, has very cleverly arranged a little studio for himself in one of the historic old homes where he has turned out several excellent busts during his summer vacation. A sculptor's studio is the last thing one would expect to stumble on in these distant Magdalens.

French is spoken in the islands, but English is also commonly in use and Entry island is an English-speaking colony. The Bird Rocks, the chief breeding spot of gannets and gulls, is very difficult of access and visitors have to be drawn up in a huge net-basket by the lighthouse keeper and his men. The steamer makes the call to these rocks once a month; the infrequency of her visits being due to the fact that the landing is at all times attended with some danger. Etang de Cap, Havre Maison, Etang du Nord and Grindstone are the chief settlements on the islands and the ports of call for the mail, passenger, and freight boats which run between Pictou, P.E.I., and the Magdalens every Monday and Thursday. The Magdalen islands were granted in 1798 to Admiral Sir Isaac Coffin in a fee simple and whose heir, Admiral Coffin, now holds them. The tenants pay a yearly rent of one shilling per acre, but of late an ordinance has been passed by the government of the Province of Quebec making it possible for tenants to buy the land outright, but it seems that few wish to become landowners at the price of $4 per acre, preferring for reasons of their own to pay the shilling rental.

An ignorant man is a merciless critic.

Great Britain's Inventiveness

NEUTRAL MILITARY CRITIC AND EXPXLODED GERMAN LEGEND.

Colonel Gabalonsky, of Switzerland, in an article on the destruction of four zeppelins in England, writes:

"The bubble of German superiority in the technique of war has burst. German submarines have gained no successes, except in assassinating helpless non-combatants. In actual warfare the counter measures taken by the English have been far more wonderful and far more effective than anything which the Germans have done with their submarine vessels. In hunting and destroying German submarines the British naval authorities have displayed inventiveness and resource.

"Now it is the turn of the zeppelins. The English have been slow to move in this matter, but let us remember that during the last two years they have been so busy making guns and aeroplanes for the front that they have had no time to think of their own home defence against airships.

"In this sense their neglect to take these measures against zeppelins earlier in the war does them honor because it sprang from a determination to send every available man every available gun, every available flying machine, every shell to the front, instead of diverting any of these to the protection of England's own population. In this way the people of England, the stay-at-homes have contributed their 'bit' to the cause of fighting Germany.

"But now things are changing. The output of guns and munitions has increased and the stock of men has grown, so that measures can now be taken against zeppelins without injuring other war interests. The result we see. Zeppelins are brought to earth time after time, and their inherent worthlessness for real warfare is exposed.

"The one really new invention during the war is the 'tank,' and that stands to the credit of England. Let us get rid of the superstition that the Germans excel in inventiveness."

Historic Relic Partly Destroyed.

The oldest relic of York County narrowly escaped destruction a few days ago. It was an apple tree on North Yonge street. To Canadians the tree was an important link with the past, for it was planted by Major-General Sir Isaac Brock on June 17, 1812, just one day before Congress at Washington declared war on British North America. At the time when Sir Isaac officiated at this event, over a hundred years ago, he was on a flying visit to York, having just come from Fort George, Niagara, where he was making arrangements to resist the American invasion which terminated two years later. Since that eventful day when Sir Isaac Brock planted the apple tree it has been an object of veneration to the residents of North York. About ten years ago the tree died, but owing to the historic associations a cement foundation was laid about the bole. On a Saturday afternoon a thoughtless schoolboy climbed the venerable relic and filling the hollow bole with old grass and leaves dropped a lighted match therein. The flames ignited the trunk of the tree and within a few minutes a brisk fire was burning. Before the blaze was detected it had gained a good hold on the tree and the fire wagons arrived just in time to extinguish the flames and save the tree from total destruction.

"War on the Canadian Coast."

The Cologne Gazette has made the new discovery that the despatch of German submarines across the Atlantic concerns not the United States, but Canada. In an article headed "The Submarine War on the Canadian Coast," The Cologne Gazette exclaims:

"Among Germans everywhere, not less than among our allies, satisfaction, pride, and joy will hail the news which has been flashed all over the world—that the German submarines have begun the naval war on the Canadian coast."

The Cologne Gazette proceeds in the usual strain about the past achievements of German submarines, and declares that they are now going to "smoke out the holes whence the enemy obtains abundant help, so that the weapons may become more equal in this unequal fight."

Wit and Wisdom

"Waiter," said a man in the hotel dining room, "there'sa fly in this ice cream."

"Serves him right, sir," replied the waiter. "Let him stay there and freeze to death. He was in the soup yesterday."

Judge—Have you anything to say before sentence is passed?

Burglar—The only thing I'm kickin' about is bein' identified by a man that kep' his head under the bed clothes the whole time. That's not right.

A young married couple were expecting friends, and as they had not got a great deal of money, they sat thinking how to spend the little they had to best advantage.

At last the young man broke the silence. "At any rate," he said, "we shall not want any gas."

"Why?" inquired the young wife.

"Your mother is coming," said he; and again silence reigned.

"Isn't Blower inclined to be just a little boastful?

"Boastful? Well, I guess yes. After a beggar has touched Blower for a nickel, he will tell you that he has just been giving a little dinner to an acquaintance of his."

"We should all leave footprints in the sands of time," quoted the parlor philosopher.

"They would only show that some of us have been going backward," objected the mere man.

"Truly, am I the first girl you ever kissed?"

"You are, my darling, and it makes me happy to hear you say I am the first man who ever kissed you."

"If I am the first how does it happen you do it so expertly?"

"And if I am the first how do you know whether I do it expertly or not?"

Character Analysis.

"Bliggins goes around asking so much advice that he never accomplishes anything."

"Yes," replied the man whose mind lingers in the past; "not enough initiative and too much referendum."

The judge's five-year-old son John had been naughty when his parents were having company and had been reproved. That night when his mother went to hear John say his prayers she suggested that he ask God to teach his parents to bring him up properly.

John was quite penitent and prayed humbly: "Please God, teach mother how to make me a good boy." He paused for a moment, then added thoughtfully, "And father, too, if you can do anything with him."

A constabulary sergeant in an Irish town finding an ass at large took it and drove it to the "pound." On the way he met a resident, who, wondering at the sergeant driving an ass, stared at him so hard that the sergeant said:

"Well, are you sorry I'm bringing your brother to jail?"

"Oh, I see," said the mna; "is that all? I thought he was going to join the police."

LOCAL NEWS IN GENERAL

Dr. J. D. Deyell, V.S., V.D., formerly of Millbrook, Ont., and recently returned from overseas service with the Imperial Army Veterinary Corps, has opened an office at 135 Lansdowne Street. Twenty-five years' experience. Day and night calls answered promptly. Equine dentistry a specialty. Phone 1281

EXPERIENCE HELPS

The experience of Mr. F. W. Doan with the commercial department of the Bell Telephone Co. arranging systems should make him a valuable member of the Board of Education.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 16 Hunter Street.

NEW ORGAN INSTALLED.

A beautiful pipe organ costing $2,500 has been installed in the Tweed Methodist Church. Rev. C. H. Coon, a former pastor of Mark St. Church, is pastor.

BURIED SIDE BY SIDE.

Moving Tale of Two Irishmen of Different Faiths.

It is in a cemetery in France, one of those cemeteries which have sprung up during the war, and where the graves are quite new. All around the little crosses bear the names of men belonging to many British regiments, and here and there are French names, under which are inscribed the words: "Mort pour La France." Two graves yawn open, waiting to receive the dead, and close by a group of officers stand, while the men who have made the graves are in the background, leaning on their spades. A little way off an old man and some women are busy saving a field of corn, and the whirring noise of a reaping machine sounds drowsily on the air.

From a greater distance comes the dull roar of guns, and overhead an aeroplane circles like some giant bird. The group of officers by the graveside includes two chaplains, one of the Church of England, and one a Catholic priest. They have come to bury two young officers, both Irish, but of a different faith. Presently a little procession arrives—a motor wagon, looking strangely incongruous in the cemetery, and behind it marches a little company of the men belonging to the regiment of the dead officers. They stand around the opened earth like statues, their faces set in an expression of pain. Some of their eyes are filled with tears, for they knew well and loved their leaders—young, indeed, they were—merely boys.

Reverently the bodies are lifted to the grave—there are no coffins here. The remains are swathed in the ordinary brown army blankets, and so are lowered into the grave side by side, shoulder to shoulder, just as in life the boys had lain in their rude shelter in the trenches for many a day and many a night. The chaplains read their respective burial services, "Ashes to ashes and dust to dust." The soil of France is shovelled into the graves, and soon the little group of mourners melts away.

As the men of the dead officers' regiment march off they gaze up reverently as they pass by the great crucifix in the centre of the cemetery. It is to them not alone a symbol of the hope of salvation, but a symbol of the glory and majesty of death when it is suffered for the sake of others. And so the soldiers pass along, more reconciled to the loss of their two young leaders, for they certainly did suffer death bravely and most willingly for the sake of others—for the sake of those at home in the country they loved.

One of these gallant young officers was twenty-two, the other but twenty-one. They left Ireland with hearts overflowing with the joy of life and with that glorious spirit of youth which fills the world with a seemingly never-fading beauty and happiness. One boy left his university and the other the [illegible] of a great profession, and they went to the trenches of France, and they met death absolutely without fear.

And thus are thousands of all ranks dying every month! In the cemetery, where the writer stood by the graves of these two boys, he counted in one tiny corner alone eleven white crosses newly erected. Each of these crosses bore the name of a young Irish officer, and in but one instance alone was the recorded age more than twenty-five years.

These young men came from the North of Ireland and from the South with the famous Irish regiments, the Connaught Rangers, the Dublin Fusiliers, the Inniskillings, or the Royal Irish. They held different views on politics and public affairs, but they were knitted and welded into one by a common cause. They fought side by side for their country; they died side by side, and in this little French cemetery, with the great cross, they lie side by side in their last long sleep.

And so to-day do Irishmen rest by all the fields in the long-stretched battle-lines of Europe. Would that all those who still may harbor bitterness and rancor against any of their own countrymen in Ireland might stand for even one moment and read the cross inscriptions in the cemeteries of France! Those inscriptions would tell of the glorious and eternal union of brave Protestant and Catholic and Northern and Southern Irish hearts!

Chinese Army a Menace.

China's toughest problem now is how to disband the army raised during the revolution. The Government, hard pressed for money, will have to raise at least $30,000,000 to pay off the 800,000 men under arms; and unpaid soldiers are always a menace in China. Coolies regard military service as a very desirable occupation. Once enlisted it is difficult to persuade them to retire. They riot and become extremely troublesome if an attempt be made to disband them without liberal payment. The commanding officers are frequently as mercenary as the soldiers. When the Government fails to give its soldiers what they regard as adequate pay, the troops frequently become bandits and loot. Each province has its own military governor and a distinct military organization, presumably under control of the Pekin authorities, but actually independent in most cases. Consequently the Pekin Government is forced to deal very diplomatically with the military organizations in the provinces, particularly in the remote provinces.

Honored by Italian King.

Lieut.-Colonel J. H. Fessenden, son of Mr. Cortez Fessenden, science master at the Collegiate Institute at Peterboro, has been appointed Commander of the Order of the Crown, Italy, by King Victor Emmanuel, and has been presented with a parchment diploma by the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs. The decoration is in recognition of his services on behalf of the Serbians during the forced retreat from their country. It is a white enamelled cross on a gold base, with a crown and eagle, and is worn on a broad ribbon of red and white. Colonel Fessenden, who is an R.M.C. graduate, has been in the British army for sixteen years, and has served in all the colonies. He is now in France. A younger brother, Lieut. Vivien Fessenden, is a prisoner of war in Germany.

AN UNVEILING AT ST. JOHN'S

TABLET ERECTED TO MEMORY OF LT. GORDON STANLEY FIFE.

The unveiling of the engraved brass mural tablet placed in St. John's Church to the memory of Lt. Gordon Stanley Fife, P.P.C.L.I., born in Peterborough Feb. 15, 1889, killed in action June 2, 1916, took place last night during the Evensong of St. Thomas, apostle and martyr, whose festival is held on Dec. 21. In addition to the name and date, the following verse from Brooke's poems is inscribed on the tablet:

> "There laid the world away, poured out the red,
> Sweet wine of youth; gave up the years to be,
> Of work and joy, and that unhoped serene
> That men call age, and those that would have been
> Their sons, they gave their immortality."

The beautiful liturgical evensong over, a procession of white-robed choristers singing Wesley's hymn, "Let Saints on Earth in Concert Sing," preceded Canon Cornish to the tablet, who gave an inspiring address, pointing out a lesson from the life and death of Lieut. Fife. At the ascription, "In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost," Mr. W. F. Johnston unveiled the tablet by removing the Canadian flag. The dedication prayer was as follows: O Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the living God, bless what we do in unveiling this tablet to the memory of Gordon Stanley Fife, Thy servant; direct and bless our efforts by Thy Divine presence as we gather together in Thy house of prayer to dedicate this memorial to the honor of Thy great name and service. Accept, O Lord, this service at our hands, and bless it with such success as may most tend to Thy glory, and the inspiration of those who see it, through Jesus Christ our blessed Lord and Saviour. The Benediction was then pronounced and the procession moved to the vestry, while Mr. R. J. Devey softly played on the organ "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth." All during the day and immediately after service people gathered around the tablet, and the inscription thereon appeared to appeal very strongly to them.

Nordheimer Jacobean with Bench to match Price $425.00

THE craftsmen of an earlier day who were responsible for the first Nordheimer Pianos possessed that unique proficiency commonly called genius.

Their successors of to-day are equally worthy of the tribute we pay to genius. To them has fallen the privilege of developing an ideal. On them has rested the responsibility of delving deeper into the myriad intricacies of the piano-maker's craft. For them has been reserved the honor of producing the present-day

"Gladys," remarked a dear but irresponsible young thing, "I am very much afraid my bank is in a bad way."

"Nonsense!" said the other. "Why, that bank is one of the strongest financial institutions in the country. Where did you get that idea?"

"It's very strange," said Gladys, still unconvinced. "They's just returned a cheque of mine for thirty dollars marked 'No funds.'"

LITERARY RAMBLES

(By F. M. Dela Fosse.)

There are very many different classes of readers in the world; just as many, in fact, as there are classes of literature. Some read along certain specific lines, such as Philosophy, Theology, or Technology, others again read nothing but fiction and the newspapers. But there is a class that indulges in every sort of reading that it can manage to get hold of, and devours with as much relish articles on the Higher Criticism or Palaeontology as it does the latest novel by the popular writer of the day. There is no intention to deal in this article with the merits of all these different branches of literature. People are to be found who would say a good deal against every one of them, and against none so acrimoniously, perhaps, as against Fiction. We are all very prone to do so with Fiction, especially when we find ourselves face to face with a particularly rank specimen of a novel. But, if we set ourselves calmly to lay all the good fiction on one side and all the bad fiction on the other, I think we should find that there was a considerable preponderance in favor of the former. We have to remember also that the reading of fiction is the best means available of obtaining a true perspective of the age in which we live. There is nothing to be compared with it in this particular. We have the authority of no less a person than the late Robert Louis Stevenson for the statement that the most nfluential books and the truest in their influence are works of fiction . . . "they repeat, they rearrange, they clarify the lessons of life, they disengage us from ourselves. . . and they show us the web of experience." But there is a class of reading that is on a totally different plane, viz., Natural Science. This is a study that brings one face to face always with truth. Nature cannot lie, because, as Longfellow once said, "it is a revelation of God." It is a matter that strikes me with the greatest regret that, having had exceptional advantages for many years of studying Nature under many aspects, I allowed such golden opportunities to slip away. It is only within the last few years, when my association with books has brought me so intimately in connection with works dealing with Natural Science, that I have realized how much I have missed in life. Take, for instance, the study of the habits of birds. Ornithology is only one of many branches of Natural Science, and how full of interest it is. In one of Nathaniel Hawthorne's works he says that hens are well worthy of study on account of the rich variety of their manners. He was perfectly right, for anybody who has had anything to do with hens will testify that they not only evince great variety, but also considerable individuality in their manners. And if hens are so interesting, what shall be said of all the wonderful feathered tribe? How can we account for the wonderful faculty that enables the carrier pigeon to return through the pathless sky, hundreds of miles, to its proper home? How shall we account for the migration of birds, or for the marvellous skill displayed in the building of the nest or in hiding from a predatory enemy? Years ago, when hunting for partridges, I observed one flying from a neighboring tree to a thick-branched spruce right above my head. In a few seconds it was followed by a hawk, which also descended into the tree and commenced a wild attempt to locate the whereabouts of the partridge. He must have hopped on every limb of that spruce tree, peering about for his quarry, but his effort was unsuccessful. The bird had become so much part and parcel of the tree that even the keen eyes of the hawk could not discover it. In a few minutes it flew away, and two or three seconds afterwards I had the satisfaction of seeing the partridge fly off too. My regret was that I had been so interested in seeing the bird-hunt that I had utterly forgotten to shoot the hawk. And what a strong maternal instinct there is in birds! Who that has been engaged in duck-hunting has not noticed the beautiful way in which the mother duck will swim right in the way of the hunter to take off his attention from her offspring? Likewise, the partridge, when discovered with her young brood, will fly right at the intruder and do all she can to draw him away from them. Even the most casual observers can tell many tales to illustrate the cleverness and instinct of birds.

A very interesting book that has just been added to the library shelves is one by Frank Chapman, the well-known American ornithologist. The book is entitled "The Travels of Birds," and deals in large measure with the migration of some of the better known American species. It is a book that might well whet the appetite of the bird-lover to know something more concerning them than can be learned from his own cursory observations. It tells of how they prepare for their journey and of the dangers that beset them on their way. It also attempts to solve the problem of why birds travel, and gives valuable information about the day fliers and the night fliers. Perhaps the most interesting chapter is on the Bobolink. The unlearned reader will be thunderstruck to learn that the Arctic Tern flies half way round the earth and back again each year, the distance between its winter and summer home being close on eleven thousand miles. It sees more hours of daylight than any animal on the globe. To quote Mr. Chapman, "At the northern nesting site the midnight sun has already appeared before the birds' arrival, and it never sets during the entire stay at the breeding grounds. During the two months of their sojourn in the Antarctic the birds do not see a sunset, and for the rest of the time the sun dips only a little way below the horizon and broad daylight is continuous. The birds, therefore, have twenty-four hours of daylight for at least eight months in the year, and during the other four months have considerably more daylight than darkness." But, there, enough has been said to show that to anyone interested in birds the book referred to has plenty within its covers to recommend it favorably to his notice.

LT. STUART WRITES.

Lieut. L. J. Stuart, formerly of the 93rd Batt., and now in France, writes to the local Y.M.C.A. general secretary, in which he tells of Lieut. Stewart Laing's death. Lieut Stuart says:

Dear Mr. Meserve: I have received a few Peterborough papers lately and I have read with interest the doings at the good old Peterborough "Y." I also read an account of the campaign that was being launched to secure funds and that was what prompted me to write this letter. I just wanted to let you know in a small way the great work that the Canadian Y.M.C.A. is doing for the boys out here. Before I came out I had heard much about the "Y," but I had no idea of the great amount of good it was doing.

As you know, it is almost impossible for the units to have canteens, owing to the fact that they are moving all the time. The Y.M.C.A. takes the place of these. In every village (and these villages are very numerous) throughout the Canadian corps area there is a branch of the "Y." usually conducted in a large khaki colored tent. Here is sold everything a "Tommy" desires in the way of "eats" and smokes and at remarkably reasonable prices. In connection with all of the larger branches there is a recreation tent, where concerts are held almost nightly. In some of them they even manage to produce a movie show, or, as they are called over here, a cinema. The recreation tent is also used as a writing room,

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought The Joy Of Health After Two Years' Suffering

MADAM LAPLANTE

35 St. Rose St., Montreal. April 4th.

"For over two years I was sick and miserable. I suffered from constant Headaches, and had Palpitation of the Heart so badly that I feared I would die. There seemed to be a lump in my stomach and the Constipation was dreadful. I suffered from Pain in the Back and Kidney Disease.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. After using three boxes, I was greatly improved and twelve boxes made me well. Now I can work all day and there are no Headaches, no Palpitation, no Heart Trouble, no Constipation, no Pain or Kidney Trouble and I feel like a new being—and it was "Fruit-a-tives" that gave me back my health".

Twenty Years Ago

From The Review of Dec. 23, 1896:

Twenty years ago W. H. Moore was nominated for mayor by Adam Hall and Thomas Irwin, and Mayor Yelland was re-nominated by J. H. Metheral and Ben. Armstrong. Two of the other nominees are still in public life. Dr. George Burnham was one of five candidates named for the School Board and John Smith was aspiring to the council in Ashburnham.

EMPTY STOCKINGS.

Oh, mothers in homes that are happy
Where Christmas comes laden with cheer,
Where the children are dreaming already
Of the merriest day in the year,

As you gather your darlings around you
And tell them the "story of old,"
Remember the homes that are dreary!
Remember the hearts that are cold.

And thanking the love that has dowered you,
With all that is dearest and best,
Give freely, that from your abundance
Some bare little life may be blessed.

Oh, go where the stocking hang empty,
Where Christmas is nought but a name,
And give—for the love of the Christ-child.
'Twas to seek such as these that He came.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH.

Christmas Sunday will be a high day at Murray Street Baptist Church. Both services will be in keeping with the thought of the Saviour's coming into the world. The music promises to be equal to anything that has been presented on such an occasion in our city. The choir committee have had one of the pianos tuned to the pipe organ, and both will be used in the services. Among other numbers will be heard "The Anthem Celestial," "God From on High Hath Heard," "Overture to the Shepherds," "The First Christmas Morn," "For Me, My Dear, Dear Country," and a ladies' sixtette will give from the "Holy City" "List Ye, Cherubic Host." At the morning service the Sunday school will join in an early "echo hymn," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." The pastor will preach at both services, and the expectation is that the day will be one of gracious and helpful influences.

All Saints' Church.

There will be two services in All Saints' Church on Christmas Day—8 a.m., celebration of the Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Holy Communion.

A short life and a merry one is the kind undertakers like.

An Arabian Marriage.

Lulua's was an ideal Moslem marriage. Her sisters had been married to old men with other wives. To Lulua's lot had fallen Cousin Abdullah, a promising youth of sixteen, as yet unwedded. The time of the wedding covered many days of festivity.

When finally the night came for the little twelve-year-old girl to be taken to the home of the bridegroom, slave women made the whole town ring with their songs of rejoicing.

Then the doors of the new harem closed on that slight, deeply-veiled figure, not to open again for her until after many years.

Scores of guests came to congratulate the bride during the days following the wedding. They found her seated in her chair like a queen on a throne. She was clothed in the richest silks and satins and laden with the most elaborate golden ornaments and jewels.

Did she meet her guests with smiles and greetings? Allah forbid that she should have been so bold! So modest was she that she never so much as lifted her eyes from the ground. By scarcely a movement did she betray the fact that she was alive.

The guests were taken to see the room fitted out especially for the young wife. They ate the refreshments offered by the women of the groom's family. They exclaimed about the great beauty of the bride, and left calling down the blessings of heaven upon the marriage. "May the couple live to see not only many sons, but many sons of their sons!"

Day after day little Lulua was adorned that she might be beautiful in the eyes of her husband. In the braids of her shining black hair were entwined strings of waxy jasmine flowers. Her small brown feet and hands were decorated with elaborate designs in black. The ornamentation looked like tatooing, but was not permanent. The soles of her feet and her palms were dyed red with henna. A lovely picture Lulua made, her great dark eyes and wistful face framed in the folds of her bright silken draperies.—Eleanor T. Calverley in World Outlook.

A Canadian Authoress.

It may interest admirers of "Beautiful Joe" to know that Miss Margaret Marshall Saunders, the authoress, is a Canadian, having been born in Berwick, N.S., where her father, Rev. E. M. Saunders, D.D., was a Baptist minister. She received part of her education in Scotland and part in France, but returned later to Nova Scotia, where she taught school. The authoress travels extensively, but she regards Toronto as her home and spends a good deal of her time there. That fact may surprise some persons, as Miss Saunders has not courted publicity. She does not show the tendency to parade herself unduly, which has been commented upon so frequently as one of the marked feelings of Canadian literary women and pseudo-literary women.

WHEN BARD WROTE ODE ON HARRY WINCH'S DRESSED BEAVER

Many years ago, when Mr. H. C. Winch had a meat stall in the old arket building, he had among his isplay of Christmas beef and fowl he dressed body of a beaver. The te William Telford, Bard of St. Anrew's Society, happened along and otted down the following lines, hich caused much merriment on at Christmas Saturday. The generus Harry sent the pelt back to his ome in Smith with a choice roast of f for his Christmas dinner.

t is Christmas, yes, but a dark one to me am dead, here I hang, I no longer go free.
o the lake, to the river, to the pond bid adieu.
ere my plump half-skinned body now hangs to your view.

cruel was the trapper that caught and killed me.
Grim Death locks the jaws that cut many a tree,
The house and the dam has been smoothed by my tail,
That your friend Harry Winch now offers for sale.

With a stick on my head, heavy blows he gave me;
How he smiled as my leg from the trap he set free,
And the crowd stands and laughs at my body half dressed.
Though the beaver shines bright in fair Canada's crest.
If the hard-hearted trapper had only but known
That my life was as precious to me as his own,
He would have earned his bread in a different way
And I would be swimming in the water today.

ELECTION NECESSITATED BY MAYOR'S INSOLVENCY

After Two Days' Voting W. A. Scott Was Elected by a Majority of 97 Votes, His Opponent Did Not Wait in Town to Hear the Result.

Way back in 1865, the then town of Peterborough witnessed a rather stormy nomination. The election of a mayor was made necessary by the insolvency of Mayor Percy. The local editors of that day rubbed shoulders on the question of Mayor Perry's right to further act as chief magistrate, and finally a legal decision put the mayor out of office.

Then followed nomination proceedings to find a successor and in a copy of The Spectator of Hamilton, which has just been received in the city, is set down the report of the Peterborough correspondent of that paper.

The election was held on Monday and Tuesday of the next week. On the first day's poll, Mr. Scott was six votes in the lead and at the end of the second day's voting his majority had been increased to 97 votes. The reports adds that his opponent, Mr. Nicholls, was absent in New York.

The report on the nomination proceedings follows:—

We have had quite an exciting time lately in town on account of the insolvency of the mayor. His seat was declared vacant, and last week the clerk issued the necessary notices calling the electors to meet together at the council chamber on Saturday, at the hour of 9 a.m., to nominate a fit and proper person to fill the office of mayor for the remainder of the year. In accordance therewith one hundred people were assemblitd at the hour named. After the meeting had been called to order by the town clerk, Mr. Lawson proposed, and Mr. Toole seconded, Mr. W. A. Scott as a fit and proper person to discharge the duties of mayor. Mr. Lawson said it was unnecessary for him to make a speech on the subject as every person in the town knew Mr. Scott. He was an old business man, a man of undoubted honor and business ability, and, if elected, as he felt certain he would be, would discharge the duties appertaining to the office in a manner creditable to himself and beneficial to the town.

After about an hour's delay, Mr. Wm. Cluxton proposed, and Mr. Robt. Walton seconded, Mr. Robert Nichols as mayor for the remaining portion of the year. Mr. Cluxton made a speech in which he highly eulogized Mr. Nichols as a careful and at the same time a straightforward business man; stated that he had shown considerable tact and ability in the management of his own affairs, and also that he had had considerable experience in municipal matters, having several times occupied a seat at the council board of our town. From this, he expected a great deal from Mr. Nichols, and he believed him the most capable man in the town for the office. He also said it was the intention of the council to abolish the mayor's salary, and also not to allow the mayor to try cases, and arrangements were making with a gentleman to take charge of the police court. After waiting for ten minutes, during which nearly every person left the room, supposing the proceedings at an end, the clerk called for a show of hands, when it was discovered it was a tie, seven hands being held up for each candidate. Mr. Dawson, then, to end the matter, asked for a poll on behalf of Mr. Scott.

The polling commenced today and will undoubtedly end in returning Mr. Scott by a large majority. Mr. Scott is a very popular man. Either of the gentlemen will make a very good head for our municipal body, and Mr. Nichols is certainly what his friend Mr. Cluxton made him appear in his speeches—he is a keen business man and one who has amassed a considerable amount of money, but has not so used it as to render himself by any means a popular candidate.

SHOP EARLY AND OFTEN AT
FRANK L. JENNE'S, Semi-ready Shop

George was our neighbor's boy. He lived about a block from us across a vacant lot; and was hardly out of bed before he wanted to "come over." Our buckwheat cakes and honey were one great attraction.

"Had your breakfast, George?" my father would say, cutting into the honey, with one eye on the lad.

"Yes," the honest little fellow was forced to admit. "Yes, I had my brekfuss, but I jus' got hung-ry a-comin' over."

Intending Boarder: You say a music teacher lives next door? That is not very pleasant.

Landlady: Oh, that's a small matter. He has twelve children, and they make such a noise you can't hear the music.

"Waiter," said the traveller in a railway restaurant, "did you say that I had twenty minutes to wait or that it was twenty minutes to eight?"

"Nayther, sir, Oi said ye had twenty minutes to ate, an' that's all ye did have, for yer train's just gone."

In the Shell Zone

The work is not confined to the villages back of the line, but is also carried on to some extent right up under shell fire. On one occasion at least, when we came out we were given a cup of coffee and a cigarette from a "Y" dugout still within range of the Hun 5.9's. You can imagine what new life it put into all of the fellows, who were so tired they could hardly drag one foot past the other, and still had several miles to go. Although I didn't see it, I have been told of a case that happened up in the Ypres salient, where a shell actually lit in an advanced "Y" dug out.

In this matter we have left the Imperials very much in the shade. They have the Church Army huts, but these are few and far between.

After the war the "Y" will have many supporters that it never had before. Chaps who were never members before the war are the loudest in their praise of the great work that is being done by the association out here.

Lieut. Laing's Death

Poor Stuart Laing was killed the other night. I don't know whether you knew him or not, but he was always a great "Y" worker before the war, and his brother Jack was formerly boy's secretary at Peterborough. I believe Jack is in the work now in some part of Canada.

The circumstances surrounding Stuart's death are particularly sad. He had been out here so long and then for him to be caught as he was. He was quite a distance from the line, standing on a piece of high ground watching a show—the occupying of a crater—that was being put on by the 14th Batt., when he was hit by a stray machine gun bullet. These are quite common, especially where the land back of the line is level, but most of them just hand out nice "blightys."

Well, Mr. Meserve, it won't be long till Christmas, so I will take this opportunity of wishing you and all of my friends in the association a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Indian Economy

MANY careful people have found that Red Rose Tea is very economical—that it yields more cups to the pound. That is because it consists largely of Assam-Indian teas, which are famous for their full-bodied richness and strength. They make Red Rose Tea go farther.

A Social Deadlock.

Little as he was, Edward knew a lot about fathers, especially about his own father, so he approached the difficult question on hand dubiously.

"Father," he said, "John Burton is going to have a birthday party next week and he said he was goin' to invite me. And I've got to take him a present."

"A present?" snorted Edward's father. "What for?"

"Because I must," said Edward. "All the kids take presents."

"That's all nonsense," declared father. "Every day or two it is a present here or a present there. If you can't be invited without taking a present you'd better not go."

Edward made no reply. The next day his father regretted his hasty words to his unhappy-looking little son.

"Edward," he said, "I bought a couple of books tonight for you to take to John's party."

"It's too late now, father," said Edward, gloomily. "I licked him today so he wouldn't invite me."

Lots of men will tell you how to get rich, but they haven't time to explain why they are still poor.

MARKET PRICES

The Christmas market was a very large one so far as the upstairs department was concerned. From eight o'clock the farmers' wives began arriving with fowl of all kinds, and it was a surprise that there were so many turkeys and geese left after the market of last Saturday and Wednesday.

Prices for turkeys took a slight drop owing to the demand for the outside markets falling off and the local dealers had a good supply on hand. Some of the choice turkeys were readily picked up at 35c per pound, but the common kind and the older birds dropped as low as 28c.

Geese sold at 22c to 24c per lb. for the best and the ordinary market goose could be bought at 18c to 20c per lb.

Chickens of good quality for roasting were scarce. There were plenty of common barnyard fowl and these could be bought for 90c to $1 a pair, while a good choice rooster brought $1.30 to $1.25.

Ducks were not plentiful and sold for 25c lb., or $1.10 to $1.50 each.

Eggs were scarce and sold at 60c to 65c per dozen.

Butter of good quality sold for 45c per lb., while a few baskets sold at 43c.

Goose feathers were on sale at 50c lb.

Home-knit socks of the grey and white colors sold at 50c to 60c per pair.

There is no change in the prices of other commodities.

Hogs remain unchanged for next week at $11.75 for local delivery.

HORSE MARKET

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—There was much more activity in the horse trade in Toronto this week. Officials at the Repository reported that nearly 200 remounts had been secured by French Government buyers at the daily inspections held there during the week. These inspections are continued this week, and fairly good results are being secured. It is understood that no change has been made in the price of horses being taken by the French inspectors. The car-lot trade is also fairly active, with three loads of mares being sent to the West last week, and one load of blocks and chunks to Montreal. Local requirements are still more than nominal; there is the usual light turnover of express, wagon and carting horses.

Peterborough, Dec. 1, 1916.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.
N.B.— Unauthorised publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

Uncle Hiram—If they kin send submarines over nothing kin prevent a Zeppelin coming next. Perhaps, after all, 'twouldn't pay to shingle the house this fall.

EDGAR WORTH TAKES SEAT; EX-ALD. GREEN STEPS OUT

There will be contests for aldermanic honors in the South, East and possibly the North Ward, acording to the forecast over the field as The Review goes to press.

In the South Ward both of the candidates. Ald. Edgar and W. H. Taylor, have qualified.

In the West Ward Mr. Edgar Worth has qualified and is practically elected, as Mr. G. Walter Green has stated that he is not a candidate.

In the North Ward, neither of the candidates—Ald. McIntyre nor ex-Ald. J. G. Graham—have qualified and friends of the latter stated that every effort was being used to have him sign his qualification papers.

Both candidates in East City, Ald. Evans and J. H. Smith, have signed the necessary documents, and a battle is on.

There is not any likelihood that any of the nominees for the Board of Education will drop out so there will be a lively contest for the four seats.

The hour for withdrawing and for qualifying is 9 o'clock tonight.

SEA RISKS ARE RAISED

EL PASO, Texas, Dec. 23. — Unconfirmed reports that Torreon had been captured by Villa's forces were forwarded to Washington by government agents early today.

CONTENTS OF CAN FATAL TO TEN-YEAR-OLD LAD

Howard Clarke Died Before Doctor Arrived.

Howard Clarke, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clarke, 468 Park street, died last night at the family home after being ill only a short time. S. J. Clarke of Corbyville, the lad's grandfather, who was called to the city this morning, told a reporter that early yesterday evening the boy was given some canned tomatoes to eat and he was seized with pains in his stomach. The mother gave him hot cocoa, and the lad vomited and appeared to be very sick. The father went in search of a doctor, but before Dr. Malcolm McCulloch and Dr. Greer arrived the little sufferer passed away.

A search for the empty can, which apparently had been thrown away by the deceased, was made, but no trace of it could be found. The parents are heartbroken over the death of their son, who was their only child.

A funeral service will be held at the family home Sunday night at 8:30, and the remains will be sent to Corbyville for interment on Monday.

Inquest Opened.

This morning at Belleghem's undertaking rooms Dr. Greer opened an inquest. The body was viewed by the jury and the inquest was adjourned to Monday, January 8th, in the city council chamber.

The personnel of the jury is: W. J. Stacey, foreman, J. E. Firth, H. Beal, Wm. Menzies, A. Brown, S. Houlihan, T. Borland, R. Sutherland, W. H. Lytle, A. Guerin, J. Malane, and E. White.

ASSAILANT OF INSPECTOR STEWART ADMITTED TO BAIL

County Magistrate Langley remanded James Hodgins until next Wednesday morning for trial on a charge of assaulting an officer in the discharge of his duty.

The defendant, it is alleged, abused License Inspector Stewart and when placed under arrest caused bodily harm to the inspector.

Defendant was admitted to $250 cash bail.

AN EIGHT HOUR DAY AWARDED SWITCHMEN

INCREASE OF FIVE CENTS AN HOUR FOR FIREMEN AND HELPERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—An eight-hour day with straight pro-rata time for overtime is granted to the Switchmen's Union by the arbitration board in its decision today on the switchmen's controversy with the railroads.

The award give an increase of five cents per hour for both foremen and helpers.

PTE. STUART LANGFORD AWARDED DISTINGUISHED CONDUCT MEDAL

Bandmaster Wm. Peryer of the 39th band, writing to Mrs. Peryer, says Pte. Stuart Langford, a former member of the Temple Band, who enlisted in the 38th Batt. and is now in France serving as a stretcher bearer, has been awarded the distinguished conduct medal for bringing in a wounded general under shell fire.

Pte. Stuart Langford is a former employe of the Times Printing Co.

SUITABLE HOLIDAY GIFTS FOR ANXIOUS CITIZENS

Stockings of Mayor Duffus, Ald. Dobbin and Commissioner Hicks Already Bursting With Fullness---What Other Public Officials Would Like to Get From Santa Claus.

Six candidates for the School Board and five for seats in Council have their stockings already hung in the chimney corner and are anxiously waiting for Santa Claus to drop into them some Christmas token. It required a gunny-sack rather than an ordinary article of footwear to hold all the favors that the patron saint of the holiday season has brought to Mayor Duffus, and that capacious receptacle is filled to the brim and bursting at the sides. Ald. Dobbin has nothing more to ask for, and Mr. R. Hicks, too, has already received what he must have been looking for all these months.

But there are a number of others who are on the anxious seat, men seeking office and others already in place who are prone to worry themselves by looking a year ahead. Appropriate Christmas gifts for candidates, office holders and other public men would embrace the folowing list:

Ald. McIntyre—Fortifications and artillery to keep trespassers out of his aldermanic preserves.

Ex-Ald. Green — Two bows to match the number of strings he has for the one already in his possession.

Ald. Evans—Plans for a high bridge at Hunter street and a street car system for the section of the city which he represents.

Ald. Edgar—A commission form of government that would do away with the turmoil of these biennial aldermanic elections.

Chief Thompson—A pillow and fancy counterpane for that new couch at the station.

Chief Howard—Motor trucks for the Fire Department.

Detective Newhall—A sewage disposal plant somewhere out in the wilderness.

F. W. Doan—Telphone connection with every voter in the city.

John Smith—One more chance. . .

G. N. Gordon—An injunction to restrain council from taking liberties with the salaries of city officials.

Other city officials who suffered—An embargo on either the rebate or bonus system and an assurance of a straight salary in the future.

Ald. Duncan—Either one of those nominees as a colleague for 1917.

Supt. McCann—A transfer system that would carry him out of all his troubles.

A. A. Fowler—An opportunity to test the eyesight and improve the vision of the entire electorate.

F. D. Kerr—A national government.

R. R. Hall—A Federal nomination without frills.

Liberal Party in East Peterboro'—A standard-bearer.

Ald. Langford—A modern treatise on the art of agriculture.

North End Resident—A chart of the street railway system with a guide for passengers from that vicinity.

Our Evening Contemporary — A ready reckoner computing space rates from four cents an inch to anything the traffic will bear.

The Ministerial Association — An immaculate secular press.

BODY FOUND IN CISTERN

ORDER FROM LINDSAY LED TO DISCOVERY IN HOUSE AT KITCHENER.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

KITCHENER, Dec. 23.—The body of James Wing, aged 69, who disappeared Dec. 11, was found this morning in a cistern in the cellar of a vacant house, whose owner sent word from Lindsay to a neighbor to go in and turn off the water.

Wing's hat and coat were found in the cellar and a box stood beside the cistern. The police were summoned and cut the ice in the cistern and found the body.

MAYOR TRIES TO TO HURRY 93RD BANDSMEN HOME

WIRES DEPARTMENT REQUESTING THAT MEN REACH HERE FOR CHRISTMAS.

The relatives of the men of the 93rd Band who reached Halifax at the first of the week on their return to Canada, and other returned soldiers en route home, will be glad to know that Mayor Duffus has wired the department at Ottawa making the request that all the men be given the opportunity to reach the city for Christmas.

Mrs. John James, 154 Rubidge St., had a letter from her husband, who wrote that the band gave a concert in Quebec on Wednesday evening and that the men expected to reach Peterborough Friday night or Saturday morning. The bandsmen may be on their way home and are likely to reach the city this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

Must Not Publish Shipping Records

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—An official order was issued in London last night discontinuing the publication of all shipping reports except the announcements of casualties.

$400 DISTRIBUTED TO THE CRESSMAN CO. LTD. EMPLOYES

To-day the employes of The Cressman Company each received an extra envelope. Every employe, both regular and those employed as extra help for the holiday season, was remembered. About four hundred dollars was distributed to help make the Christmas season brighter.

46 SHEEP WORRIED

Six Dead and Others Are Dying.

Michael Perdue of R. R. No. 2, Ennismore, and George Boats, of the same township, have suffered a heavy loss in sheep, having had 46 sheep worried by dogs, some of them being killed. Six are dead and others are in a dying condition. The dogs were caught in the act of worrying the sheep and one canine was shot.

The owners of the dogs are known and will likely be called upon to settle for the loss to the owners of the sheep.

LES DARCY IS IN NEW YORK

AUSTRALIAN PUG. TO MEET CARPENTIER AND OTHERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Les Darcy, Australian pugilistic champion, arrived here today after a circuitous journey from home, and within 24 hours will be matched to meet Carpentier, Dillon or Miske.

SEARCH FOR BODIES

All of the debris in the boiler room of the Quaker Oats ruins has been removed and it remains now to get the mass of twisted iron and steel away before further bodies of the missing men are found.

The company expect to have an acetelyne plant from Toronto at work tomorrow to cut away the iron.

GOOD WORK OF THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION

NURSES' REPORTS FOR THE MONTHS OF OCTOBER AND NOVEMBER.

The following reports on the work carried on by the nurses of the Peterborough Health Association will be of interest to every citizen and should be the means of emphasizing the importance of the association's work in behalf of the sick and afflicted.

In October there were 20 general patients, 11 new patients, a total of 139 visits paid, the number of paid visits being 64 and the free visits 75. In the tubercular work, 9 patients were reported and 8 visits. The total visits paid for general and tubercular patients was 236.

In November there were 27 general patients and 163 visits paid, of which 16 were paid visits and 146 free visits. There were 23 tubercular cases and 120 visits paid.

WILSON'S NOTE DICTATED BY FEAR OF SUBMARINES

German Threat to Send Submersibles to American Waters to Attack Sea Traffic.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 23.—The Petit Parisien says the Allies' answer to the German peace proposals is almost finished. It is rather long and sets forth clearly the "grievances of the Allies and the crushing responsibilities of the Central Empires." The Journal and The Gaulois express the belief that President Wilson's note was dictated by the fear that the Germans would carry out their reported intention of sending 125 submarines to American waters to accomplish the total interruption of sea traffic.

GERMANS REPULSED IN CHAMPAGNE DISTRICT

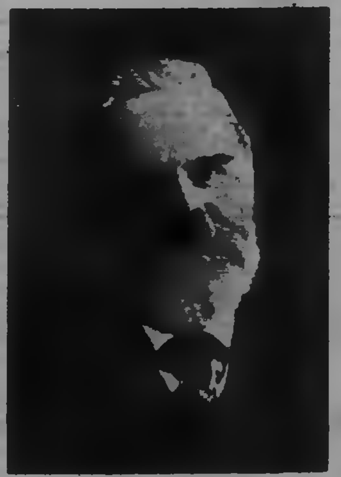
Enemy Artillery Active Near Chambrettes in Hardaumont Region.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Official statement: In the Champagne district, after a spirited bombardment, a detachment of the enemy endeavored last night to approach our lines to the west of Auberive, but were easily repulsed.

The night passed quietly on the remainder of the front, except in the region of Hardaumont, and near Chambrettes, where the artillery of the enemy showed considerable activity.

MONAGHAN NOMINATION TOOK ON OLD TIME FORM



REEVE MATHISON
Re-elected by acclamation to lead council of Havelock.

Clerk Left the Chair Till Order Was Restored.

"The hottest nominations in years" seems to be the popular verdict on the proceedings at the Town Hall in North Monaghan yesterday afternoon. It is said that at one stage of the verbal engagement, hostilities reached such a stage that the township clerk left the chair and refused to further preside over the proceedings until the combatants cooled down. Somebody mentioned "sewage disposal plant," and the battle was on.

H. B. Rye and R. A. Dobbin threw "Jack Johnsons," "hand grenades," and other munitions at one another, but neither fell wounded. The small audience of spectators also escaped.

There were two camps. The farming element wanted the old Council retained, while the townspeople would have nothing but a change. What the result will be nobody knows.

The line-up of candidates would make it appear that there is danger in the air. The status of John Williams will be investigated by the township solicitor. Mr. Williams was nominated for the Council, but it is stated that he is disqualified for office by reason of his owning the township dumping grounds.

The nominations were:—

For Reeve—H. B. Rye, proposed by Alex. Morton and J. D. Manley; John McIntosh, proposed by T. N. Hunter and Wm. Lang.

For Deputy-Reeve—Wm. Robson, J. H. Bell and R. A. Dobbin

For Councillors—R. B. Rye, J. H. Bell, R. A. Dobbin, John Williams and Thomas Henry.

The proceedings opened at one o'clock and lasted till nearly five o'clock.

ENTERTAINMENT IN OPERA HOUSE

CHRISTMAS DAY AFTERNOON FOR SOLDIERS' FAMILIES.

Arrangements have been completed for the entertainment in the Opera House Christmas afternoon, to the families of the men on service and in England getting ready to take the field. The doors will be open about 1.45 p.m., in order to allow of getting seated in time. The program will mence at 2.30.

It is expected that Capt. Burnham may reach the city by the afternoon of Christmas Day, and if so will be asked to make a brief address to the audience. Mayor Duffus, as president of the Patriotic Fund Association, will extend a greeting to those present. As the program of pictures will be extremely interesting and very ample, it is not the intention to take up time otherwise.

ALD. EDGAR'S ADDRESS

Ald. Edgar will address the electors through The Review on Tuesday, giving an account of his stewardship as representative from the South Ward. Ald. Edgar is confident that his work in the Council will stand him in good stead at the elections on Jan. 1.

NO CONTEST AT MILLBROOK AND MANVERS

CAVAN ALSO GIVES COUNCIL BOARD ANOTHER TERM.

REEVE WATERMAN WILL HAVE OPPOSITION.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 23. — Reeve R. J. Doak, who will be a candidate for the Wardenship, was elected reeve by acclamation at the nominations yesterday, as were [illegible] members of the council, who are: J. H. Bingham, Geo. Burnham, G. Sayles and James Eastcott.

For Cavan, Reeve A. H. Henderson was returned unopposed. Dep. Reeve H. Baptie won by acclamation, and no opposition was forthcoming for Councillors F. E. Clark, James McCamus and W. E. Balls.

In South Monaghan, Reeve Waterman will be opposed by John Green.

The reeve and councillors of Manvers were returned by acclamation.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1916

THE VOICE HEARD IN RAMA.

Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem and all the coasts thereof from two years old and under according to the time of which he had diligently enquired of the wise men.

Then was fulfilled that which was spoken of by Jeremy the prophet, saying,

In Rama there was a voice heard, lamentation and weeping and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children and would not be comforted because they are not.—Matthew II. 16-18.

The first Christmas Day, the event designed to bring peace on earth and goodwill among all the people of the earth, was marked by one of the darkest and foulest tragedies the world has ever known, a tragedy, too, that was inspired, as so many crimes against humanity have been, by the unholy ambition of an earthly ruler. Prophets had foretold the birth of the Christ, Who was to be King of the Jews, and a blazing star marked the place of His nativity and drew the wisdom of the eastern astrologers to His cradle. The King born in Bethlehem on that auspicious day, even if His birthplace was a stable, was a King in very truth though His principality was not of this earth.

But Herod feared that an earthly sovereign would rise up and lead the Jewish people back to freedom. Foiled in his craft to be guided to the illustrious Babe, to worship, as he professed, but in reality to slay, he sent out soldiers who killed all the children under two years to be found in Bethlehem and in the country round about, hoping thus to make sure that the Rival Whom he feared was removed from His pathway.

The anniversary of the first Christmas day for the past three years has been darkened by a crime like unto that which the lustful and barbarous Herod committed. Kingly ambition, too, has been the moving cause of it all. A monster of iniquity, clothed in royal purple and wielding a sceptre, has risen up in the world, a Herod re-incarnated. The blood of helpless babes stains his sword and soils his unsanctified hands. Each year adds to the list of his victims.

Year by year the voice heard in Rama grows louder, a new Rachel joins in the chorus of lamentation for those they will never see again because they are not. The garbs of mourning are more in evidence, every day a message of grief comes to some Canadian home.

And Peterborough stands with uncovered head among those who grieve. The past year has brought sorrow to many a home in this city, to cottage and mansion alike. Day by day the roll of death grows. This Christmas Day will bring woe instead of joy to many a household as the family gathers around a chair that will be vacant forever. Father, son, brother, or lover, it may be, but they will never join their friends again to celebrate the day when peace instead of mortal strife was heralded to the world by an angelic choir.

But let us not despair. The fairest days follow the wildest nights of tempest. Peace comes after pain. The dark cloud that settled over the tragedy on Calvary was the forerunner of a brighter light to humanity than it had ever known. The agony through which the world is passing today may be but the travail attending the birth of a new and better civilization.

MR. GORDON'S CHANCES.

IF MR. G. N. GORDON, city solicitor, who is anxious to be re-elected as a member of the Board of Education, ever pauses to ask himself what his chances are, he should have no difficulty in replying to his own question. He can, in short, read his answer in the stars.

Mr. Gordon was elected two years ago after one of the most spectacular campaigns ever conducted in this city. He was defeated in the election a year ago to all intents and purposes, although he was not required to face the electors personally. His man Friday, his right bower in the little game of reform which he set going, his faithful ally all through the Board's sessions of 1915, Mr. John Smith, was defeated when he appealed to the voters for another lease of public life. Away back in 1914 it was generally understood that Mr. Smith furnished Mr. Gordon with munitions for those guns that exploded with such loud reports during his campaign. The heavy artillery, however, proved considerable of a disappointment when it had a chance to operate to some purpose if the claims of the man behind the gun were based on solid facts. If Mr. Smith was not really responsible for what was after all nothing more serious than a pyrotechnic display, then he has been grossly belied by a good many who profess to have inside information. At all events he paid the penalty for his associations when the votes were counted in the School Board election a year ago.

No one who knows Mr. Gordon doubts his ability to fill any office in the city. There is no question about his attainments, and he is a man who persists in making his way in spite of al human obstacles. The only objection to him is that he is cast in somewhat the same mold as the pooh-bah of India. He has an excessive desire to fill more than one office at a time. Inordinate ambition has proved the undoing of many an otherwise exemplary personage. When Julius Caesar developed that weakness the Roman populace rose in their wrath and took his life, even Brutus, his best friend, inserting a dagger between his ribs. They could stand for a leader, but not for an autocrat.

The law says distinctly that no city official shall sit as a member of the School Board. But Mr. Gordon maintains that drawing a salary of $1000 a year for looking after the legal affairs of Peterborough does not make him a city official in the meaning of the Act, or something to that general effect.

When Council, intent upon retrenchment, last spring shaved the salary of every city official drawing in excess of $750 a year, Mr. Gordon's remuneration was included. He accepted the reduced cheque every month. If he did not regard himself as a city official in reality, the majority of the people will wonder that, good lawyer as he is and with the legal talent that he could call to his aid, he did not put up a fight to prove to the aldermen that his emolument was immune.

Of course, Mr. Gordon, with other officials, got the amount of the reduction in a lump sum at the end of the year, but he had no means of anticipating such aldermanic generosity.

THE CITY'S FINANCIAL OUTLOOK.

WHEN MAYOR DUFFUS addressed the electors in the council chamber after his election by acclamation yesterday he promised that retrenchment and economy would be his program for 1917 just as it has been throughout the year so near its close. But the Mayor, however, was careful to point out that there is little or no hope for a lower tax rate in the immediate future. The debenture debt must be provided for year by year, and of this there will be no considerable amount wiped out until 1920, when the total then cleaned up will be $80,202.20.

The debenture debt was increased by $100,000 during the year, $60,000 of this being for the Patriotic Fund, and this must be taken into consideration when the rate is struck for 1917. The sewage disposal plant, the building of which is mandatory upon the city, will mean another financial burden. For five years after 1920 debentures mature slowly until in 1925 the amount wiped out will be nearly one hundred thousand dollars.

There are expenses in sight that cannot be avoided if Peterborough is to prosper and hold its place in the procession. Necessary equipment for the Fire Department will cost heavily, but there is always the hope that increases in assessed value of property will keep the tax rate down to normal.

OPENING THE TRENT CANAL.

WHEN CAPT. BURNHAM returns from Europe he will find important public work awaiting him. It is proposed to have a deputation, headed by Mayor Duffus, Captain Burnham, M.P., J. E. Sexsmith, M.P. for East Peterborough, these with any other influential citizens who may care to join, to proceed to Ottawa to induce the Government to open the Trent Canal to Lake Ontario during the coming season.

The opening of the canal is especially desirable at this time. If the Quaker Oats Company are to be induced to rebuild their plant in this city, the question of transportation must be dealt with. The company, as all know, are anxious to get ingress and egress by water to their plant. When the canal is opened Peterborough will become in effect a lake port, and there will be competition in transportation between the boat lines and the railways.

The stretch of navigable river from the company's ruined plant to the canal will not be available for traffic unless a high bridge is built at Hunter street, and this is a matter in which the city has a double interest as it involves not only the Quaker Oats Company but the prosperity of Ashburnham. If the Government is willing to assume a considerable portion of the expense of erecting such a bridge, the company that means so much to the welfare of this city will be given another inducement to rebuild here, and the East Side will be benefited by the extension of the street railway system across the river.

The Trent Canal is all but completed as far as Lake Ontario. Peterborough will not derive all possible advantages from this public improvement until the Otonabee is made available for navigation by the construction of a new bridge, at Hunter street.

THREE ELECTIONS BY ACCLAMATION.

THE ELECTION of Mayor Duffus was so much of a foregone conclusion that all congratulations must be somewhat belated. His friends had felicitated him upon his chances in that regard before nomination day. The Mayor has every reason to feel gratified over the expression of the confidence that the public have extended him. The majority of mayors get a second term, but not all of them go back without a contest.

When a member of the Public Utilities Commission comes up for re-election, it appears to be becoming more and more the popular move to return him without opposition. Mr. R. Hicks' re-election by acclamation establishes no new precedent in this department. The commission has given the city a businesslike administration of the utilities in which they are so deeply interested, and this seems to be understood and appreciated generally.

Ald. Dobbin has the distinction of being the only member of the Council to get a free pass back to office. The senior alderman from the Centre Ward sits up nights planning for the welfare of the city and shaping his course. He is a man possessed of a wide range of knowledge of city affairs outside the usual aldermanic routine, and his re-election is a compliment richly deserved.

CRYING TO THE GOVERNMENT.

IN HIS ADDRESS in Chicago, Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, deplored the growing tendency of American business men to seek government assistance. "Viewed from one angle," he said, "there has been a distinct loss of independence, or self-reliance, and a growing tendency to lean upon governmental action, to be influenced by governmental attitude, to regard legislation as a panacea and to believe that a bill in Congress can do what we used to think required individual initiative, work, judgment, sacrifice and thrift to accomplish."

Leaning on the State for aid is not a weakness confined to our American cousins. In Canadian cities it is now next to impossible to prevail on an industry to locate their already established plant or to embark in a new line without special and substantial concessions and financial inducements.

The consumer, too, is prone to regard himself as the ward of the State. When the price of eggs goes up he is inclined to believe that there is something wrong in Denmark, and he beseeches the government to do something for his relief.

The son of a man of unlimited wealth will never amount to the proverbial hill of beans if his every want is supplied by his parent and he is never obliged to make any exertion on his own behalf. Individuals, too, may be made as plastic as putty if the designing politician wheedles them out of the self-reliance which should characterize every man.

THE STARS ON CHRISTMAS NIGHT

The stars that shine on Christmas night
Beyond all other stars are bright.
For in their brightness shines restored
That one great star whose light outpoured
Has led all nations to the Lord:
And all night long with solemn voice
They cry again: Rejoice! Rejoice!

The wonder of the Christmas dawn
No other morn has yet put on.
Oh, wan white radiance, breaking slow
On fields and woodlands wrapped in snow.
On the worn cities and their woe;
Oh, holy message breathed again!
"Peace on earth, good will toward men."

And now unto the new-born King
Bring we our lowly offering.
Lord, take ourselves, our hopes, our fears,
Our griefs, our memories, our tears,
The harvest of our troubled years;
We bring them all to Thee, to Thee,
And lo, once burdened, we are free.

And lo, our faith burns clear and bright
As shines the stars on Christmas night;
And lo, our life turns, deep and wide
As some great torrents' force untried,
Toward all mankind at Christmas-tide.
Rejoice! Rejoice! 'tis Christmas morn,
For in our hearts the Christ is born.

A CALL TO NATIONAL SERVICE

The Speakers' Patriotic League is initiating a campaign, the object being to help in carrying out successfully the project for the National Registration which is to be taken during the first week in January, under the auspices of the Dominion National Service Board. The League is asking for the co-operation of the representative patriotic committees throughout Ontario, and in a letter which is being sent out to the officers of these committees the following statement is made:

"While there may be differences of opinion as to the best method of taking the census, there can be no two opinions as to the desirability of its succeeding to the greatest extent possible. Everybody who has the welfare of the country at heart agrees that our great need at present is the organization of our resources. Some favor one method of accomplishing this, and some another, but all wish to attain the same result. We find that the method has already been decided on, and we must, therefore, bend our energies to bring about the best results possible. The crisis is grave, the country needs the information asked for on the cards to be sent out, the Government has required it, and everyone must hope that it will be forthcoming without any further steps. We, therefore, feel that it is incumbent upon us to make as good a showing as possible in our Province, and we trust that the showing will be as good as it was in the campaigns for patriotic funds and recruiting. We recognize that as any success attained in reference to those campaigns was only possible through the splendid work done by the local committees, so any success which we may hope for in this campaign can be attained only through the same source. We are, therefore, again calling for your assistance."

The letter goes out under the signature of Sir John S. Hendrie, the honorary president of the League, Sir John M. Gibson, Hon. W. H. Hearst, Sir Edmund Osler, Mr. N. W. Rowell, and Col. G. A. Sweny, vice-presidents, and Mr. Justice Masten, chairman of the Executive.

THE VOICE HEARD IN RAMA.

Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem and all the coasts thereof from two years old and under according to the time of which he had diligently enquired of the wise men.

Then was fulfilled that which was spoken of by Jeremy the prophet, saying,

In Rama there was a voice heard, lamentation and weeping and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children and would not be comforted because they are not.—Matthew II. 16-18.

The first Christmas Day, the event designed to bring peace on earth and goodwill among all the people of the earth, was marked by one of the darkest and foulest tragedies the world has ever known, a tragedy, too, that was inspired, as so many crimes against humanity have been, by the unholy ambition of an earthly ruler. Prophets had foretold the birth of the Christ, Who was to be King of the Jews, and a blazing star marked the place of His nativity and drew the wisdom of the eastern astrologers to His cradle. The King born in Bethlehem on that auspicious day, even if His birthplace was a stable, was a King in very truth though His principality was not of this earth.

But Herod feared that an earthly sovereign would rise up and lead the Jewish people back to freedom. Foiled in his craft to be guided to the illustrious Babe, to worship, as he professed, but in reality to slay, he sent out soldiers who killed all the children under two years to be found in Bethlehem and in the country round about, hoping thus to make sure that the Rival Whom he feared was removed from His pathway.

The anniversary of the first Christmas day for the past three years has been darkened by a crime like unto that which the lustful and barbarous Herod committed. Kingly ambition, too, has been the moving cause of it all. A monster of iniquity, clothed in royal purple and wielding a sceptre, has risen up in the world, a Herod re-incarnated. The blood of helpless babes stains his sword and soils his unsanctified hands. Each year adds to the list of his victims.

Year by year the voice heard in Rama grows louder, a new Rachel joins in the chorus of lamentation for those they will never see again because they are not. The garbs of mourning are more in evidence, every day a message of grief comes to some Canadian home.

And Peterborough stands with uncovered head among those who grieve. The past year has brought sorrow to many a home in this city, to cottage and mansion alike. Day by day the roll of death grows. This Christmas Day will bring woe instead of joy to many a household as the family gathers around a chair that will be vacant forever. Father, son, brother, or lover, it may be, but they will never join their friends again to celebrate the day when peace instead of mortal strife was heralded to the world by an angelic choir.

But let us not despair. The fairest days follow the wildest nights of tempest. Peace comes after pain. The dark cloud that settled over the tragedy on Calvary was the forerunner of a brighter light to humanity than it had ever known. The agony through which the world is passing today may be but the travail attending the birth of a new and better civilization.

MR. GORDON'S CHANCES.

IF MR. G. N. GORDON, city solicitor, who is anxious to be re-elected as a member of the Board of Education, ever pauses to ask himself what his chances are, he should have no difficulty in replying to his own question. He can, in short, read his answer in the stars.

Mr. Gordon was elected two years ago after one of the most spectacular campaigns ever conducted in this city. He was defeated in the election a year ago to all intents and purposes, although he was not required to face the electors personally. His man Friday, his right bower in the little game of reform which he set going, his faithful ally all through the Board's sessions of 1915, Mr. John Smith, was defeated when he appealed to the voters for another lease of public life. Away back in 1914 it was generally understood that Mr. Smith furnished Mr. Gordon with munitions for those guns that exploded with such loud reports during his campaign. The heavy artillery, however, proved considerable of a disappointment when it had a chance to operate to some purpose if the claims of the man behind the gun were based on solid facts. If Mr. Smith was not really responsible for what was after all nothing more serious than a pyrotechnic display, then he has been grossly belied by a good many who profess to have inside information. At all events he paid the penalty for his associations when the votes were counted in the School Board election a year ago.

No one who knows Mr. Gordon doubts his ability to fill any office in the city. There is no question about his attainments, and he is a man who persists in making his way in spite of all human obstacles. The only objection to him is that he is cast in somewhat the same mold as the pooh-bah of India. He has an excessive desire to fill more than one office at a time. Inordinate ambition has proved the undoing of many an otherwise exemplary personage. When Julius Caesar developed that weakness the Roman populace rose in their wrath and took his life, even Brutus, his best friend, inserting a dagger between his ribs. They could stand for a leader, but not for an autocrat.

The law says distinctly that no city official shall sit as a member of the School Board. But Mr. Gordon maintains that drawing a salary of $1000 a year for looking after the legal affairs of Peterborough does not make him a city official in the meaning of the Act, or something to that general effect.

When Council, intent upon retrenchment, last spring shaved the salary of every city official drawing in excess of $750 a year, Mr. Gordon's remuneration was included. He accepted the reduced cheque every month. If he did not regard himself as a city official in reality, the majority of the people will wonder that, good lawyer as he is and with the legal talent that he could call to his aid, he did not put up a fight to prove to the aldermen that his emolument was immune.

Of course, Mr. Gordon, with other officials, got the amount of the reduction in a lump sum at the end of the year, but he had no means of anticipating such aldermanic generosity.

THE CITY'S FINANCIAL OUTLOOK.

WHEN MAYOR DUFFUS addressed the electors in the council chamber after his election by acclamation yesterday he promised that retrenchment and economy would be his program for 1917 just as it has been throughout the year so near its close. But the Mayor, however, was careful to point out that there is little or no hope for a lower tax rate in the immediate future. The debenture debt must be provided for year by year, and of this there will be no considerable amount wiped out until 1920, when the total then cleaned up will be $80,202.20.

The debenture debt was increased by $100,000 during the year, $60,000 of this being for the Patriotic Fund, and this must be taken into consideration when the rate is struck for 1917. The sewage disposal plant, the building of which is mandatory upon the city, will mean another financial burden. For five years after 1920 debentures mature slowly until in 1925 the amount wiped out will be nearly one hundred thousand dollars.

There are expenses in sight that cannot be avoided if Peterborough is to prosper and hold its place in the procession. Necessary equipment for the Fire Department will cost heavily, but there is always the hope that increases in assessed value of property will keep the tax rate down to normal.

OPENING THE TRENT CANAL.

WHEN CAPT. BURNHAM returns from Europe he will find important public work awaiting him. It is proposed to have a deputation, headed by Mayor Duffus, Captain Burnham, M.P., J. E. Sexsmith, M.P. for East Peterborough, these with any other influential citizens who may care to join, to proceed to Ottawa to induce the Government to open the Trent Canal to Lake Ontario during the coming season.

The opening of the canal is especially desirable at this time. If the Quaker Oats Company are to be induced to rebuild their plant in this city, the question of transportation must be dealt with. The company, as all know, are anxious to get ingress and egress by water to their plant. When the canal is opened Peterborough will become in effect a lake port, and there will be competition in transportation between the boat lines and the railways.

The stretch of navigable river from the company's ruined plant to the canal will not be available for traffic unless a high bridge is built at Hunter street, and this is a matter in which the city has a double interest as it involves not only the Quaker Oats Company but the prosperity of Ashburnham. If the Government is willing to assume a considerable portion of the expense of erecting such a bridge, the company that means so much to the welfare of this city will be given another inducement to rebuild here, and the East Side will be benefited by the extension of the street railway system across the river.

The Trent Canal is all but completed as far as Lake Ontario. Peterborough will not derive all possible advantages from this public improvement until the Otonabee is made available for navigation by the construction of a new bridge at Hunter street.

THREE ELECTIONS BY ACCLAMATION.

THE ELECTION of Mayor Duffus was so much of a foregone conclusion that all congratulations must be somewhat belated. His friends had felicitated him upon his chances in that regard before nomination day. The Mayor has every reason to feel gratified over the expression of the confidence that the public have extended him. The majority of mayors get a second term, but not all of them go back without a contest.

When a member of the Public Utilities Commission comes up for re-election, it appears to be becoming more and more the popular move to return him without opposition. Mr. R. Hicks' re-election by acclamation establishes no new precedent in this department. The commission has given the city a businesslike administration of the utilities in which they are so deeply interested, and this seems to be understood and appreciated generally.

Ald. Dobbin has the distinction of being the only member of the Council to get a free pass back to office. The senior alderman from the Centre Ward sits up nights planning for the welfare of the city and shaping his course. He is a man possessed of a wide range of knowledge of city affairs outside the usual aldermanic routine, and his re-election is a compliment richly deserved.

CRYING TO THE GOVERNMENT.

IN HIS ADDRESS in Chicago, Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, deplored the growing tendency of American business men to seek government assistance. "Viewed from one angle," he said, "there has been a distinct loss of independence, or self-reliance, and a growing tendency to lean upon governmental action, to be influenced by governmental attitude, to regard legislation as a panacea and to believe that a bill in Congress can do what we used to think required individual initiative, work, judgment, sacrifice and thrift to accomplish."

Leaning on the State for aid is not a weakness confined to our American cousins. In Canadian cities it is now next to impossible to prevail on an industry to locate their already established plant or to embark in a new line without special and substantial concessions and financial inducements.

The consumer, too, is prone to regard himself as the ward of the State. When the price of eggs goes up he is inclined to believe that there is something wrong in Denmark, and he beseeches the government to do something for his relief.

The son of a man of unlimited wealth will never amount to the proverbial hill of beans if his every want is supplied by his parent and he is never obliged to make any exertion on his own behalf. Individuals, too, may be made as plastic as putty if the designing politician wheedles them out of the self-reliance which should characterize every man.

THE STARS ON CHRISTMAS NIGHT

The stars that shine on Christmas night
Beyond all other stars are bright,
For in their brightness shines restored
That one great star whose light outpoured
Has led all nations to the Lord:
And all night long with solemn voice
They cry again: Rejoice! Rejoice!

The wonder of the Christmas dawn
No other morn has yet put on.
Oh, wan white radiance, breaking slow
On fields and woodlands wrapped in snow,
On the worn cities and their woe;
Oh, holy message breathed again!
"Peace on earth, good will toward men."

And now unto the new-born King
Bring we our lowly offering.
Lord, take ourselves, our hopes, our fears,
Our griefs, our memories, our tears,
The harvest of our troubled years;
We bring them all to Thee, to Thee,
And lo, once burdened, we are free.

And lo, our faith burns clear and bright
As shines the stars on Christmas night;
And lo, our life turns, deep and wide
As some great torrents' force untried,
Toward all mankind at Christmas-tide.
Rejoice! Rejoice! 'tis Christmas morn,
For in our hearts the Christ is born.

A CALL TO NATIONAL SERVICE

The Speakers' Patriotic League is initiating a campaign, the object being to help in carrying out successfully the project for the National Registration which is to be taken during the first week in January, under the auspices of the Dominion National Service Board. The League is asking for the co-operation of the representative patriotic committees throughout Ontario, and in a letter which is being sent out to the officers of these committees the following statement is made:

PROTECTED BY CANADA

MONROE DOCTRINE HAS DONE NOTHING TO SAVE THE U. S.

According to The London Morning Post, Great Britain could have come to an understanding with Germany any time in the past ten years by allowing her a free hand on this side of the Atlantic; and it adds that since the war began, or rather since Germany has realized that she cannot master Europe, there have been made to the Allies proposals that Germany should be permitted to expand in Central and South America. These proposals were rejected by the Allies. This should make interesting reading for the American people, who are committed by the Monroe Doctrine to resist any effort of a European power to plant its colonies in any part of the New World. The most boastful of our neighbors has been taught in the past few years how frail a bulwark against a power like Germany would be the Monroe Doctrine. If Germany wanted to establish herself in South America and if the Entente Allies would be content to stand aside, she would simply take possession of a country like Brazil, where already there are many Germans, and laugh at any efforts of the United States to hinder her. Indeed, it is extremely probable, in the light of the events of the war, that the American resistance would be confined to a written protest.

There would follow on the part of the United States a period in which that power would feverishly increase its army and navy in the certain knowledge that Germany would attack when the opportunity should be presented, and as certainly would follow a war for the domination of the American continent. On Canada's account Great Britain could not remain indifferent to the growth of a new Germany on this continent, and even if there were not other important considerations the fact that Canada occupies the northern half of the continent would be sufficient reason for Britain's objecting to Germany securing a foothold. So it would be seen that instead of the United States protecting Canada, it would be a case of the United States being protected by Canada, and on Canada's account. If The Morning Post's statements are correct, and there is no more responsible newspaper published, among the objects for which this war is being waged is the safety of the American people and the independence of the United States.—The Mail and Empire.

Beef Rouladee.

Purchase a thin round steak and cut it into strips about five inches long by three wide. Make a forcemeat of breadcrumbs and chopped salt pork or boiled ham, seasoning well with pepper and sweet herbs. Put a layer of the forcemeat on each piece of beef, roll up with the stuffing inside and pin with a tiny skewer or a wooden toothpick. Fry a sliced onion in a tablespoonful of butter or good dripping, lay the rolls in this and brown. Put them, then, in a saucepan with a cupful of good gravy well seasoned, cover and cook for an hour. Transfer to a hot dish, thicken the gravy left in the pan, adding a little Worcestershire sauce, and pour over the meat.

Little Folks of Japan.

Every child in the land is taught the inner meaning of everything that he sees, for nothing in this land of poetic images is just as it seems from the outside. It always has some historic association that must be learned by the children as they learn the spoken name for it. When the little children give gifts they give the gift of thought at the same time. With a bunch of red berries, which means winter, with its care for the life of birds, they place a tiny sprig of pussy willow or a small green leaf, which means that even in winter is the hope of spring.—Craftsman.

To Keep Lettuce.

Lettuce can be kept fresh in this manner: Cut leaves from stalks, wash and shake lightly; then lay loosely in deep pan, putting another pan over it to fit closely, but do not crush leaves. Put in cool place. It will keep crisp for forty-eight hours. You can use part of it and cover the rest up again.

Gift Book Stops Shot.

The prayer book given to Lieut. Gordon Smith on his confirmation in April, 1911, by his father, Dr. Harley Smith, formerly Italian consul in Toronto, was the means of probably saving his life when it stopped a piece of shrapnel which penetrated the pillow on which his head was lying one night in his dugout at the Somme.

Lieut. Smith went overseas as a private in the Canadian forces in June, 1915, but was given a commission in the British army and gazetted to a howitzer battery with whom he is now serving in France. His bravery during the fighting at Ginchy, when he saved a private's life under fire, was such that he was recommended for the D. S. O. His brother is also in khaki.

The life-saving prayer book was merely a soft-leather-bound book similar to thousands used every day, but now it is a torn, badly lacerated volume, with the shrapnel embedded right in the middle. It is coming back to Canada as a memento, its duty done.

Some of the passages lacerated by the shrapnel are strangely significant.

"Who saveth thy life from destruction and crowneth thee with mercy and loving kindness."

"Mine enemies are daily in hand to swallow me up, for they be many that fight against me, O Lord, most highest."

"For Thou desirest no sacrifice else would I give it to Thee."

A New Brim Line.

There is a strong tendency toward the front flare in the new transparent and felt hats. While this brim line is not becoming to many faces it can be so arranged that the flare comes at one side or tip tilted. A bit of soft fringed braid or a twist of silk help also to relieve the severity.

And it sometimes happens that the man who refuses to retreat will stand any amount of treating at a bar.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD and PINE LIMIT

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to and including the 1st day of February, 1917, for the right to cut pulpwood and pine timber on a certain area situated on the Black Sturgeon River and other territory adjacent thereto, in the District of Thunder Bay.

Tenderers shall state the amount per cord on pulpwood, and per thousand feet board measure, on pine, that they are prepared to pay as a bonus in addition to dues of 40 cents per cord for spruce, and 20 cents per cord for other pulpwoods, and $2.00 per thousand feet, board measure, for pine, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque, payable to the Honorable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten thousand dollars ($10,000), which amount will be forfeited in the event of their not entering into agreement to carry out conditions, etc. The said $10,000 will be applied on account of bonus dues, as they accrue, but the regulation dues, as mentioned above, will require to be paid in the usual manner as returns of cutting of wood and timber are received.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

A.A. FOWLER FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

NEW BLOOD MEANS NEW ENERGY

In selecting your candidates for the Board of Education, keep in mind that the keynote of progress is renewed life and vigor in the executive bodies that have to handle the business of this growing city.

In offering myself as candidate for a position on this Board, I do so realizing that only a man's best service will meet the growing need for practical business methods in this most important branch of the City's business. My record as a business man for the last fourteen years and a lifelong resident in Peterborough, residing in East City for twenty-five years, is well known to a large number of our citizens, and I trust is sufficient evidence of my ability to warrant your support in my present candidature.

Should I be elected, I promise to weigh most carefully all matters involving expenditure of the city's finances, and to countenance only strictly business methods in undertaking any work being handled by this Board.

Soliciting the support of every progressive voter, I am,

Yours for Progress,

A. A. FOWLER

REEVE MATHISON RETURNED TO LEAD COUNCIL OF HAVELOCK; CONTEST FOR BELMONT TWP.

(Special to The Review.)

HAVELOCK, Dec. 24. — James Ketchen and Wm. Griffith were nominated for the reeveship of Belmont at the nominations held here yesterday at the town hall. Gilbert Steenburg, Marcenus Rylatt, Wm. Anderson, Frank Breckenbridge, Coleman Elliott, Jack Scott and Edward Hubble were nominated for the Council. Mr. Rylatt withdrew.

Last night the nominations for Havelock Council were held. Wm. Mathison was nominated for reeve by Thos. McMullen and E. Yeomans. This being the only nomination, Mr. Mathison will be reeve for 1917.

The nominations for council were: Alex Mathison, by E. Yeomans and T. McMullen; Harrison Wing, by E. Yeomans and T. McMullen; H. W. Rochemb, by I. Barlow and H. F. McNicholl; John Home, by Wm. Mathison and W. H. Jones; Thomas Wright, by I. Barlow and Jas. Barlow; S. S. Joyce, by J. W. Stillman and W. Mathison; Wm. Jones, F. Coon and H. T. Andrews; P. Haig, by W. Jones and H. T. Andrews; Wm. Davidson, by F. Coon and D. Butters.

For School Trustee—Jas. Barlow by W. Mathison and W. H. Jones; T Wood, by J. Home and Jas. Barlow; I. Barlow, by Jas. Barlow and Jno. Overend; F. J. Squire, by F. Coon and D. Butters.

A. A. FOWLER FOR SCHOOL BOARD

IS ENTITLED TO STRONG RECOGNITION.

One of the likely men in the field for municipal honors this year is A. A. Fowler, who is a candidate for a seat on the Board of Education. Mr. Fowler has proved by his strict attention to and success in his own business his sterling value as an advisor on a board that has to deal with so much of the city's finances. As a rising young business man, whose success has all been achieved right in our midst, he is certainly entitled to strong recognition, when he offers himself as a municipal servant.

The city wants its governing done by the strongest men it can procure, and the prospect of gaining such an accession of young, aggressive blood as the introduction of Mr. Fowler to the Board would mean, is too good to lightly pass by. By all means see that Mr. Fowler is elected with such a safe majority as will show that his complying to the wishes of his friends in coming out for the Board of Education has been appreciated.

WOMEN AND WAR WORK

SPLENDID RESPONSE IN DOMINION TO CALL OF EMPIRE.

Canadians Have Proved That There is No Longer Any Truth in the Poet's Old Assertion That "Men Must Work and Women Must Weep"—Some Facts and Figures.

MUCH has been written of the Dominion of Canada's work in carrying out her part in the great world war. But in the telling of her raising 371,595 to Nov. 1, 1916; of her building 422 munition factories in 16 months, where none existed before; of her producing $550,000,000 worth of shells in 27 months; of her carrying on all the regular things of life during this time of strife and change—in the telling of all this, sight has often been lost of the noble and wonderful work of Canada's army of feminine workers.

The trammels of ancient tradition, regarding women which so often found its expression in "For men must work and women must weep," has long been swept away. And through exigencies arising out of wartime conditions, women of all the belligerent nations have proved, more effectively than by any political campaigns or other appeal, their right to equality in all things with the till-now ruling male. Just as the women of Belgium, France, England, and other countries quickly took up duties for the most part strange, so did the mothers and daughters and spinsters and widows of Canada answer to the call of country and lend readily their services in factory, office, hospital, munition works, and a hundred other places.

There are in Canada to-day many societies, social bodies, and other organizations bending their energies to the furthering of Canada's part in the war. However, as a great many of these are supplementary or contributing to the major bodies, mention is made only of the chief organizations. Among these are the Imperial Order Daughters of Empire, Women's Canadian Clubs, Woman's Emergency Corps, Woman's Institutes, Secour National, W. C. T. U., Belgian Relief, Red Cross, Order of St. John, and Queen Mary's Guild. All of these, with the exception of the Women's Emergency Corps, are engaged in supplying soldiers with comforts and collecting funds for their upkeep and that of their dependents. From the time the war began until September, 1916, no less than $2,275,000 had been gathered for Belgian relief, and while all this is not due to women's efforts, a goodly portion of it is, both indirectly and directly. In the same time another $27,000,000 has been raised in Canada for Red Cross and other purposes, for ambulances,—for Serbian, Armenian, Jewish, and Polish war sufferers' relief, and in aid of the most needy of soldiers' dependents left in Canada.

In order to get money for Red Cross work, the matrons and maidens of the city started a collection of all the old paper, bottles, rags, rubber, and all the materials that are so well summed up by the word junk. Of course, all the children were enlisted in the work. Every house, every long unmolested attic, vacant lots, and a thousand and one other places yielded up their quota of junk.

A place became necessary to store it in. The city of Toronto's Harbor Commission offered a warehouse, and here to-day a dozen women are almost constantly engaged sorting and packing the collected matter. In the first month, from this new and as yet not fully learned business, the women cleared $1,619, and figures to date show that they have started a business that now looks likely to return $25,000 a year without the investment of a cent of capital, and which required only organization and hard work.

In the matter of money collecting records the Secours National Society in one day, in the city of Toronto, collected $25,000 for relief of Verdun refugees. This was held on July 14, the French national day. Another splendid gift of recent date, directly due to the work of women, was the raising within a fortnight of $53,299 in aid of H. R. H. Duchess of Connaught's Prisoners of War Fund.

Three thousand Canadian women are working in munition factories throughout the Dominion, and this number is being added to every day. Regular factory hands who have had experience at almost anything, and the sturdy domestic servants and girls from rural communities, have proved the best and most satisfactory employees in munition works.

This is a brief summing up of some of the major activities of the women in aiding the Dominion carry on the war. But in spite of this, activities toward curbing abuses at home and toward the creating of better conditions have gone on. Through the active work of women three provinces now have equal franchise and a fourth has just passed it. In the provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia the women have the right to vote not only in provincial, but in Federal elections. In the provinces of Saskatchewan and Albert they have only provincial privileges as yet. Since the war four provinces have gone dry, mainly due to the fierce struggle of women and their attaining to the ballot. Four provinces have been made dry and a fifth becomes so at the beginning of the year. Through their rapidly gaining power the women of western Canada have appointed the first Canadian woman judge, Mrs. Arthur Murphy of Edmonton, Alberta, and at the next election a woman candidate is likely to stand in the provincial elections as member for East Calgary riding, in the person of Mrs. Nellie McClung. Unfair land laws discriminating against women; unjust marriage laws, and many other things are now coming in for attack by the women of Canada.

How to Handle a Husband.

It was a strange party recently given in honor of the seventy-fifth birthday of Countess Magri, better known as Mrs. Tom Thumb, who is less than three feet high, in her home in Middleboro, near Boston. As a special favor the guest of honor and her husband, Count Magri, played several musical selections for the guests. Countess Magri, the tiniest woman in the world, was married to the count in 1885, after the death of her first husband, General Tom Thumb, and now there is not a happier couple in all New England. She explains her peaceful married life in this way: "Don't argue with your husband. Let him have his own way—but win him to your way when he doesn't know it."

Countess Magri has been before the public for 60 years, traveling around the world a score of times in that period. The count is slightly taller than his diminutive wife, so she calls him her "big" husband.

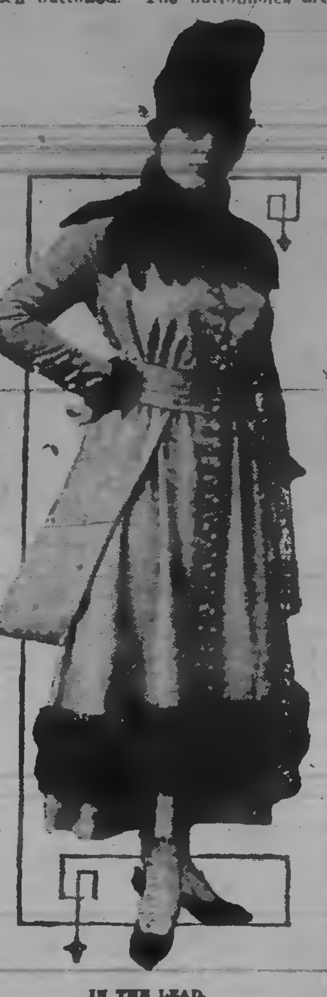
The Amethyst.

It is said that the amethyst used to be worn to promote temperance and sobriety, the chrysolite to ward off fevers, the onyx worn round the neck to prevent epilepsy, the opal to cure weak eyes, and the topaz to cure inflammation and keep the wearer from sleep-walking.

FOR MATINEES.

The Smartest Suit For All Dressy Occasions.

Tan broadcloth features this beautiful suit, cut with a panniered coat much buttoned. The buttonholes are bound with the broadcloth. Bandings of lynx give a dashing finish, while the tails make the smartest kind of square collar.



IN THE LEAD.

SETTING A TABLE.

Dainty Ways to Improve Your Table Service.

There is nothing so important as a correctly laid table and proper service and quiet and correct eating.

All forks with the exception of the small one used for raw oysters are laid to the left of the plate. The oyster fork, the soup spoon and the knives with sharp edges inward are laid to the right, in the order in which they are to be used.

As oysters are often before soup, the oyster fork is laid farthest from the plate, the soup spoon next and then the knife. The other spoons should not be laid on the table when the service is laid, but should be put on the table when the dessert and coffee are served.

Bread and butter spreaders should be placed on the bread and butter plate. The tumbler should be placed at the tip of the knife, the bread and butter plate in front or at the tip end of the forks. Some prefer to have the butter spreaders placed with the other knives at the right of the plate.

For informal serving the teaspoons are sometimes placed at the right with the knives, and again they are placed in a spoon tray on the table and passed when the dessert is served. The napkin neatly folded is placed at the left of the fork.

It is also good form to have the napkin loosely folded over a roll and placed on the bread and butter plate.

PRESENTATION OF THREE GIFTS BY EMPLOYES

TO PTE. HARRY FAGG, MISS E. B. BREALEY AND JOHN BLETCHER.

The officials, foremen and employes of the Peterborough Machine and Lubricating Co. held an informal meeting last night for the purpose of wishing each other the compliments of the season. It was the first time that both the night and day staff had met together and the spirit of well wishing was on every tongue.

Pte. Harry Fagg, a former employe of the firm, who is now in the ranks of the 247th Batt., was present to join in the merriment and his friends in the works took advantage of the occasion and presented him with a beautiful watch, accompanied by an address. The presentation was made by Mr. Fred Stephenson, and the address read by Miss Ethel Brealey, as follows:—

Dear Mr. Fagg: Having learned of your loyal and patriotic spirit in attaching yourself to the 247th Batt., as one of our number, we could not let you depart without some expression of our appreciation of your manly character and the esteem in which you are held by your fellow-workmen here. Words fail us in expressing the deep interest we feel in you and trust that you will represent us in the same manly way you have in the past.

In behalf of the employes of the Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Co., we present to you this little gift as an expression of our sincere good wishes and continued confidence in you as you go out from our midst.

Time, we are told, sir, was made for slaves, but its exponent in the shape of a watch has seemed [illegible] some of your friends a fitting pr[illegible]ent for a fearless and patriotic [illegible]dier.

Regarding you, sir, in [illegible] light, and anxious to express our [illegible] of your deserving in a tang[illegible] form, your fellow workmen her[illegible] have deputed us to deliver into your hands this handsome chre[illegible]ometer. A watch seems to be an appropriate testimony from the rank and file of a body of mechanics to one of their own class. It contains wheels within wheels, like a systemof machinery in a machine shop. We trust that this chonometer will serve you in marking off the hours that intervene between us and ultimate and glorious victory over our allied enemies. May you have a pleasant voyage and a safe return.

Wishing you the compliments of the season. (Signed), E. B. Brealey, Fred Stephenson.

Pte. Fagg was greatly pleased with the well wishes of his former chums and thanked them for the gift and at the same time expressed the wish that all would enjoy a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

F. A. Connor then got the ear of the meeting, and calling on Miss Brealey he read the following letter of appreciation to her, which was followed by Mr. Alfred Williams presenting her with a beautiful ladies' companion.

Dear Miss Brealey: We come to you as a committee representing the employes of the Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Co. We wish to express to you in a tangible way our sincere appreciation of your noble character and faithful and efficient manner in which you have performed your arduous duties in serving us throughout the year.

We hope you will receive this little gift, not for its intrinsic value, but as an expression of our hearty good wishes and token of the high esteem in which you are held by all.

Wishing you the compliments of the season. (Signed), F. A. Connor, Robert Thompson Currie, Nile Munroe, G. A. Wood.

Miss Brealey thanked the men [illegible] their beatiful gift and hoped tha[illegible] would enjoy a bountiful Chr[illegible] and a prosperous New Year.

The employes then called [illegible] Bletcher, the caretaker of [illegible] to their midst, and after [illegible] dress by Mr. N. Munr[illegible] ated him with a turkey and [illegible] et of fruit.

The night force [illegible] work and the day men wen[illegible] satisfied with having spe[illegible] ry pleasant hour.

WAR HAS [illegible] US EFFECT ON T[illegible] ARKETS.

Altho[illegible] far-reaching influences of [illegible] ar have added enormously [illegible] cost of tea, the recent adva[illegible] five cents a pound in the pric[illegible] "SALADA" only means that yo[illegible] now get eight cups for a c[illegible] stead of nine, and then you [illegible] hat unique flavour, absolutely [illegible] anged.

S. A. MEETINGS

Brigadier and Mrs. Tuthall, who are in charge of the men's social operations at Montreal, will conduct a series of meetings next week end at the S. A. Temple.

PRO-GERMAN PAMPHLETS.

Editor Review: The post office authorities in their laudable efforts to exclude anti-Ally publications from the mails, appear to have overlooked the catalogues of the Open Court Publishing Co. of Chicago. A catalogue just received in town from this firm is filled with advertisements of a pro-German tendency, in which pamphlets by Paul Carns and Bertrand Russell figure prominently. Wouldn't it be as well for the authorities to look into this matter?

Yours,

SANTA CLAUS VISITS HOME OF THE AGED

HAPPY TIME FOR INMATES OF THE PROTESTANT HOME.

Yesterday afternoon was a happy time at the Protestant Home, for Santa Claus was calling there, and he did not forget a single person. everybody got gifts from his bountiful hand. He said he was extra busy this year, because there is so much sorrow and sadness all over the world, so he is trying very hard to overlook no one, for Santa is welcomed by one and all. He has to go to all the soldiers, their wives and children, as well as to the Children's Aid and the hospitals, and lots of other places. God is very good to put it into people's hearts to send Santa lots of money so that he can make everyone a little bit happier.

Before Santa arrived, Rev. Canon Cornish gave a very helpful address, pointing out how each must live so as to fulfil the best purposes of life, remembering and helping one another, and above all, remembering God. This war was caused by forgetting Him, and so we were being purged by suffering in order to attain a higher and nobler conception of life.

Mr. John Allan, organist of St. Paul's Church, provided the musical portion of the program, which commenced with the grand old hymn, "Hark the herald angels sing," it being heartily joined in by all. Mrs. Cameron Wilson, Miss D. Allan, Miss May Nelson and Rev. Mr. McKenzie contributed violin and vocal numbers. Mrs. Rodger, Miss Lancaster and every member of the board did their utmost to make the occasion a bright and happy one for those living at the home. The proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

CARD OF THANKS.

Ladies and entlemen.

Please, as ratepayers of the Centre Ward of the city, accept my thanks for the honor done in my election by acclamation. It may not be a wrong assumption to receive it as an indication of confidence. And for that expression, renewed thanks.

As your representative, one may endeavor and yet not accomplish. Honest effort is not invariably successful, for fellow-workers of the Council see with a different eye and other perceptions. The combined effort should, and does, make for the general good.

But rest assured that for the ensuing term that which makes for the best interests of the city, its people, its welfare, ambitions and progress will have my undivided and earnest attention.

The season brings its expressions of good-will, and I, with pleasure, add m[illegible] others.

Respectfully and Hopefully,

F. H. DOBBIN.

Mayor Duffus' Xmas Greeting To The People

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

With the approaching end of the Old Year and before becoming engrossed in the affairs of the New, I desire to thank you all most sincerely for your kind co-operation and good-will and pledge myself to endeavor to prove more worthy of your confidence and support.

Christmas should be a day of gladness. It is the day of reflection as well as realization. To the young and care-free, Christmas is a joy unalloyed. But to those of riper years, in many cases, it invariably brings memories that forbid festivity.

Let me, however, give expression to the wish that the Spirit of Christmas may possess all of us. Your good-will during the passing year has been warmly appreciated, and equally warm and sincere is my wish that the coming year may shine more brightly on all our homes and businesses.

Probably never before in the history of Peterborough was there such hearty co-operation between our public-spirited citizens on behalf of the urgent military and patriotic schemes with which they have been confronted during the year. Volunteer workers on behalf of recruiting, patriotic and other funds have rallied to the work with splendid enthusiasm and devotion. And, if there has been one thing more than another which has made me feel proud of being Mayor of Peterboorugh, it is the record made by our citizens on behalf of every movement pressed upon them for support. The consciousness of such public service having been so generously bestowed is sufficient reward to me for any service I may have given on behalf of the city.

In the hope, therefore, of encouraging further public service of like character as must still be required from every good citizen during 1917, I desire to make this grateful recognition. We have a right to be proud of what Peterborough has already done. But there must be no halting action, no compromises, no timidity for the future.

While it may be necessary that there shall be a still more economic and clear-sighted civic administration under these war conditions than last year, the city must not be allowed to retrograde. We should shut down on big expenditures; and my advice to the incoming Board of Aldermen is: To make greater efforts in retrenchment than ever. In view of our heavy responsibilities—Civic, Military, Patriotic—I would urge that only urgently essential expenditures be embarked upon. Let us save our dollars that the war may be won.

I appeal for an all-round co-operation on the part of the citizens for increased interest in Municipal Government, as well as for sacrifices for war purposes. Exert every influence, give every aid to make Peterborough a bigger, broader, better city to live in. Peteborough should attest its deep interest in our civic as well as national affairs, even at this busy Christmas season. We have passed through severe periods during the present year; who knows but we may be called upon to pass through even more severe tests next year?

But why should we not have a joyous Christmas? Why should we restrain our generous impulses? It is the Children's Festival. What do wars and all the haunting fears that lurk in their wake matter to the child with Christmas morning ahead? Give practical gifts—

"Ceasing to give, we cease to have—
Such is the law of Love."

It is sad—sadder than words can tell—that in this immense strife between the powers of light and darkness, so many homes will keep their Christmas sadly—with many a vacant chair and with many a loved one absent. But while our sympathies go out to the hundreds of thousands at home and far away whose family circles have been broken, may we still know that the Star of Bethlehem is the Star of Peterborough, and that "His hand is not shortened that it cannot save."

JOS. J. DUFFUS, Mayor.

Peterborough, December 23, 1916.

In behalf of the employes of the Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Co., we present to you this little gift as an expression of our sincere good wishes and continued confidence in you as you go out from our midst.

Time, we are told, sir, was made for slaves, but its exponent in the shape of a watch has seemed to some of your friends a fitting present for a fearless and patriotic soldier.

Regarding you, sir, in this light, and anxious to express our sense of your deserving in a tangible form, your fellow workmen here have deputed us to deliver into your hands this handsome chronometer. A watch seems to be an appropriate testimony from the rank and file of a body of mechanics to one of their own class. It contains wheels within wheels, like a systemof machinery in a machine shop. We trust that this chonometer will serve you in marking off the hours that intervene between us and ultimate and glorious victory over our allied enemies. May you have a pleasant voyage and a safe return.

Wishing you the compliments of the season. (Signed), E. B. Brealey, Fred Stephenson.

Pte. Fagg was greatly pleased with the well wishes of his former chums and thanked them for the gift and at the same time expressed the wish that all would enjoy a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

F. A. Connor then got the ear of the meeting, and calling on Miss Brealey he read the following letter of appreciation to her, which was followed by Mr. Alfred Williams presenting her with a beautiful ladies' companion.

Dear Miss Brealey: We come to you as a committee representing the employes of the Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Co. We wish to express to you in a tangible way our sincere appreciation of your noble character and faithful and efficient manner in which you have performed your arduous duties in serving us throughout the year.

We hope you will receive this little gift, not for its intrinsic value, but as an expression of our hearty good wishes and token of the high esteem in which you are held by all.

Wishing you the compliments of the season. (Signed), F. A. Connor, Robert Thompson Currie, Nile Munroe, [illegible]. Wood.

Miss Brealey thanked the men for their beatiful gift and hoped that all would enjoy a bountiful Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

The employes then called Mr. John Bletcher, the caretaker of the works, to their midst, and after a short address by Mr. N. Munroe, presented him with a turkey and a basket of fruit.

The night force went to work and the day men went home, satisfied with having spent a very pleasant hour.

WAR HAS SERIOUS EFFECT ON TEA MARKETS.

Although the far-reaching influences of the war have added enormously to the cost of tea, the recent advance of five cents a pound in the price of "SALADA" only means that you will now get eight cups for a cent instead of nine, and then you get that unique flavour, absolutely unchanged.

S. A. MEETINGS

Brigadier and Mrs. Tuthall, who are in charge of the men's social operations at Montreal, will conduct a series of meetings next week end at the S. A. Temple.

They are old officers of the Peterborough corps and no doubt will receive a very warm welcome. They will also conduct the watch night service.

CHOCOLATES FOR AUBURN WOOLEN MILLS EMPLOYES

The employees of the Auburn Woollen Mills have addressed a letter to the management of the company, expressing the thanks of the employes for the gift to each employe of a box of chocolates, an act that was much appreciated by the employes.

S. A. at Brownton

Mr. Cunningham of the Temple, will take the S. A. meeting at Brownton on Sunday evening.

SANTA CLAUS AT THE ARMY TEMPLE.

Santa Claus will visit the S. A. Temple Monday evening at 8 o'clock, when all the little children will have a present and some fruit and candy. The larger children of the Sunday school, instead of getting presents, will bring something to be given to the poor families of the city, made so by sickness and hard circumstances over which they seem to have no control.

The program preceding the coming of Santa Claus will be of a very special character and will be worth while the attendance of anyone.

Santa will visit Brownton and Bralley children next week.

PRO-GERMAN PAMPHLETS.

Editor Review: The post office authorities in their laudable efforts to exclude anti-Ally publications from the mails, appear to have overlooked the catalogues of the Open Court Publishing Co. of Chicago. A catalogue just received in town from this firm is filled with advertisements of a pro-German tendency, in which pamphlets by Paul Carns and Bertrand Russell figure prominently. Wouldn't it be as well for the authorities to look into this matter?

Yours,

WIN THE WAR.

BOARDING HOUSE KEEPERS

Boarding house keepers are notified to call at the Paymaster's office, the Armories, on Saturday, Dec. 30, and Tuesday, Jan. 2, and board money will be paid [illegible].—J. M. Thomson, Capt.; Paymaster, 247th Batt.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS HOME OF THE AGED

HAPPY TIME FOR INMATES OF THE PROTESTANT HOME.

Yesterday afternoon was a happy time at the Protestant Home, for Santa Claus was calling there, and he did not forget a single person, everybody got gifts from his bountiful hand. He said he was extra busy this year, because there is so much sorrow and sadness all over the world, so he is trying very hard to overlook no one, for Santa is welcomed by one and all. He has to go to all the soldiers, their wives and children, as well as to the Children's Aid and the hospitals, and lots of other places. God is very good to put it into people's hearts to send Santa lots of money so that he can make everyone a little bit happier.

Before Santa arrived, Rev. Canon Cornish gave a very helpful address, pointing out how each must live so as to fulfil the best purposes of life, remembering and helping one another, and above all, remembering God. This war was caused by forgetting Him, and so we were being purged by suffering in order to attain a higher and nobler conception of life.

Mr. John Allan, organist of St. Paul's Church, provided the musical portion of the program, which commenced with the grand old hymn, "Hark the herald angels sing," it being heartily joined in by all. Mrs. Cameron Wilson, Miss D. Allan, Miss May Nelson and Rev. Mr. McKenzie contributed violin and vocal numbers. Mrs. Rodger, Miss Lancaster and every member of the board did their utmost to make the occasion a bright and happy one for those living at the home. The proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

CARD OF THANKS.

Ladies and entlemen.—

Please, as ratepayers of the Centre Ward of the city, accept my thanks for the honor done in my election by acclamation. It may not be a wrong assumption to receive it as an indication of confidence. And for that expression, renewed thanks.

As your representative, one may endeavor and yet not accomplish. Honest effort is not invariably successful, for fellow-workers of the Council see with a different eye and other perceptions. The combined effort should, and does, make for the general good.

But rest assured that for the ensuing term that which makes for the best interests of the city, its people, its welfare, ambitions and progress will have my undivided and earnest attention.

The season brings its expressions of good-will, and I, with pleasure, add mine to all others.

Respectfully and Hopefully,

F. H. DOBBIN.

Mayor Duffus' Xmas Greeting To The People

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

With the approaching end of the Old Year and before becoming engrossed in the affairs of the New, I desire to thank you all most sincerely for your kind co-operation and good-will and pledge myself to endeavor to prove more worthy of your confidence and support.

Christmas should be a day of gladness. It is the day of reflection as well as realization. To the young and care-free, Christmas is a joy unalloyed. But to those of riper years, in many cases, it invariably brings memories that forbid festivity.

Let me, however, give expression to the wish that the Spirit of Christmas may possess all of us. Your good-will during the passing year has been warmly appreciated, and equally warm and sincere is my wish that the coming year may shine more brightly on all our homes and businesses.

Probably never before in the history of Peterborough was there such hearty co-operation between our public-spirited citizens on behalf of the urgent military and patriotic schemes with which they have been confronted during the year. Volunteer workers on behalf of recruiting, patriotic and other funds have rallied to the work with splendid enthusiasm and devotion. And, if there has been one thing more than another which has made me feel proud of being Mayor of Peterboorugh, it is the record made by our citizens on behalf of every movement pressed upon them for support. The consciousness of such public service having been so generously bestowed is sufficient reward to me for any service I may have given on behalf of the city.

In the hope, therefore, of encouraging further public service of like character as must still be required from every good citizen during 1917, I desire to make this grateful recognition. We have a right to be proud of what Peterborough has already done. But there must be no halting action, no compromises, no timidity for the future.

While it may be necessary that there shall be a still more economic and clear-sighted civic administration under these war conditions than last year, the city must not be allowed to retrograde. We should shut down on big expenditures; and my advice to the incoming Board of Aldermen is: To make greater efforts in retrenchment than ever. In view of our heavy responsibilities—Civic, Military, Patriotic—I would urge that only urgently essential expenditures be embarked upon. Let us save our dollars that the war may be won.

I appeal for an all-round co-operation on the part of the citizens for increased interest in Municipal Government, as well as for sacrifices for war purposes. Exert every influence, give every aid to make Peterborough a bigger, broader, better city to live in. Peteborough should attest its deep interest in our civic as well as national affairs, even at this busy Christmas season. We have passed through severe periods during the present year; who knows but we may be called upon to pass through even more severe tests next year?

But why should we not have a joyous Christmas? Why should we restrain our generous impulses? It is the Children's Festival. What do wars and all the haunting fears that lurk in their wake matter to the child with Christmas morning ahead? Give practical gifts—

"Ceasing to give, we cease to have Such is the law of Love."

It is sad—sadder than words can tell—that in this immense strife between the powers of light and darkness, so many homes will keep their Christmas sadly—with many a vacant chair and with many a loved one absent. But while our sympathies go out to the hundreds of thousands at home and far away whose family circles have been broken, may we still know that the Star of Bethlehem is the Star of Peterborough, and that "His hand is not shortened that it cannot save."

JOS. J. DUFFUS, Mayor.

Peterborough, December 23, 1916.

SKATING RINKS FOR CHRISTMAS

MR. HARRY EVANS HAS RINKS READY FOR OPENING.

Time and again our hopes run in opposite directions. This is shown in the case of those municipal skating places to be fitted up. The endeavor was made to have them ready for the boys and girls to start in on Christmas Day. That was one hope, based on real good cold freezing weather. The other hope came from people who, at the price of fuel, hoped the weather would be what we call soft. And so far the "softs" have had the better of the circumstances.

Mr. Harry Evans, looking after the rinks, got the places all ready. Ready to pour water on and raise ice. Some water was applied to get a bottom and to cover up the grass and rough places. The weather man seemed indifferent and the water soaked through into the ground as fast as applied. So Mr. Evans gave up that effort in irrigation.

Telephoned last night, he said that if he had a good sharp freeze, or prospect of one, on Saturday, the rink at the corner of Stewart and Wolfe Streets could be ready for Christmas Day. Perhaps it will. Anyway, the small people can go over and if ready get on and slide to heart's content. So soon as the places are in skating order someone will be appointed to see after things and especially to observe that roughness is suppressed and that the little ones have more than a fair show. In such regard further announcement will be made.

ENTERTAINMENT AT KNOX HALL

EXCELLENT PROGRAM BY SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS.

Knox Church S.S. held a very successful Christmas entertainment in the schoolroom last evening. At the close of the program every boy and girl in the audience was treated to candy and oranges by Santa Claus, and even the absentees were not forgotten. The program was excellent.

"When first I came to this city, sir," said the trust magnate, "I had not two dollars in my pocket."

"There were, however, other pockets," said his friend, who knew the magnate's methods.

LITERARY RAMBLES

There are very many different classes of readers in the world; just as many, in fact, as there are classes of literature. Some read along certain specific lines, such as Philosophy, Theology, or Technology, others again read nothing but fiction and the newspapers. But there is a class that indulges in every sort of reading that it can manage to get hold of, and devours with as much relish articles on the Higher Criticism or Palaeontology as it does the latest novel by the popular writer of the day. There is no intention to deal in this article with the merits of all these different branches of literature. People are to be found who would say a good deal against every one of them, and against none so acrimoniously, perhaps, as against Fiction. We are all very prone to do so with Fiction, especially when we find ourselves face to face with a particularly rank specimen of a novel. But if we set ourselves calmly to lay all the good fiction on one side and all the bad fiction on the other, I think we should find that there was a considerable preponderance in favor of the former. We have to remember also that the reading of fiction is the best means available of obtaining a true perspective of the age in which we live. There is nothing to be compared with it in this particular. We have the authority of no less a person than the late Robert Louis Stevenson for the statement that the most influential books and the truest in their influence are works of fiction . . . "they repeat, they rearrange, they clarify the lessons of life, they disengage us from ourselves. . . and they show us the web of experience." But there is a class of reading that is on a totally different plane, viz., Natural Science. This is a study that brings one face to face always with truth. Nature cannot lie, because, as Longfellow once said, "It is a revelation of God." It is a matter that strikes me with the greatest regret that, having had exceptional advantages for many years of studying Nature under many aspects, I allowed such golden opportunities to slip away. It is only within the last few years, when my association with books has brought me so intimately in connection with works dealing with Natural Science, that I have realized how much I have missed in life. Take, for instance, the study of the habits of birds. Ornithology is only one of many branches of Natural Science, and how full of interest it is. In one of Nathaniel Hawthorne's works he says that hens are well worthy of study on account of the rich variety of their manners. He was perfectly right, for anybody who has had anything to do with hens will testify that they not only evince great variety, but also considerable individuality in their manners. And if hens are so interesting, what shall be said of all the wonderful feathered tribe? How can we account for the wonderful faculty that enables the carrier pigeon to return through the pathless sky, hundreds of miles, to its proper home? How shall we account for the migration of birds, or for the marvellous skill displayed in the building of the nest or in hiding from a predatory enemy? Years ago, when hunting for partridges, I observed one flying from a neighboring tree to a thick-branched spruce right above my head. In a few seconds it was followed by a hawk, which also descended into the tree and commenced a wild attempt to locate the whereabouts of the partridge. He must have hopped on every limb of that spruce tree, peering about for his quarry, but his effort was unsuccessful. The bird had become so much part and parcel of the tree that even the keen eyes of the hawk could not discover it. In a few minutes it flew away, and two or three seconds afterwards I had the satisfaction of seeing the partridge fly off too. My regret was that I had been so interested in seeing the bird-hunt that I had utterly forgotten to shoot the hawk. And what a strong maternal instinct there is in birds! Who that has been engaged in duck-hunting has not noticed the beautiful way in which the mother duck will swim right in the way of the hunter to take off his attention from her offspring? Likewise, the partridge, when discovered with her young brood, will fly right at the intruder and do all she can to draw him away from them. Even the most casual observers can tell many tales to illustrate the cleverness and instinct of birds.

A very interesting book that has just been added to the library shelves is one by Frank Chapman, the well-known American ornithologist. The book is entitled "The Travels of Birds," and deals in large measure with the migration of some of the better known American species. It is a book that might well whet the appetite of the bird-lover to know something more concerning them than can be learned from his own cursory observations. It tells of how they prepare for their journey and of the dangers that beset them on their way. It also attempts to solve the problem of why birds travel, and gives valuable information about the day fliers and the night fliers. Perhaps the most interesting chapter is on the Bobolink. The unlearned reader will be thunderstruck to learn that the Arctic Tern flies half way round the earth and back again each year, the distance between its winter and summer home being close on eleven thousand miles. It sees more hours of daylight than any animal on the globe. To quote Mr. Chapman, "At the northern nesting site the midnight sun has already appeared before the birds' arrival, and it never sets during the entire stay at the breeding grounds. During the two months of their sojourn in the Antarctic the birds do not see a sunset, and for the rest of the time the sun dips only a little way below the horizon and broad daylight is continuous. The birds, therefore, have twenty-four hours of daylight for at least eight months in the year, and during the other four months have considerably more daylight than darkness." But, there, enough has been said to show that to anyone interested in birds the book referred to has plenty within its covers to recommend it favorably to his notice.

LIEUT LAING WAS KILLED BY STRAY BULLET

WAS STANDING ON HIGH GROUND WATCHING OCCUPATION OF CRATER.

LT. STUART WRITES.

Lieut. L. J. Stuart, formerly of the 93rd Batt., and now in France, writes to the local Y.M.C.A. general secretary, in which he tells of Lieut. Stewart Laing's death. Lieut Stuart says:

Dear Mr. Meserve: I have received a few Peterborough papers lately and I have read with interest the doings at the good old Peterborough "Y." I also read an account of the campaign that was being launched to secure funds and that was what prompted me to write this letter. I just wanted to let you know in a small way the great work that the Canadian Y.M.C.A. is doing for the boys out here. Before I came out I had heard much about the "Y," but I had no idea of the great amount of good it was doing.

As you know, it is almost impossible for the units to have canteens, owing to the fact that they are moving all the time. The Y.M.C.A. takes the place of these. In every village (and these villages are very numerous) throughout the Canadian corps area there is a branch of the "Y," usually conducted in a large khaki colored tent. Here is sold everything a "Tommy" desires in the way of "eats" and smokes and at remarkably reasonable prices. In connection with all of the larger branches there is a recreation tent, where concerts are held almost nightly. In some of them they even manage to produce a movie show, or, as they are called over here, a cinema. The recreation tent is also used as a writing room.

"I FEEL LIKE A NEW BEING"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought The Joy Of Health After Two Years' Suffering

MADAM LAPLANTE

35 St. Rose St., Montreal. April 4th.

"For over two years I was sick and miserable. I suffered from constant Headaches, and had Palpitation of the Heart so badly that I feared I would die. There seemed to be a lump in my stomach and the Constipation was dreadful. I suffered from Pain in the Back and Kidney Disease.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. After using three boxes, I was greatly improved and twelve boxes made me well. Now I can work all day and there are no Headaches, no Palpitation, no Heart Trouble, no Constipation, no Pain or Kidney Trouble and I feel like a new being—and it was "Fruit-a-tives" that gave me back my health".

MADAM ARTHUR LAPLANTE.

Twenty Years Ago

From The Review of Dec. 23, 1896:

Twenty years ago W. H. Moore was nominated for mayor by Adam Hall and Thomas Irwin, and Mayor Yelland was re-nominated by J. H. Metheral and Ben. Armstrong. Two of the other nominees are still in public life. Dr. George Burnham was one of five candidates named for the School Board and John Smith was aspiring to the council in Ashburnham.

Live cattle were selling at 1½ to 2½ cents per pound.

EMPTY STOCKINGS.

Oh, mothers in homes that are happy
Where Christmas comes laden with cheer,
Where the children are dreaming already
Of the merriest day in the year,

As you gather your darlings around you
An' tell them the "story of old,"
Remember the homes that are dreary!
Remember the hearts that are cold.

And thanking the love that has dowered you,
With all that is dearest and best,
Give freely, that from your abundance
Some bare little life may be blessed.

Oh, go where the stocking hang empty,
Where Christmas is nought but a name,
And give—for the love of the Christ-child.
'Twas to seek such as these that He came.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH.

Christmas Sunday will be a high day at Murray Street Baptist Church. Both services will be in keeping with the thought of the Saviour's coming into the world. The music promises to be equal to anything that has been presented on such an occasion in our city. The choir committee have had one of the pianos tuned to the pipe organ, and both will be used in the services. Among other numbers will be heard "The Anthem Celestial," "God From on High Hath Heard," "Overture to the Shepherds," "The First Christmas Morn," "For Me, My Dear, Dear Country," and a ladies' sixtette will give from the "Holy City" "List Ye, Cherubic Host." At the morning service the Sunday school will join in an early "echo hymn," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." The pastor will preach at both services, and the expectation is that the day will be one of gracious and helpful influences.

All Saints' Church.

There will be two services in All Saints' Church on Christmas Day—8 a.m., celebration of the Holy Communion; 11 a.m., Morning Prayer and Holy Communion.

A short life and a merry one is the kind undertakers like.

An Arabian Marriage.

Lulua's was an ideal Moslem marriage. Her sisters had been married to old men with other wives. To Lulua's lot had fallen Cousin Abdullah, a promising youth of sixteen, as yet unwedded. The time of the wedding covered many days of festivity.

When finally the night came for the little twelve-year-old girl to be taken to the home of the bridegroom, slave women made the whole town ring with their songs of rejoicing.

Then the doors of the new harem closed on that slight, deeply-veiled figure, not to open again for her until after many years.

Scores of guests came to congratulate the bride during the days following the wedding. They found her seated in her chair like a queen on a throne. She was clothed in the richest silks and satins and laden with the most elaborate golden ornaments and jewels.

Did she meet her guests with smiles and greetings? Allah forbid that she should have been so bold! So modest was she that she never so much as lifted her eyes from the ground. By scarcely a movement did she betray the fact that she was alive.

The guests were taken to see the room fitted out especially for the young wife. They ate the refreshments offered by the women of the groom's family. They exclaimed about the great beauty of the bride, and left calling down the blessings of heaven upon the marriage. "May the couple live to see not only many sons, but many sons of their sons!"

Day after day little Lulua was adorned that she might be beautiful in the eyes of her husband. In the braids of her shining black hair were entwined strings of waxy jasmine flowers. Her small brown feet and hands were decorated with elaborate designs in black. The ornamentation looked like tatooing, but was not permanent. The soles of her feet and her palms were dyed red with henna. A lovely picture Lulua made, her great dark eyes and wistful face framed in the folds of her bright silken draperies.—Eleanor T. Calverley in World Outlook.

A Canadian Authoress.

It may interest admirers of "Beautiful Joe" to know that Miss Margaret Marshall Saunders, the authoress, is a Canadian, having been born in Berwick, N.S., where her father, Rev. E. M. Saunders, D.D., was a Baptist minister. She received part of her education in Scotland and part in France, but returned later to Nova Scotia, where she taught school. The authoress travels extensively, but she regards Toronto as her home and spends a good deal of her time there. That fact may surprise some persons, as Miss Saunders has not courted publicity. She does not show the tendency to parade herself unduly, which has been commented upon so frequently as one of the marked feelings of Canadian literary women and pseudo-literary women.

WHEN BARD WROTE ODE ON HARRY WINCH'S DRESSED BEAVER

Many years ago, when Mr. H. C. Winch had a meat stall in the old market building, he had among his display of Christmas beef and fowl the dressed body of a beaver. The late William Telford, Bard of St. Andrew's Society, happened along and jotted down the following lines, which caused much merriment on that Christmas Saturday. The generous Harry sent the pelt back to his home in Smith with a choice roast of beef for his Christmas dinner.

It is Christmas, yes, but a dark one to me
I am dead, here I hang, I no longer go free.
To the lake, to the river, to the pond bid adieu.
Here my plump half-skinned body now hangs to your view.

O cruel was the trapper that caught and killed me.
Grim Death locks the jaws that cut many a tree.
The house and the dam has been smoothed by my tail,
That your friend Harry Winch now offers for sale.

With a stick on my head, heavy blows he gave me;
How he smiled as my leg from the trap he set free,
And the crowd stands and laughs at my body half dressed.
Though the beaver shines bright in fair Canada's crest.
If the hard-hearted trapper had only but known
That my life was as precious to me as his own,
He would have earned his bread in a different way
And I would be swimming in the water today.

ELECTION NECESSITATED BY MAYOR'S INSOLVENCY

After Two Days' Voting W. A. Scott Was Elected by a Majority of 97 Votes, His Opponent Did Not Wait in Town to Hear the Result.

Way back in 1865, the then town of Peterborough witnessed a rather stormy nomination. The election of a mayor was made necessary by the insolvency of Mayor Percy. The local editors of that day rubbed shoulders on the question of Mayor Perry's right to further act as chief magistrate, and finally a legal decision put the mayor out of office.

Then followed nomination proceedings to find a successor and in a copy of The Spectator of Hamilton, which has just been received in the city, is set down the report of the Peterborough correspondent of that paper.

The election was held on Monday and Tuesday of the next week. On the first day's poll, Mr. Scott was six votes in the lead and at the end of the second day's voting his majority had been increased to 97 votes. The report adds that his opponent, Mr. Nicholls, was absent in New York.

The report on the nomination proceedings follows:—

We have had quite an exciting time lately in town on account of the insolvency of the mayor. His seat was declared vacant, and last week the clerk issued the necessary notices calling the electors to meet together at the council chamber on Saturday, at the hour of 9 a.m., to nominate a fit and proper person to fill the office of mayor for the remainder of the year. In accordance therewith one hundred people were assembltd at the hour named. After the meeting had been called to order by the town clerk, Mr. Lawson proposed, and Mr. Toole seconded, Mr. W. A. Scott as a fit and proper person to discharge the duties of mayor. Mr. Lawson said it was unnecessary for him to make a speech on the subject as every person in the town knew Mr. Scott. He was an old business man, a man of undoubted honor and business ability, and, if elected, as he felt certain he would be, would discharge the duties appertaining to the office in a manner creditable to himself and beneficial to the town.

After about an hour's delay, Mr. Wm. Cluxton proposed, and Mr. Robt. Walton seconded, Mr. Robert Nichols as mayor for the remaining portion of the year. Mr. Cluxton made a speech in which he highly eulogized Mr. Nichols as a careful and at the same time a straightforward business man; stated that he had shown considerable tact and ability in the management of his own affairs, and also that he had had considerable experience in municipal matters, having several times occupied a seat at the council board of our town. From this, he expected a great deal from Mr. Nichols, and he believed him the most capable man in the town for the office. He also said it was the intention of the council to abolish the mayor's salary, and also not to allow the mayor to try cases, and arrangements were making with a gentleman to take charge of the police court. After waiting for ten minutes, during which nearly every person left the room, supposing the proceedings at an end, the clerk called for a show of hands, when it was discovered it was a tie, seven hands being held up for each candidate. Mr. Dawson, then, to end the matter, asked for a poll on behalf of Mr. Scott.

The polling commenced today and will undoubtedly end in returning Mr. Scott by a large majority. Mr. Scott is a very popular man. Either of the gentlemen will make a very good head for our municipal body, and Mr. Nichols is certainly what his friend Mr. Cluxton made him appear in his speeches—he is a keen business man and one who has amassed a considerable amount of money, but has not so used it as to render himself by any means a popular candidate.

George was our neighbor's boy. He lived about a block from us across a vacant lot, and was hardly out of bed before he wanted to "come over." Our buckwheat cakes and honey were one great attraction.

"Had your breakfast, George?" my father would say, cutting into the honey, with one eye on the lad.

"Yes," the honest little fellow was forced to admit. "Yes, I had my brekfuss, but I jus' got hung-ry a-comin' over."

Intending Boarder: You say a music teacher lives next door? That is not very pleasant.

Landlady: Oh, that's a small matter. He has twelve children, and they make such a noise you can't hear the music.

"Waiter," said the traveller in a railway restaurant, "did you say that I had twenty minutes to wait or that it was twenty minutes to eight?"

"Nayther, sir. Oi said ye had twenty minutes to ate, an' that's all ye did have, for yer train's just gone."

In the Shell Zone

The work is not confined to the villages back of the line, but is also carried on to some extent right up under shell fire. On one occasion at least, when we came out we were given a cup of coffee and a cigarette from a "Y" dugout still within range of the Hun 5.9's. You can imagine what new life it put into all of the fellows, who were so tired they could hardly drag one foot past the other, and still had several miles to go. Although I didn't see it, I have been told of a case that happened up in the Ypres salient, where a shell actually lit in an advanced "Y" dugout.

In this matter we have left the Imperials very much in the shade. They have the Church Army huts, but these are few and far between.

After the war the "Y" will have many supporters that it never had before. Chaps who were never members before the war are the loudest in their praise of the great work that is being done by the association out here.

Lieut. Laing's Death

Poor Stuart Laing was killed the other night. I don't know whether you knew him or not, but he was always a great "Y" worker before the war, and his brother Jack was formerly boy's secretary at Peterborough. I believe Jack is in the work now in some part of Canada.

The circumstances surrounding Stuart's death are particularly sad. He had been out here so long and then for him to be caught as he was. He was quite a distance from the line, standing on a piece of high ground watching a show—the occupying of a crater—that was being put on by the 14th Batt., when he was hit by a stray machine gun bullet. These are quite common, especially where the land back of the line is level, but most of them just hand out nice "blightys."

Well, Mr. Meserve, it won't be long till Christmas, so I will take this opoprtunity of wishing you and all of my friends in the association a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

A Social Deadlock.

Little as he was, Edward knew a lot about fathers, especially about his own father, so he approached the difficult question on hand dubiously.

"Father," he said, "John Burton is going to have a birthday party next week and he said he was goin' to invite me. And I've got to take him a present."

"A present?" snorted Edward's father. "What for?"

"Because I must," said Edward. "All the kids take presents."

"That's all nonsense," declared father. "Every day or two it is a present here or a present there. If you can't be invited without taking a present you'd better not go."

Edward made no reply. The next day his father regretted his hasty words to his unhappy-looking little son.

"Edward," he said, "I bought a couple of books tonight for you to take to John's party."

"It's too late now, father," said Edward, gloomily. "I licked him today so he wouldn't invite me."

Lots of men will tell you how to get rich, but they haven't time to explain why they are still poor.

MARKET PRICES

The Christmas market was a very large one so far as the upstairs department was concerned. From eight o'clock the farmers' wives began arriving with fowl of all kinds, and it was a surprise that there were so many turkeys and geese left after the market of last Saturday and Wednesday.

Prices for turkeys took a slight drop owing to the demand for the outside markets failing off and the local dealers had a good supply on hand. Some of the choice turkeys were readily picked up at 35c per pound, but the common kind and the older birds dropped as low as 28c.

Geese sold at 22c to 24c per lb. for the best and the ordinary market goose could be bought at 18c to 20c per lb.

Chickens of good quality (for roasting) were scarce. There were plenty of common barnyard fowl and these could be bought for 90c to $1 a pair, while a good choice rooster brought $1.30 to $1.25.

Ducks were not plentiful and sold for 25c lb., or $1.10 to $1.50 each.

Eggs were scarce and sold at 60c to 65c per dozen.

Butter of good quality sold for 45c per lb., while a few baskets sold at 43c.

Goose feathers were on sale at 50c lb.

Home-knit socks of the grey and white colors sold at 50c to 60c per pair.

There is no change in the prices of other commodities.

Hogs remain unchanged for next week at $11.75 for local delivery.

HORSE MARKET

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—There was much more activity in the horse trade in Toronto this week. Officials at the Repository reported that nearly 200 remounts had been secured by French Government buyers at the daily inspections held there during the week. These inspections are continued this week, and fairly good results are being secured. It is understood that no change has been made in the price of horses being taken by the French inspectors. The car-lot trade is also fairly active, with three loads of mares being sent to the West last week, and one load of blocks and chunks to Montreal. Local requirements are still more than nominal; there is the usual light turnover of express, wagon and carting horses.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N.B.— Unauthorised publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

Uncle Hiram—If they kin send submarines over nothing kin prevent a Zeppelin coming next. Perhaps, after all, 'twouldn't pay to shingle the house this fall.

GREEKS ARE ORDERED TO FIGHT ALLIES

RAILWAY STATIONS, BLAST FURNACES AND FACTORIES ARE HEAVILY BOMBARDED

Operations on Large Scale by British and French Airmen.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 28—(Official statement): South of the River Avre detachments of the enemy which were endeavoring to reach our lines in the front of Lechenoy, have been dispersed by our fire. According to further information, a mining operation conducted by us yesterday in the region of Beauvraignes was completely successful. One of the craters produced by this activity measures 860 feet long by 120 feet wide.

On the left bank of the River Meuse we repulsed easily a surprise attack of the enemy directed against the eastern slopes of Hill 304.

The night passed quietly elsewhere.

It has been confirmed that Lieut. Herteux brought down on Tuesday his fifteenth enemy airplane. This happened over Vaux Woods.

HIS 25th MACHINE

On the same day Sub-Lieut. Guynemer brought down at a point east of Misery, his 24th German airplane and on Wednesday he vanquished his 25th a little south of Maisonette. Another German machine after engaging in combat with one of our pilots yesterday crashed to earth near Omiecourt.

Thirteen British naval airplanes yesterday bombarded blast furnaces at Dillingen, throwing down 1,100 kilograms of projectiles.

French aviators yesterday and last night conducted various bombarding operations on the railroad stations at Montmedie, and Pierrepont, east of Longuyon, received a large number of projectiles. Bombs to the amount of 720 kilograms were thrown down on factories at Thionville and Joeuf in the Valley of Briey; 22 bombs of 120 millimetres were thrown down on blast furnaces at Rombach, and 60 more on furnaces at Hagondange. One of our dirigibles dropped bombs on factories.

IS HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

PRIVATE OF O. S. BATTALION UNDER ARREST.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Dec. 28—Pte. Larry Flynn, of the 210th Batt., is under arrest on a charge of manslaughter and causing the death of Provost-Sergt. Charles McGee of that battalion, who died on Wednesday afternoon from hemmorhage of an artery at the base of the brain.

Memorial Service at All Saints' Church

SIX HEROES WHO DIED WILL BE REMEMBERED.

A memorial service will be held at All Saints' Church next Sunday evening for six members of the congregation who have fallen in battle during the course of the year that is closing. The last evening of the year is a fitting time to do honor to the memory of these men, who have laid down their lives for the freedom we all enjoy. Following are the names of those who will be remembered: Lieut. Crarword Rush, Ptes. Arthur White, George Mehew, William Hall, George Wilkins, Driver Claude Manley.

The friends of these men are indvited to attend the service which will be of a bright, triumphant nature.

NO PARTIALITY THERE.

Forty-nine summonses were issued yesterday against residents of town who had not shovelled their snow promptly. They include aldermen, town solicitor, medical health officer, doctors, dentists, printers, and in fact every kind of nationality in town.—Cobourg Sentinel-Star.

STRONG COUNTER-THRUST REPULSED BY INVADERS

Russians Made an Effort to Regain Ground Near Rimnik-Sarat—Enemy Add Prisoners and Material.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Dec. 28—(Official statement): Western front—Isolated sections of Flanders front and the Somme salient were temporarily under strong artillery fire. Activity of air forces was of the liveliest sort. The enemy, in aerial engagements or through operations of our defensive air craft, lost eight airplanes.

Eastern front — Front of Prince Leopold: At several points along the front the forces in our trenches repulsed advances of Russian raiding detachments.

Roumanian front—Front of Archduke Joseph: On Ludova, in the wooded Carpathians, German riflemen drove off strong Russian patrols. In Meste Canesci sector there was repeated lively cannonading. In the mountains in Oituz and Putna Valley fighting activity increased.

Army group of Von Mackensen — On Wednesday complete victory was gained in the battle near Rimnik Sarat over the Russians summoned to the defence of Roumania. The enemy defeated on Tuesday attempted to regain the lost ground by a counter-thrust of strong masses, but his attacks failed. Prussian and Bavarian infantry divisions pressed behind the enemy, whose forces flowed back. Our troops stamped him from his new positions constructed during the night and pushed ahead beyond Rimnik Sarat. At the same time, further to the south-east, German and Austrian troops pierced strongly entrenched Russian lines. They repulsed here also violent counter-attacks made upon their flank and advanced, fighting in a north easterly direction. The enemy again in this defeat suffered heavy sanguinary losses. Yesterday 3,000 prisoners and 22 machine guns were brought in. The number of prisoners made by the Ninth Army in engagements near Rimnik Sarat forms a total of 10,220 Russians.

With the Danube army yesterday there were only local engagements.

In Dobrudia Bulgarians and Turkish troops succeeded in throwing the Russians from fortified height positions east of Macin.

Macedonian front—North-east of Lake Dourian several British companies after a strong artillery preparation, unsuccessfully attacked the Bulgarian outposts.

POSTMEN WILL DISTRIBUTE NATIONAL SERVICE CARDS

Twenty-four Queries For Which Definite Answers Are to be Supplied.

Last evening a meeting was held in the rooms of the Patriotic Fund, called to see what could be done to put forward the distribution, completing and collection of the cards issued in connection with the National Service movement of Canada, just now before the public. Instructions had been forwarded to the city postmaster to set in motion the work, and it was felt that all assistance should be given. It was in mind to put in force some such team work as has been used in the collection of the several patriotic funds during the last two years.

After the meeting convened it was learned from the postmaster that fresh instructions had been received that showed that the work would be wholly in the hands of the local post office, and that if necessary the increased staff of the Christmas rush would be utilized in the work.

Briefly, what is required is this:

The cards contain 24 questions, to which definite answers are to be supplied. All males between the ages of 16 and 65 years are required to observe the instructions. The object is to have a national registration, largely for industrial purposes. The questions range as follows:—

1. What is your full name?
2. How old are you?
3 Where do you live, province?
4 Name of city, town, village or post office, street, number.
5 In what country were you born?
6 In what country was your father born,
7 In what country was your mother born?
8 Were you born a British subject?
9 If not, are you naturalised?
10 How much time have you lost in the last 12 months from sickness?
11 Have you full use of your arms?
12 Of your legs?
13 Of your sight?
14 Of your hearing?
15 Which are you—married, single of a widower?
16 How many persons, besides yourself, do you support?
17 What are you working at for a living?
18 Whom do you work for?
19 Have you a trade or profession?
20 If so, what?
21 Are you working now?
22 If not, why?
23 Would you be willing to change your present work for other necessary work at the same pay, during the war?
24 Are you willing, if your railway fare is paid, to leave where you now live and go to some other place in Canada to do such work?

Write plainly. Answer correctly every question. Each is important. Cards will be collected by the letter carriers.

The Instructions

Following are the new instruction:

During the last week in December (present week) each of the letter carriers will deliver to each of the residences on his particular route, at least three cards and three envelopes. If the letter carrier knows, or thinks, that more cards will be required, he will leave a sufficient number. Each letter carrier should, without any difficulty, be able to complete delivery of these cards to every house, residence or office on his route, in two or three days. He will particularly state that these cards are not to be mailed but will be called for on Wednesday, Jan. 3. 1917.

On Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 3rd and 4th, the carrier will collect

GERMANY'S REPLY AT WASHINGTON

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — The official text of Germany's reply to President Wilson's note was received today. It is said to be substantially the same as the unofficial text received on Tuesday.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN'S REPLY TO LABOR MEN

National Service Plan Will Not Involve Conscription.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—The National Service plan, under which an inventory of Canada's man-power is to be taken, does not involve conscription. But if conscription were found to be the only means by which Canada's liberties could be secured, then the Government would not hesitate to have recourse to it.

Such is the meaning of a reply given by Sir Robert Borden yesterday to the executive of the Dominion Trades and Labor Council, who have been at the Capital interviewing the Premier and Mr. R. B. Bennett, M. P., as to the scope of national service work, of which the latter is head.

Positions are open for two returned partially disabled men, as inspectors of munitions. Men who have had active service in the field will have the preference. Positions in the city. Apply to the office of the Patriotic Fund, Simcoe street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Downer, River Road, received letters yesterday from their two sons, Asa and Newton, who went overseas with the 23rd Battery, and are now in France with an ammunition column. The boys are well.

WITNESSES HERE FOR TRIAL OF CLARENCE SAMPSON TO-MORROW

Inspector Boyd of Toronto and a number of witnesses for the Crown in the case against Clarence Sampson for cattle stealing arrived in the city today.

The trial of the accused will be held before County Magistrate Langley tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the Court House.

The defendant in the case has been held at the police station since his remand, not being able to get bail satisfactory to the Crown Attorney. This morning while he was out with an officer for exercise, a pedestrian addressed the prisoner as "Mr. Brown."

It is not known whether the Hills will be brought back from Kingston to testify.

ADVOCATE THRIFT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—Sir Thomas White announces the resumption of the national thrift campaign, which was interrupted by his trip to England. During the next three months the Finance Minister will tour the country for a series of speeches advocating thrift. Sir Herbert Ames and W. N. Nickle, M.P., will assist the Finance Minister in legislative and other duties during the session.

RUSSIANS STUBBORNLY RESIST TEUTONS IN DOBRUDJA TERRITORY

Attacks by Enemy Are Repulsed With Great Losses.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 28 (Wireless Press): Stubborn resistance is being offered by the Rusians and the Allies the the efforts of the Teutonic forces to expel them from that portion of Dobrudja which still remains in their hands. Attacks yesterday were repulsed with great losses to the Teutonic Allies, today's report from the War Office says.

The statement adds: "The gallant commander of a British motor car detachment was wounded on Tuesday, but again took command on Wednesday and put the enemy to flight."

PEDLER PLACED UNDER ARREST

CONSTABLE MOORE LOCATED HIM IN OTONABEE.

Constable Archie Moore made a trip into Otonabee last night in response to complaints that a man was making himself a nuisance to the community, and was endangering property by ligating fires at different places.

He arrested a pedlar named George White, who claims to be able to earn his living by repair work.

This morning County Magistrate Langley remanded the prisoner until next Thursday.

C.P.R. WRECK KILLS SIX

Unknown Man Dies in the Hospital.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—The list of dead from the accident on the C.P.R. at St. Polycarpe last night was increased to six this morning when an unknown man died in the Royal Victoria Hospital.

Two injured victims in that hospital were reported doing ewll.

The accident occurred last night, when the C. P. R. Toronto train for Montreal ran into the local train from Cornwall to St. Polycarpe. The local train was standing on a siding at the time, and the switch had been turned, which automatically turned the semaphore signal some distance down the track. At the time of the accident there was a heavy fog with sleet, and it is supposed that the engineer of the train from Toronto either failed to see the signals or misread them.

The Toronto train was practically uninjured, the passengers receiving only a severe shaking.

LOSES HIS APPEAL.

The appeal of Wm. G. Noble, Millbrook, in the award for damages against the C. P. R., allowed by the arbitrators, Judge Ward, Judge Huycke and Mr. Armstrong, has been dismissed with costs by Chief Justice Riddle. When the C. P. R. crossed Mr. Noble's farm the company offered him $1000 as damages. Mr. Noble refused to accept, and the acse went to arbitration, the arbitrators allowing Mr. Noble $3000. Mr. Noble claimed $6000.

PARLIAMENT IS SUMMONED FOR JANUARY 18th

PROCLAMATION BEARS SIGNATURE OF DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 28—January 18 has been fixed for the opening of Parliament. A proclamation summoning both Houses was promulgated today over the signature of the Duke of Devonshire.

BOYS FOUGHT GERMANS AND BROKE WINDOWS

Fourteen boys appeared in the city Juvenile Court this morning to answer charges of breaking windows in the old Murray Street Baptist Church.

The boys had been playing a game of "Germans" with snow fortress and snow balls for ammunition and in the battle some of the colored glass in the building was damaged to the extent of $68. The fines will be applied to the repair account.

Editorial 436
Chas. Curtis, City Editor, residence ... 272

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28. 1916

MR. GORDON AND THE LABOR MEN.

IN HIS COMMUNICATION to The Review yesterday, Mr. Edward Navey, speaking as a workingman, vigorously puts up a good case for Mr. G. N. Gordon in his campaign for re-election as a member of the School Board. Mr. Gordon is certainly approachable and is consequently popular, and no one has ever been heard to question his courage and attainments, whatever their opinions may be with regard to his judgment in the handling of certain matters.

But Mr. Navey fails to score a point when he attempts to argue that Mr. Gordon as a lawyer possesses special qualifications for membership on the School Board. The exact words of Mr. Navey in this connection are as follows: "If Mr. Gordon were employed as a lawyer to attend Board meetings and give his time and ability to the business of the Board, it would run up a pretty big bill in the course of a year; but he is giving his time and ability without remuneration, and that is something of very considerable value to the people of Peterborough."

In this particular Mr. Gordon is in exactly the same position as any other member of the Board. His professional attainments are worth nothing to the city while he sits at the deliberations of the trustees. The Board does not consult him on legal matters. They have an attorney of their own for that purpose, just as the Utilities Commission have, although one of the best lawyers in the city is a member of the latter organization. Mr. Gordon's professional services are no more available for public good than are those of Dr. Burnham by reason of his office.

The hitch in the arrangements are really caused by this very fact, which Mr. Navey so speciously pleads. Mr. Gordon is the legal adviser of the City Council. In case of a dispute in the matter of authority arising between the aldermen and the School Board, the latter would be consulted by the city fathers, who would naturally follow his advice. This gives him the power to override the decisions of the Board of which he is a member, if he was so disposed. For this reason, to avoid any such conflicts or deadlocks, the Legislature wisely passed a law forbidding any city official from being a member of the School Board.

That is the only possible objection any person can in fairness urge against the candidacy of Mr. Gordon. Whether he made good as a member of the Board and carried out his platform of two years ago in detail is, after all, largely a matter of opinion. The question of dual office holding is a cold fact.

MR. SMITH AGAIN.

IN EVERY DISCUSSION with regard to the School Board's election reference is sooner or later made to the case of Mr. J. H. Smith and the fate which befel that gentleman in the election a year ago. Mr. Smith accounts for his own defeat by claiming that he was knifed because he is a workingman. Mr. Navey, in his letter to The Review yesterday, alludes to this incident and says if that is true it is all the more reason why the workingmen should rally to the support of Mr. Gordon.

If Mr. Smith, a workingman himself, was unable to hold the labor vote, how can Mr. Gordon, a lawyer and already in the employ of the city, hope to receive it, especially when it is recalled that Mr. Smith made his campaign on some such platform of reform as Mr. Gordon promulgated two years ago and still stands upon?

Mr. Gordon's charges against the Old Guard had been ventilated previous to the election. All the evidence was before the voters. Those members affected by the charges were elected, Mr. Smith alone falling by the wayside.

ALD. LANGFORD'S REASONING.

A FOREMAN in a large local manufacturing plant was recently given a cash testimonial by his staff of assistants. We have yet to learn that his employers, fearing lest the foreman be spoiled by sudden prosperity, or seeing an opportunity to effect a saving themselves, reduced his salary receipts by the amount of the contribution.

When Council cut the salaries of Fire Chief Howard and Assistant Chief Jamieson the manufacturers of the city made up the deficit in a lump sum. This was really nothing more or less than a testimony to the efficiency and fidelity of the heads of the fire brigade. The old scale of salaries was restored at the end of the year, and Ald. Langford proposed that the chief and his assistant be left out of the list as the manufacturers had acted in their behalf.

If Ald. Langford had a hired man on his farm in North Monaghan and the friends of that man combined to make him a Christmas gift, would the former consider it just to withhold from his employe's monthly compensation a sum equivalent to the value of his present?

We cannot think he would, and this makes it all the harder to understand the logic which he applies to the case of Chief Howard and his assistant.

THE IDLE LIFE OF A REPORTER.

THE COLUMBIA SCHOOL of Journalism is an institution in the United States designed to give the lie to the old truism that newspaper men are born, not made. In that school active reporters are turned out to order while you wait.

The students were given an assignment recently to write an essay on "Journalism in Philadelphia," a fitting topic seeing that the Quaker City is really the American cradle of the art, and were to turn in the fruit of their labor inside of a week. The budding journalists regarded this task as too arduous and promptly went on strike. In actual newspaper work the time allowed for such an assignment would be about two hours, but this would, of course, presuppose some previous knowledge on the subject on the part of the reporter who tackled it. The school of journalism is failing at the very outset of the student's career if it gives the young man or young woman who aspires to the profession an idea that his or her lot will be an easy one when he or she actually gets into harness and is put on the salary list of some daily paper.

In Peterborough the reporters have no such delusions. The number of hours they work, or should work, a day has long ago dispelled any idea to that effect, and the multiplicity of their tasks every day is the last word required to convince them that their life is real and earnest.

The kid-gloved recruits-in-training in the school of journalism should be given light assignments. An essay on "Snakes in Ireland," Honesty in Federal Politics" or "Presidential Stamina in a National Crisis," for example, would about suit them. As there is nothing in either proposition, the subject could be disposed of in a few words without troublesome investigation.

THOSE NATIONAL SERVICE CARDS.

SPEAKING through the Executive of the Dominion Trades Congress, the labor men of Canada have decided to accept Premier Borden's assurance that the taking of a census by the National Service Commission is not a preliminary to the enforcement of conscription. Word has been sent out to the workingmen of the country to fill out the cards that will be distributed this week.

Such a decision is the part of wisdom. The discreet individual, whatever his station in life, will comply with the call of the authorities and supply the desired information. Those who fail to do so are threatened with no penalties, as the Government appear intent on shunning the very appearance of coercion in this matter. The voluntary system is still adhered to.

One thing is certain, however. The powers who have the authority to inaugurate such a movement also have the power to enforce every provision of the plan.

SIR SAM AND CONSCRIPTION.

WHEN SIR SAM HUGHES at Lindsay declared himself as favoring compulsory military training be surprised no one, as that has always been part of his creed. Sir Sam's faith in the armory as an educational force has never been questioned. A favorite expression of his has been that one armory is more to be desired than half a dozen technical schools.

But the ex-Minister of Militia did startle his auditors and the entire country when he said that compulsion should be employed to get men for overseas service. He never held such views while he was in office because all who know the ex-minister are convinced that he would not have hesitated in the matter of declaring himself if he had believed conscription was necessary to win the war.

A few days ago a member of the Borden Cabinet, speaking in Toronto, gave it as his opinion that conscription, if applied in Canada, would mean civil war. Sir Sam Hughes' declaration, following as it does so closely on the heels of an official statement, is specially significant. Is there any attempt to put the Government into a hole? Why have his opinions on this vital issue undergone a change since he has been relieved of the responsibilities of office?

(Toronto Star.)

The owner of a department house in a neighboring city was ordered to pay $65 for a maple tree which he had cut down, not knowing it was city property. It was valued as a standing tree, not for the amount of commercial wood it contained. Those who contemplate cutting down trees should remember that it takes much longer to grow a tree than to build a skyscraper.

CANADA EXPECTS EVERY MAN WILL DO HIS DUTY IN THIS WAR

That we can and will win the war is a belief that we often hear expressed and it is right that it should be so. But it is also right that we should consider the grounds on which the belief is founded and ponder upon the awful results should they prove to be untrue.

We believe that our confidence is well founded because it is based upon our faith in the British race. We know that if Britain and her Dominions organize all their resources, these added to those of our Allies must win the war. We ought to know by now that anything short of this will gravely jeopardize the issue. We believe that the British race will so organize its resources because its history has proved that British character and determination, when once roused, have in the past overcome obstacles that sound impossibilities. And so, arguing from that past, we feel that we must win.

But what if Britain and her Dominions do not organize all their resources? Clearly it is idle to say that the traditional determination of our race warrants the belief that we must succeed if at the same time we are false to that tradition and neglect to do our part to accomplish the result. And can anyone say that we in Canada are as yet straining every nerve to win the war?

Unfortunately the large number of eligible men serving in our shops, attending our theatres, and attending our fall fairs must palpably refute any such claim. And yet these men put into or kept out of the struggle may be sufficient to turn the scale. There was a time when it was urged, wrongly, but with some show of reason, that it was not necessary for every eligible man from Canada to go. That time is past. The daily evidence from every side must furnish convincing proof. But if more proof were needed it is shown by the fact that for the first time in history the Old Land has appealed to Canada to help to furnish men for the navy.

It is as though the shade of Nelson were calling across the years that the greater England of today expects that every man will do his duty and Canada, if she is to be true to her traditions, must respond as the men of Nelson responded at the battle of Trafalgar. For upon that response may depend the future of our country, the future of freedom and the future of civilization.

TOO SWEET TO BE WHOLESOME

(Laura Jean Libby.)

A soft-spoken, over-polite man is sure to appeal to the general run of women. There is flattery in his gaze. He has a way of clasping a woman's hand lingeringly, that stirs the blood in her veins and brings the color to her cheeks, giving her tacitly to understand that she possesses more interest for him than any other woman in the world. Every sentence he whispers in her ear contains covert meanings. For a time this pleases womankind. Gradually, however, it becomes an old story. Instead of continuing to admire the over-polite man she becomes conscious after a while that he is actually silly. He lacks the manliness of other men. In fact, she concludes that he is altogether too sweet to be wholesome.

Even the most polite men never carry politeness to the point of making themselves ludicrous. A young woman told me this story of the incident which helped her to choose a husband from between two ardent lovers, each of whom would not take no for an answer. She had been entertaining both in the parlor one winter evening. One was a sweet, suave young fellow who never forgot the habit of smiling. The other was a plain young business man with no frills about him. At a lull in the conversation she was heartily glad to hear her little brother's voice pipe out in the hall: "Open the door, Nell, I want to come in."

Both men sprang to their feet. The overgracious lover stepped to her side, murmuring softly: "May I not have the pleasure of performing the service of opening the door for this tiny, lily white hnad?" In the meantime the other young man had strode to the door, opened it, caught the youngster in his arms and hoisted him to his shoulder, bearing him triumphantly to his sister and depositing him in her lap. The difference between the two men struck her forcibly. She married the man who had jumped to accomplish things without ado.

Graciousness and sweet words are all very well in courtship's beginning. But they have a fashion of wearing away like gold plate, usually disclosing brass beneath the polish. The over-polite lover seldom makes the kindest and most considerate husband. The bluff, outspoken man is more often than not a diamond in the rough. He doesn't make so many pretensions as to the tenderness of his love. He believes a woman should take that for granted. With him, it is his deeds that count, not soft promises. The soft-spoken genius does not take very well or get far with men. He is of the class that makes dupes of women. The man who is natural is genuine to his heart's core. He who is unnatural comes down to his regular gait all in good time.

EDITOR'S MAIL

"Elector" sends to The Review a letter, in which he discusses the School Board election as it appeals to him. The writer sends in his full name, but not for publication. We cannot publish his letter unless it goes into print over his right name, as it reflects on one particular candidate now appealing to the public for support. Any controversy that The Review has had with that candidate has been open and above board on both sides, and our intention is to maintain it on the same plane until the end.—Ed. Review.

A CUP OF HOT COFFEE.

Following his return from an inspection of the Canadian Y. M. C. A. military branches overseas, C. W Bishop, general secretary of the National Council, thus told of an incident in the Somme area where there are now 35 "Y." branches:

"I went on farther up the line, and in beside that high road along which the troops and lorries and pack trains were moving in constant procession, stood a little dugout which was our branch nearest to the trenches. Outside was a line of soldiers. Our secretary, pointing to them, said, 'That line never stops day or night.' Back in the tent, which I described, they said: 'We close up at nine as far as the canteen is concerned, but usually we have two men on duty all night. We keep the coffee hot all night and invite in the small parties passing to and fro from the trenches, for a cup of coffee and some biscuits.

"And when the boys come home and tell you what a cup of coffee means at that hour of the night, you will remember the words, 'A cup of cold water in the name of the Master.'"

ANECDOTES OF FAMOUS MEN

Greece has loomed large in the newspapers of late, which reminds me somehow of a story I once heard concerning Mr. Asquith, says a writer in Pearsons (London).

No one listening to the Prime Minister's polished diction and easy flow of words would imagine that he, as a boy at the City of London School, was timid and halting of speech and easily flustered.

One day (so the story goes) he was reciting in class, and the lines at which he had arrived ran:

"The Turk was dreaming of the hour
When Greece her knee in suppliance bent."

Young Asquith stuck in the middle of the second line, "Greece her knee," he repeated twice, and then stopped.

His form master smiled grimly.

"Go on, Asquith," he said; "grease her knee once more and perhaps you'll get through next time."

Once upon a time Sir Wilfrid Laurier started to learn to play the flute. One day, however, a canvasser called on him with a new type of gramophone which he wanted him to buy.

"I have a blank cylinder here, Sir Wilfrid, if you'd like to hear yourself speak or sing," he remarked.

The Premier was tempted.

"A—a—h, I don't sing," he observed, "but"—producing his flute—"if you don't mind?"

The canvasser appeared to be only too happy, and the next minute the Prime Minister was waxing red in the face in an attempt to pour "Alice, where art thou" into the receiving hopper.

"There, sir," observed the canvasser five minutes later, as the machine whirred out a reproduction of the flute solo, "that's exceptionally good."

"Is it really like the original?" inquired Sir Wilfrid.

"With your eyes shut, sir, you couldn't tell one from the other. Will you buy the gramophone?"

"No," said Sir Wilfrid sadly, "I'll sell the flute."

Many of the old colored men in the south handle a violin bow with a good degree of skill. One such had an employer in Missouri with similar tastes. One day master and servant were fiddling together, and as they finished the master said:

"You handle the bow pretty well, Tom, but you are always a bar or so behind. Why is that?"

"Out of def'rence to you, majah," said Tom.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

When the world owes a man a living it invariably settles the debt on the instalment plan.

The fool takes things as they come, but the wise guy always goes after what he wants.

In trying to figure out the problem of life most men subtract what they own from what they owe.

The children of the man who made a specialty of sowing wild oats before his marriage will be sure to harvest an abundant crop of advice.

No self-respecting man cares to make love to a girl who makes love to a pug dog.

Even a poor man who hasn't a dollar may be well off as long as he remains single.

It is almost as difficult for a young man to get over a case of love sickness as it is for a woman to get over a barbed wire fence.

PRESENTATIONS TO TWO SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

Messr. Joseph Madill and G. F. Clarke Remembered.

(Special Correspondence.)

FRASERVILLE, Dec. 27. — The Adult Bible Class of the Methodist Sunday School presented Mr. G. F. Clarke with a beautiful fountain pen, accompanied by the following address:—

Mr. G. F. Clarke: We, the members of the Adult Bible Class of the Methodist Sunday School, Fraserville, embrace this opportunity of expressing to you, at least to some degree our appreciation of your efficient service, which you have rendered our class as our teacher.

You may have felt at times that your efforts were of little or no avail, but we wish to assure you that whenever you have taught us, we have been benefited, helped and inspired to a higher and nobler life, and we trust that the seed so carefully prepared and so faithfully sown, will bring forth fruit.

To your scholars you have not only been a careful, painstaking teacher, but a wise councillor and a faithful friend, but we have been improved with the influence of your Christian character and we rejoice in what we believe you are, a Christian gentleman.

We are sorry that you felt that you should resign as our teacher, but we hope you will again resume your labors and teach us, both by precept and example, the way of life.

As members of the class, we take great pleasure in presenting to you this fountain pen, which we trust you will accept, in the spirit in which it is given, as a slight token of our appreciation of the services you have so faithfully rendered.—(Signed on behalf of the class), J. H. Deyell, President; Lila Monclef, Secretary.

On Wednesday, Dec. 28, a quiet wedding took place at the Parsonage, Fraserville, when Rev. W. T. Wickett united in marriage Mr. Walter R. Bennett to Miss Ethel May Spencer, both of Belleville. The next day the happy couple left for Detroit and points west, and on their return they will reside in the township of Thurlow, Belleville.

The Christmas entertainment of the Sunday School of the Methodist Church was held on Thursday evening last. The program was carefully prepared and well rendered and the children and young people did credit not only to themselves, but also to those who trained them.

During the evening a very pleasing event took place, when Mr. Joseph Madill, who has been superintendent of this school for twenty-five years, was presented by the members and adherents of the school with a gold-headed cane, accompanied by the following address, to which Mr. Madill made a very suitable reply.

Mr. Joseph Madill,
Superintendent,
Fraserville Methodist S. S.

Dear Mr. Madill:

The teachers all and scholars
Are filled with deep regret
By your absence from us;
For we do not forget

That you were long our leader
In this our Sunday school,
And that for many seasons
It was your faithful rule

To lead us every Sunday
Both prayerfully and well,
As many of us remember
And all of us can tell.

No, not for one year only,
Nor yet for two or three,
But nigh a quarter of a century
You've proved your loyalty.

And, like a Christian soldier,
With Jesus on your shield,
Right manfully you have battled
And held for Him the field.

And all the little children
Went safely to and fro,
And by your care were guarded
Until, as children grow

To strength before undreamed of,
They had their buckles, too,
And took for theirs your watchword
Of loyal, staunch and true.

And if you grew discouraged,
And if you felt your work
Was overlooked, unheeded,
And felt inclined to shirk,
Yet still you had the knowledge
Your task was but the Lord's,
And that His approbation
Exceeded Earth's rewards.

But, just because we're human,
We find that praise is sweet,
And feel our fellows' cheering
By gift or word is meet.

So, as a feeble token,
Although it's in arrears,
Of loving service rendered
Through many faithful years.

We ask you to permit us
To present this little gift,
And trust, on all occasions,
By it you'll be equipped.

Don't leave it in the corner,
Don't stand it in the hall,
Don't put it in the closet
Beside a camphor ball;

But take it out and air it
And use it on the street,
And take it down to Frazerville
On Sundays, friends to greet.

We wish you a merry Christmas,
Both you and Mrs. Madill;
We wish you a happy New Year, too,
And joys that fully fill

Your hearts the whole year through.
Yes, indeed we do,
Yes, indeed we do.

Signed on behalf of the school,
W. T. Wickett, Pastor,
Jas. W. White, Asst. Supt.,
J. H. Deyell, Secretary.

Too Much Dignity.

Mammy Washington seemed very ill at ease in court. She admitted to the judge that it was her first time on "poleeceman ground." Considerable difficulty was experienced in making her answer questions. She would go just so far and then stop, all afluster.

"There is no need for you to be excited, Mrs. Washington," he said, with a smile. "I'm just a judge and you are just you."

At last the old negress found her tongue.

"Dat's jes' hit, suh," she cried explosively, "I is me, but yo' isn't you, in dem spec's, and wid dat crokay mallet in yo' han'. Ef yo' could fix hit fer to talk dis over in a kitchen, I'd be all right, jedge!"—Case and Comment.

Let the eggs boil ten minutes for a perfect consistency in the white. Then with a tin cutter dipped in cold water press out the little stars.

Oldest Bank in the World.

It is thought that the oldest bank in the world is the Palazzo San Giorgio, on the Piazza Caricamento, in Genoa. This institution has played a prominent role in the history of the Italian city. It was built in the year 1200 by order of Guglielmo Boccanegra, "captain" of the republic of Genoa, and after serving as his residence was the headquarters of the famous company and bank of St. George.

It is held that the modern system of banking sprang from this historic edifice and that the Societa Delle Compere di San Giorgio was the first "limited liability company." The architect of the building was a monk named Oliviero. Although its architecture has undergone a number of changes, the facade still speaks eloquently of the thirteenth century. Its arcades with pointed arches and its windows formed of little columns are exceedingly attractive.—Washington Star.

THAT WASH ROOM

Be Sure to Build One In Your New Home.

COMFORT AND CONVENIENCE.

The Expense Isn't Much Extra, and the Satisfaction Is Great In Comparison—Good Advice About the Furnishings and Location of This Room.

"If you are thinking of building a farmhouse, include a wash room for the men and don't fail to have it supplied with a concrete floor and a good drain."

This is in substance the advice of farm women living in various sections of Wisconsin.

The extra expense, all agree, will not be much—at least not prohibitive. A force pump can be purchased without too great an outlay. The cost of the remainder of the equipment, including tanks, sinks, pipes and drain tiles, depends, of course, on the distance of the water source from the house and the kind and amount of equipment which the owner wishes to install.

A number of Wisconsin farm women were asked for their ideas on the subject in order that their suggestions might be considered in planning the farm home which is to be built on the campus of the University of Wisconsin. These housewives urge the building of the wash room with a concrete floor so that it might be cleaned more easily and thoroughly. It is argued that since the room is to be used six days out of seven by men it should be substantial rather than dainty. It is believed that when concrete can be provided as reasonably as at present the advantages gained in the way of resistance to the ravages of water will greatly overbalance the extra expense.

Housewives consulted on the matter also recommended that this room be provided with hooks where changes of garments, working coats and hats might be kept.

They pointed out, too, that it would be possible for the wash room to double its usefulness by serving as the family laundry. To fit it for such a purpose would necessitate very little additional expense, and the cost of an extra room, extra pipes and another tank and drain to make provision for a laundry room elsewhere would be obviated.

The location of the wash room proved a mooted question and one which could only be decided satisfactorily by the person building. The canvass showed general agreement when considering the question from the standpoint of a good drain, the ground floor rather than the basement being recognized as the most practical place.

A. A. FOWLER FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

NEW BLOOD MEANS NEW ENERGY

In selecting your candidates for the Board of Education, keep in mind that the keynote of progress is renewed life and vigor in the executive bodies that have to handle the business of this growing city.

In offering myself as candidate for a position on this Board, I do so realizing that only a man's best service will meet the growing need for practical business methods in this most important branch of the City's business. My record as a business man for the last fourteen years and a lifelong resident in Peterborough, residing in East City for twenty-five years, is well known to a large number of our citizens, and I trust is sufficient evidence of my ability to warrant your support in my present candidature.

Should I be elected, I promise to weigh most carefully all matters involving expenditure of the city's finances, and to countenance only strictly business methods in undertaking any work being handled by this Board.

Soliciting the support of every progressive voter, I am,

Yours for Progress,
A. A. FOWLER

COMRADESHIP ON THE SOMME FRONT IN FRANCE

Sense of Brotherhood Between French and British Developed by the War---Physique of the French Soldier.

One of the happiest results of the Somme offensive has been the demonstration of the complete unity of the British and French Armies, writes a London Times correspondent from British Headquarters in France. The harmony in command and co-operation in action are, of course, taken for granted. They have been complete from the moment, on the morning of July 1, when the line of blue and khaki leaped unbroken over the parapet of Faviere trench, to the other morning three months later when the British and French entered Combles simultaneously from opposite sides and met to shake hands on the railway line in the middle of the conquered town. Since that day, also, there has never been a moment when they were not literally standing side by side at the point of juncture of the two armies; and there was at least one instance when they took shoulder to shoulder the two ends of the same German trench.

It has again and again been necessary that one army should take a certain position—a copse, perhaps, or ravine, in a fortified position in a trench—before the other could advance on its next objective. Not seldom it was a formidable and unpleasant task that the safety of one Ally demanded of the men of the other; but neither has ever hesitated. Several times each party, having taken a position, has handed it over to the other, and has left to its Ally the work of reverently burying its dead.

These are things which two nations can surely never forget; but better than this unity of action —which, after all, might be but a matter of discipline and command—has been the comradeship, the mutual admiration, and the trust of each in the other's valor and stoutness which has grown up through five months of stern experience. One has seen it demonstrate in a hundred ways, from the grilling noons of August when the men drank from each other's water bottles—precious stuff, too, was water then—to these short, fog-swathed November days when they meet laboring through the mud and shout cheery greetings across the dismal waste. The greetings are probably rarely understood. "Va bien, mon vieux?" calls one. "Not 'arf! Na poo! (Il n'y a plus!) We ain't down-'earted!" comes the reply. It is just as good as if they understood. They are at one except in tongue.

The British "Invasion"

I believe it to be a fact that no single instance has been reported of a fracas between a French and a British soldier. It is extraordinary, and, I think, on the whole more to the credit of the French than of ourselves. It is we who are the foreigners; and, when in rest, our troops possess French villages to overflowing. French soldiers, coming home to those villages on leave, might well find cause of quarrel with the invasion. The British soldier, with all his amazing qualities, is not impeccable. His ways must often be trying to his hosts; and I have wondered whether we could accept the daily presence of an Allied Army with so much good nature as the French accept our presence here. I am certain that if we did, we could not do it with half such charming manners.

To the British out here the French soldier has been one of the most astounding revelations of the war. That he could fight we knew. His dash, his courage, his sensitive honor: these we have always recognised. But how came it that up to the beginning of this war—I believe, up to the beginning of this battle—we supposed the French soldier to be a little man?

For myself—and I have no shame in confessing an error which I believe was national—when I first saw French troops on the march, I thought that they must be some picked battalion. Then, mingling much with the French armies, I found that they were all the same; and how grotesquely these splendid men in blue give the lie to everything that we have ever thought of them! I presume that, man for man and battalion by battalion, the French troops weigh on an average 5 per cent. more than the British. And it is not only their solidity and stature, but the ruddy cheeks, keen eyes, and gallant swing of them as they go about their work. Knowing what one does of the French armies now in the field and of the reserves, one laughs to think what Germany has said of French exhaustion. Not only Germany, but the world is yet going to be surprised by the chievements of French in this war.

It is largely this—the more admiration of the physical man—which in the first place has won the British soldier's respect for his Allies. Their very appearance tells him that they are fighting men. Then he sees them fight and hears of more things than he sees. And the French on their side have been very quick to recognnize the qualities of our men. Sometimes, in talking with French officers, I have thought that they put almost too high an estimate on the British soldier, what chiefly moves their wonder being his amazing equableness of temper under all conditions. He never rises to the effervescence and buoyant ecstacy of the French, but he is never unduly depressed. The conditions which prevailed upon the Somme in the early weeks of this winter, when it was difficult to bring up supplies and do the work necessary to make trenches habitable in the cold and wet, tested human endurance almost to the limit; and never has the peculiar quality of the British soldier shown to greater advantage. Call it aplomb, or sangfroid, or "spleen," or any name that you, and Frenchmen, please; but the best and simplest of all is heroism.

Officers of the Two Armies

The relations between French and British officers are different from those which prevail among the men; but here again I think that the advantage is with the French. The Briton of the "officer class," if the phrase still has a meaning, is a tongue-tied and self-conscious animal, curiously inarticulate in a foreign language, even though he knows it fairly well; and, while the French officer approaches his British "opposite number" with the same unaffected, gay camaraderie which he uses with the comrades of his own mess, the other has insurmountable difficulty in responding. All British officers have a great admiration for the French as soldiers and an immense and human liking for them as good fellows. And they have a huge desire to show their liking, but no notion how to do it. The consequence often is constraint, which does not mar the admiration of either for his fellow, but sends each away smiling quite happily—at the other's "difference." I do not believe that in their hearts the French would like us half as well if we ceased to be so English and became more French. The qualities which they most trust in us are precisely those of which the national awkwardness is the symptom.

Contentedly agreeing, then, to be not duplicates or reflections one of the other, but complements each to each, the French and British Armies have got on amazingly together. The Higher Commands of the two Armies have given the world an example of the perfect co-operation of two Allies in a difficult field. What I believe will have greater importance to the human race in future is the sense of brotherhood which has been developed between two peoples.

News has reached Washington of a reign of terror in the Greek capital.

JAMES MILLOY FIGHTS FIRE AT CLOSEQUARTERS

BLAZE BROKE OUT IN THE BUILDING WHERE NEWSPAPER WAS LOCATED.

The Daily News of Minot, N.D., with which Mr. Jas. Milloy, a Peterborough boy, formerly with The Review, holds a responsible position, has just passed through a serious fire, which destroyed the building in which the newspaper plant was located. A gasoline explosion started the fire.

The News says: The equipment consists of two linotypes, the Duplex press installed by the paper a few month ago at a cost of $8,500, two cylinder presses, two folding machines, power cutter, jobbers and the other smaller machines used in connection with the job department and the newspaper plant. Among the machines caught in the disaster was a stapling machine just received a few days ago and not yet set up. Nine power motors, including the one which operates the Duplex press, are probably ruined by the water.

Nearly a carload of newspaper stock which was stored on the floor where the plant was located was destroyed, and all the job stock suffered a like fate. The loss on these two items to the company will reach something like $4,000. About $1,500 worth of job work, including the directory of the Northern States Power Company, which was under way in the job department, was probably all ruined, necessitating the doing over of the entire work.

The subscription records and books of the concern which were in the business office were saved.

George Taylor, who has charge of the mailing department of the News, was just finishing the work of getting the morning edition of the paper ready for the late trains. He was the only one in the plant at the time, and when he discovered the fire, together with Night Editor James Milloy, Proprietor C. H. Johnston and W. M. Smart, got out all the material it was possible to save, including the records from the business office. Taylor's attention was called to the fire first by the fire whistle and then by the noise of the department reaching the scene.

BANK CLEARINGS

Clearings for week ending Dec. 28, 1916, $472,018; same week last month, $512,746; same week last year, $428,706; same week two years ago, $339,030.

More changes have been made in the French army.

F. Robertson, the noted travelogue man, died suddenly in Colorado.

Funeral of Wm. J. Walsh on Friday

The funeral of William J. Walsh, who died yesterday afternoon in St. Joseph's Hospital of injuries and burns sustained in the fire at the plant of the Quaker Oats Co., will be held from the family residence, 547 Rogers Street, on Friday morning at 8.45 to the Church of the Immaculate Conception and St Peter's Cemetery.

The late Mr. Walsh held the position of foreman in the dry house of the plant, and it was he who first discovered the presence of fire. He was 44 years old.

Deceased is survived by his widow and eight children—one an infant—who are Madge, Leo, Willie, Roy, Lillian, Kathleen, Freddie and Marion; also his mother, and one sister, Mrs. Patrick O'Brien, of Douro. His father died seven years ago.

The late Mr. Walsh was a member of St. Peter's Court, C.O.F.

15 DAYS IN JAIL FOR ASSAULT ON INSPECTOR

HAVELOCK MAN ALSO WAS FINED FOR DRUNKENNESS.

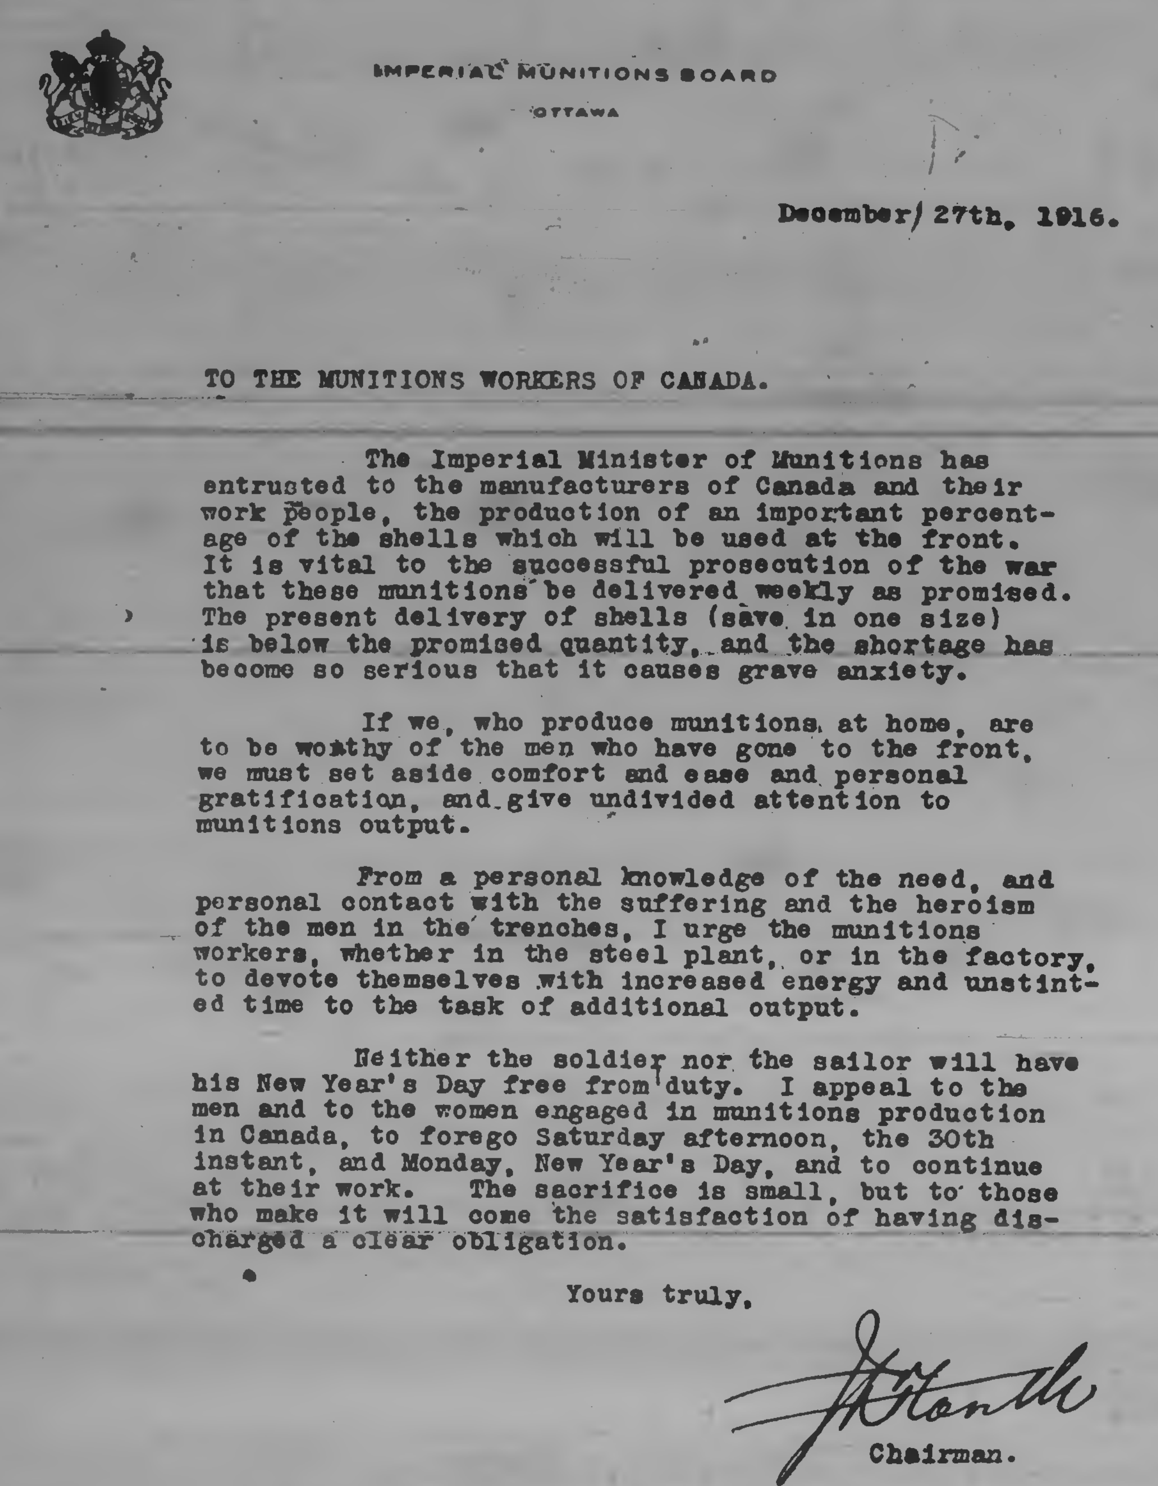
James Hodgins was found guilty by the magistrate of being drunk as charged, and a fine of $20 and $16.82 costs was imposed, to be paid forthwith, and, in default of payment, two months' imprisonment.

On the other charge, that of assaulting Inspector Stewart while in the discharge of his duty, the magistrate found the defendant guilty and imposed a sentence of fifteen days in jail without the option of a fine.

IS A CANDIDATE

Mr. B. F. Ackerman is a candidate for re-election as a member of the School Board, a position which he has held for years without ever being under the necessity of conducting an extensive personal campaign. For the past year Mr. Ackerman has held the position of chairman of the Board. He has always been a warm friend of the city schools and has looked after the educational interests of the residents in the South Ward. When the King Edward School was built he recognized the need of a large structure in that growing section, and subsequent events justified his judgment in this matter. The school is already filled with city pupils; it has been found necessary to turn away the pupils from the townships, and even then additional room is required.

The educational system of Peterborough is the best possible argument that can be used in favor of the return to office of a public spirited citizen who has given so many years of service in building it up.



IMPERIAL MUNITIONS BOARD
OTTAWA

December 27th, 1916.

TO THE MUNITIONS WORKERS OF CANADA.

The Imperial Minister of Munitions has entrusted to the manufacturers of Canada and their work people, the production of an important percentage of the shells which will be used at the front. It is vital to the successful prosecution of the war that these munitions be delivered weekly as promised. The present delivery of shells (save in one size) is below the promised quantity, and the shortage has become so serious that it causes grave anxiety.

If we, who produce munitions at home, are to be worthy of the men who have gone to the front, we must set aside comfort and ease and personal gratification, and give undivided attention to munitions output.

From a personal knowledge of the need, and personal contact with the suffering and the heroism of the men in the trenches, I urge the munitions workers, whether in the steel plant, or in the factory, to devote themselves with increased energy and unstinted time to the task of additional output.

Neither the soldier nor the sailor will have his New Year's Day free from duty. I appeal to the men and to the women engaged in munitions production in Canada, to forego Saturday afternoon, the 30th instant, and Monday, New Year's Day, and to continue at their work. The sacrifice is small, but to those who make it will come the satisfaction of having discharged a clear obligation.

Yours truly,

J. W. Flavelle

Chairman.

"BRETHREN OF MYSTIC TIE" INSTALL OFFICERS FOR 1917

Corinthian and Peterborough Lodges A.F. & A.M. Duly Observe the Festival of St. John the Evangelist.

Yesterday was the festival of St. John the Evangelist, and was a red letter day in Masonic circles when the brethren of Corinthian and Peterborough lodges, A. F. & A. M., observed the anniversary by the installation of the officers for the ensuing year.

The annual event brings out the members of the craft in large numbers and is looked forward to as a proper observance of the day.

The duties of installing master were ably performed by Rt. W. Bro. D. Walker, who was assisted by V. W. Bro. H. Winch, Rt. W. Bro H. Rush, V. W. Bro. R. F. Morrow and W. Bro. J. G. W. Wilson.

The following are the officers for 1917:—

Tyler—Bro. J. Richardson
Trustee—W. Bro. Wm. Hill
Auditors—R. W. Bro. H. Rush, V. W. Bro. R. F. Morrow.

After the installation ceremony the brethren adjourned to the dining hall where Bro. T. H. Hooper had prepared a sumptuous repast.

A toast list was then taken up and was ably conducted by R. W. Bro. John Crane.

"The King and the Craft" was first honored and the National Anthem sung.

"The Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario" was responded to by R. W. Bro. D. Walker.

"The Army, the Navy, and the Volunteers" was replied to by Bro. C. H. Ackerman and Bro. O'Flynn.

"The Absent Brethren" was next honored and Bro. (Rev.) T. H. Mitchell made some most appropriate remarks.

"Our visitors," was responded to by Bro. G. O. Cameron and W. Bro. Ingall.

"The newly installed officers" brought W. Bro. W. R. Morris and W. Bro. G. A. Macdonald to their feet.

"The Retiring Officers" was replied to by W. Bro. Allin and W. Bro. J. M. Roszel.

"The Installing Master" was responded to by R. W. Bro. D. Walker.

Between the different toasts the following brethren contributed to the entertainment:—

W. Bro. H. W. Morphett, W. B. John C. Crane, Bros. V. R. Henry, Frank Whitehouse, R. J. Devey, W. Hutchinson, and J. W. Worth. Bro. F. Whitehouse also gave selections on the Aeolian Vocalion.

The company dispersed with the Junior Warden's toast, "Happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again," and the singing of the National Anthem.

Royal Arthur Officers

The following are the officers of Royal Arthur Lodge, installed Dec. 4th, by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner:

RESTORE THE NATURAL SIGHT

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" COMING

D. W. Griffith's magnificent historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" will come to the Grand for three days, commencing Monday, Jan. 1, with New Year's matinee only. "The Birth of a Nation" is one of the most widely discussed topics in the country. It established an absolutely new art in the realm of the theatre—the art of pantomimic screen spectacle with music. It also created a tremendous sensation because of its vaster and more forceful treatment of the same theme as Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." The consequences of the Civil War in Southern reconstruction are fully dealt with, and the nation reborn is apotheosized. Mr. Griffith, pioneer among directors, managed the stupendous achievement without the aid of dialogue or speech, for motion pictures, accompanying music and effects tell the coherent, logical and moving story.

DAN WHETUNG'S IRE AROUSED

MELEE FOLLOWED IN POST OFFICE AT CHEMONG RESERVE.

Chief Dan Whetung, of the Chemong Indian reservation at Curve Lake, is always on the lookout for the welfare of his followers, and when anything is reported wrong the chief's attention is at once called to it, and, needless to say, it is quickly remedied.

Some days ago a report reached the chief's ears that Mrs. Haines, the school teacher, was instructing the pupils in a way which did not come up to the chief's ideas of being right, so one day in the post office he spoke to the teacher's husband, James Haines, about the complaints made, and his remarks became so heated that he assaulted Mr. Haines. When the melee was on, Dan Jr. took a hand and also used some force on the teacher's husband.

The result was that Haines had the chief and his son before Magistrate Langley on charges of assault. The evidence of both sides was heard yesterday. The testimony was conflicting to a certain degree, but the point at issue was whether a serious assault had been committed and whether Dan Sr. was not doing his duty in looking after the members of his reserve.

D. O'Connell, who prosecuted for Mr. Haines, asked that a severe penalty be imposed, while F. D. Kerr took the opposite view, that if an assault was committed it was only a minor one and should carry a small fine.

Two Fines of $5

County Magistrate Langley delivered judgment this morning, in which he fined each of the defendants $5 and costs, amounting to $8.55.

In passing sentence Mr. Langley found that more than a technical assault had been made. Mr Whetung had overstepped the mark, but at the same time had some aggravation though no legal justification for his act.

The responsible position that the Whetungs held was referred to and this was the first time that they had ever been in court on any similar charge. It was a case of Whetung forgetting himself.

The magistrate hoped that no vindictiveness would result from the charges on either side.

F. D. Kerr questioned the standing of Constable Jacobs and the magistrate withheld his costs until his status is determined.

The request of Mr. O'Connell on behalf of Haines and his wife that the defendants be bound over to keep the peace, was refused by Magistrate Langley. He was not going to make two prominent men suffer such indignity. His worship issued the warning of very severe penalty if the offence was repeated.

A. A. Fowler Has the Business Ability

IS IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH CITY'S DEVELOPMENT.

Business ability is what the city needs in its governing bodies, and the citizens have a chance to recognize an opportunity in the candidature of A. A. Fowler for a seat on the Board of Education. A life-long resident of Peterborough, twenty-five years of which he has resided in East City, and a fourteen years' successful business career, has brought Mr. Fowler into close touch with a great number of citizens and earned for him general recognition for his aggressive business principles.

When the services of a man of the calibre of Mr. Fowler become available for the city gratuitously, the thing to do is to see to it that he gets ample votes to secure his election. Give him such strong support that he will have the satisfaction of knowing that his willingness to help shoulder a portion of the labor connected with the administration of the city's affairs, is fully appreciated.

SHOOTING AT AUBURN REMAINS A MYSTERY.

Constable Archie Moore has in his possession a shot gun which he uncovered in his investigation into the shooting at Auburn in which the young son of A. B. Downer, River Road, was shot in the hip.

The shooting remains a mystery.

such cards and will keep particular account of those residences where cards are not ready for delivery. As collected the letter carrier will inquire the name of the person signing the card and note the same on the outside of the envelope in the left hand corner.

On Friday, Jan. 5, the carrier will make a second visit.

Again on the 6th, a third call.

At the expiration of that week, Jan. 1 to 6, the carrier will report to the postmaster what cards have been collected, and those he has been unable to collect. The postmaster will forward to Ottawa these statements. For the efficient carrying out of this important work the letter carrier will be held responsible for the proper delivery and collection of the cards.

On sheets, supplied, the carrier shall make a record of cards delivered and on another sheet, names of cards not collected or available, and if any cases where it seems impossible to get the cards, note shall be made of the fact for the information of the department.

It is understood that penalties for noncompliance with the objects of the registration have not as yet been prescribed, but the Act, under which the work is being undertaken, is permissive in this respect, and the Governor General is authorized to prescribe, if he is so advised, penalties for nonobservance.

It is hoped that all will cheerfully comply with the orders. The result, if faithfully carried out, will give Canada an accurate idea of the available man power in the country. Of the opportunity to change occupations and assist in augmenting productions, there is no doubt that there is a surplus of labor in many occupations that could be profitably turned into other channels, making for the general national good and efficiency.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

Peterborough market has been quiet after the holiday, and little produce of any kind has moved since Saturday last.

There are no changes in the prices and will not likely be until next week.

Hogs and cattle have remained steady, with a good demand for the former, the price of which remains at $11.75 for selects.

It will be some time before the farmers' wives get over the jolt that was given them last Saturday when the bottom fell out of the turkey market and prices fell from 10c to 13c per lb. Many good birds were taken home, and the local markets are loaded with choice ones of all sizes.

There was no change in the other fowl with the possible exception of geese, which fell off from 3c to 5c per lb.

The egg market has an easier tone, and, while the price is unchanged, a report of an increased supply on the large markets has been received.

Butter can always find a ready sale with prices from 43c to 45c.

The Peterborough Poultry Association will hold their show in the market building here early in the new year.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, Dec. 27. — The usual holiday quiet is being experienced in the Toronto horse trade at present, but the car lot trade with the West is beginning to show more activity, and local dealers expect a fairly lively movement for the rest of the winter and spring. Four loads of mares were shipped to the West from the Toronto district last week, and this will probably be followed by at least as many more next week. The French inspections at the Repository are going ahead. Last week about 125 remounts were secured. Beginning this morning the inspections are billed to continue every day this week. Local trade continues very quiet for the holiday season.

DON'TS FOR KNITTERS.

After the appeal of Mrs. Eleanor McLaren Brown, honorary secretary of the C.W.C.A., London, England, at the splendid gathering held in London, Canada, this week, no doubt many who have never knitted socks will start now. These few "don'ts" are sent for advice from the McKay Home, which, by the way, sent 700 pairs of socks to Hyman Hall this month, every one pronounced perfect by the admirable censor of the sock committee for the English shipment at Hyman Hall:

Don't knit tight.

Don't use fine needles.

Don't rib more than 4½ inches in leg.

Don't make a rib stitch in middle of heel and leg.

Don't make double heels (very important).

Don't knit any cotton in socks.

Don't make pointed toes.

Don't have any knots or ridges.

Don't have any lumps in toes.

Don't sew or darn yarn over the top of the toe when finished.

Don't knit on Sunday. (Pray for God's blessing on the week's work instead, and rest.)

A teacher in an English school had been reading to the class about the great forests in America.

"And now, boys," she continued, "which one of you can tell me the pine that has the longest and sharpest needles?"

Up went a hand in the front row.

"Well, Tommy?"

"The porcupine."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N.B.— Unauthorised publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

W. E. McDonald, a Hamilton man, who was reported killed in the South African war and not heard from by his family since, returned home on Christmas eve.

FOUR SHEETS OF ICE ARE READY AT CURLING RINK

Four sheets of ice are now in splendid condition at the rink on Charlotte Street and a number of the members are having games both afternoons and evenings.

The annual games between rinks drawn by the President and Vice-President, will take place New Year's morning and afternoon. Skips are asked to consult the blackboard at the rink as to the hour they are to play. They are also asked to ring up each member of their rink and get his promise to be present.

The telephone has been installed and everything will be ready for the first schedule games, which commence Jan. 3.

The club will hold a meeting this evening for the purpose of balloting on several new members and electing the skips for the tankard and district cup series.

HOCKEY

The hockey game announced for tonight will not take place as the management of the intermediates was unable to induce a Toronto team to fill in the date made by the T. R. and A. A.; who found it impossible ot come to Peterborough.

The O. H. A. opening here is but a few days ahead. Lindsay intermediates are scheduled to appear here against the 247th Br. team on Tuesday, Jan. 2nd.

The local juniors will not have a home game until January 9th, when the Bowmanville lads will show their wares at Brock street rink.

Sartorially Disappointing

First Girl—So you met Mr. Blank, the famous writer, at the reception. What did you think of him?

Second Girl — Not much. His clothes are quite old-fashioned and I understood he was celebrated for his style.

The Labor Executive members who have been conferring with Premier Borden and Mr. R. B. Bennett on National Service, have advised union members to fill out the registration cards.

Motor Episode

The shades of night were falling fast
As through a sleepy village passed
A youth whose lamps were very dim.
The constable took after him.

He hailed the youth in strident tones,
His honor fined him thirty bones.
A lawyer edged into the case
And got a ten-spot on his face.

"Costs, seven dollars," ran the tale.
He had to pay or go to jail.
The coin for which they shook him down
Made Christmas happy in that town.

The Costume of a Nabob

I went out shopping the other afternoon with a man who had money, says a New York correspondent. He went to one of the classiest shops in Fifth Avenue. One dazzling necktie cost him $8. Five shirts were $95. A pair of lavender pyyamas set him back $32. A dozen handkerchiefs totalled $24.

On my way home I purchased a box of puppy biscuits for my dog and I believe that I got more satisfaction out of my purchase than he did, and my total expenditure was a dime—the tenth part of a dollar.

Satisfied

"I was brought up on a farm, and I'm glad of it."

"Yes?"

"You bet your life. Whenever I think I'm working too hard I just stop and think of the time when I had to get up at four o'clock and work until dark."

He Learned

"Do you know why the bridegroom's attendant at the wedding is called the 'best man'?"

"I did not know before I was married," replied skimpy little Mr. Meek "but very soon afterwards I began to suspect."

DATES OF 1916 THAT WILL HAVE PLACE IN HISTORY

Memorable for Change of War's Tide in Favor of the Entente Powers

REVIEW OF THE YEAR

AUGUST

29. General von Hindenburg was appointed chief of the German staff, the Kaiser having dismissed General von Falkenhayn for the failure of the Verdun offensive.
30. Premier Zaimis of Greece resigned.
31. Turkey and Bulgaria declared war on Roumania.

The most important feature of the news in August was the entry of Roumania into the war on the side of the Allies after many months of uncertainty, the action of King Ferdinand indicating how the outcome of the war looked to a neutral. The Roumanians started off with impulsive campaigns into coveted Transylvania, which were doomed to be disastrous, especially as the Teutons were determined to be revenged at all costs upon the Roumanians. The capture of Gorizia by the Italians marked the successful completion of the first part of their offensive against the Austrians.

SEPTEMBER.

3. Lieut. Shackleton landed in Chile with the survivors of the party rescued from Elephant Island, where they had been marooned.
1. General Smuts captured the capital of German South Africa. The Allied fleet of thirty ships arrived at Athens to guard against the treachery of King Constantine.
   The United States Government decided to interfere between the men and the companies to prevent the threatened railroad strike.
2. The Greek Government surrendered to the demand of the Allies to give up the post offices and the telegraph stations.
3. The French scored a big victory in Picardy.
4. Orsova was captured by the Roumanians.
10. The British captured Ginchy.
    The Russians and Roumanians took Dobric back from the Central Powers.
11. The central span of the Quebec Bridge collapsed and several lives were lost.
12. The Turks were defeated in the Caucasus.
14. The Bowser Government was defeated in British Columbia. The Liberals came into power in that Province with H. C. Brewster as Premier. The voters declared in favor of Woman's Suffrage and Prohibition.
15. Prohibition came into force in Ontario.
    The British crumpled up the great German salient, Martinpuish being among the villages taken.
18. Canadian banks subscribed $50,000,000 to the new war loan.
    Edward Gurney, a leading manufacturer and one of the most prominent laymen in the Methodist Church, passed away.
22. French captured part of the village of Combles.
24. Two great zeppelins were shot down during a raid on Essex.
25. Allies captured villages of Morval and Les Boeufs on the west front.
26. The British and the French took Thiepval and Combles.

The most notable occurrence of the month of September was the first appearance of the now famous "tanks" in the Battle of the Somme. The tanks are one of the outstanding contributions of the British to modern warfare. Their fear inspiring appearance, their power, and the way in which they could walk over the German trenches made them very formidable engines of war, and they were the most discussed subject of the hour. In the Balkans the Serbians began their offensive to recover their country from the invaders, and though they advanced slowly at first, King Peter's soldiers had the pleasure of fighting battles on their own soil against their historic enemies.

During this month the Canadians said farewell to the Duke of Connaught, who had been one of the most diplomatic and beloved Governors-General in the history of the Dominion.

OCTOBER.

1. A zeppelin was brought down near London.
2. The Kalogeropoulos Cabinet resigned in Greece.
8. German submarines caused great excitement in the United States by sinking one passenger and five freighters off Nantucket. The world expected to see Uncle Sam take some manly action, but was disappointed.
9. Serbs crossed the Cerna River.
   Former-Premier Venizelos of Greece reached Salonica to direct the revolutionists who desired to cast in their fortunes with the Allies.
11. King Constantine consented to hand over the entire Greek fleet to the Allies.
    The Italians started a new offensive against the Austrians and netted 8,000 prisoners.
12. The Serbians captured Brod, north-west of Monastir.
15. Sir Thomas Tait resigned the position of Director of National Service in Canada. He was succeeded by R. B. Bennett.
16. Premier Scott of Saskatchewan resigned, giving ill health as the reason. Premier Martin was selected by the Liberal Government to take his place.
17. The Allies made a display of power in Athens to warn King Constantine that treachery would not be tolerated.
19. A large meeting of staunch Presbyterians from all over Canada was held in Toronto to organise to fight against Church Union.
21. A severe storm occurred on Lake Erie, in which 27 sailors were drowned.
22. Count Karl Stuergkh, Premier of Austria, was assassinated by Dr. Friedrich Adler, an intellectual and a patriot.
23. Sir Robert Borden made a strong appeal to Canadians on behalf of National Service. He called attention to the need of another 100,000 men to bring the Canadian army to the half-million mark promised.
24. Joffre's troops recaptured by a sudden blow Douaumont, Thiaumont, and Hohdromont Quarry on the Verdun front.
26. The Serbs captured Cerna Height.
    The Danube bridge at Cernavoda, the greatest bridge in Europe and the only one across the Danube in Roumania, was blown up by retreating Roumanians.
28. Canadians captured the famous Regina trench from the Germans.
31. Pastor Russell died suddenly while traveling.

The civilized world became aware during this month that Germany had decided to make slaves of the unfortunate Belgians. In order to liberate their own men to fight, the Huns carried off the males of unhappy Belgium to work in the mills and to labor in Germany. This re-introduction of slavery into Europe caused something like a shudder of horror in all lands and moved President Wilson to make his first disinterested protest on behalf of the ideals of common humanity. It became evident also that Germany had planned a sweeping revenge against Roumania for siding with the Allies. The Roumanians had made the serious mistake of trying quick and ill-planned offensives instead of preparing strong defensives against any strong Teuton aggression. They were to pay dearly for this error of judgment.

NOVEMBER.

1. Sir George Perley was appointed Canadian Overseas War Minister.
2. The French captured Fort Vaux, thus taking back in less than a week by a brilliant offensive all the ground held by Germans at Verdun.
3. Victor Carlstrom, an aviator well known in Canada, broke the American cross-country record by flying from Chicago to Erie, Pa., a distance of 454 miles, in 4 hours and 16 minutes.
5. Germany and Austria proclaimed new kingdom of Poland.
7. President Wilson of the United States was re-elected.
8. The Russian Dreadnought, Imperatiza Maria, was sunk.
12. The Duke of Devonshire, the new Governor-General of Canada, arrived in Halifax and took the formal oath of office.
13. Sir Sam Hughes resigned from the position of Minister of Militia at the request of Sir Robert Borden.
14. The Australian Government was reformed, with Premier Hughes still at the head, a split having occurred in the Government support when the people of the Commonwealth voted against national conscription.
16. Henry Sienkiewicz, the great polish author and patriot, who wrote the popular Quo Vadis, died at Berne, Switzerland, aged 70.
17. Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, died suddenly. He had been much affected by the news received the previous week of the death of his son at the front.
19. The Serbians captured Monastir, the prize for which the Bulgarians went into the war.
20. Sir John Boyd, the Chancellor of Ontario, died.
20. The hospital ship Brittanica was sunk by a submarine, but no lives were lost.
21. The Braemar Castle, another British hospital ship, was torpedoed.
    Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria died. The Germans captured Craiova in their offensive aaginst Roumania.
22. Hon. A. E. Kemp was appointed Minister of Militia.
    Archduke Francis Charles became new Emperor of Austria.
    Jack London, the American author who made 'red-blood' stories popular, died at the age of 40.
23. Sir Hiram Maxim, the inventor, died.
26. The Allies issued an ultimatum to the King of Greece demanding that his Government should surrender all the guns and munitions in the possession of the Greek royalist army. The Greek revolutionists, who had been duly recognised by the Allies, declared war against Bulgaria and Germany.
27. Amnesty was declared to all Canadian deserters provided they reported inside of a specified time.
    The British refused to allow a safe conduct to the new Austrian Ambassador to the United States.
29. Sir John Jellicoe became First Lord of the Admiralty and Sir David Beatty took command of the British Grand Fleet.
30. General Turner was appointed to command the Canadian forces in England.

Presidential election in the United States proved unusually exciting. With one exception it was the closest race in the history of the Republic. Hughes, the Republican candidate, was declared elected the first day, but when returns from the Pacific Coast were received, Wilson had the majority. Almost a week elapsed after the balloting before the result was definitely assured.

DECEMBER.

1. The Greeks yielded to the demand of the Allies after a day's reign of terror, in which the Allied troops were treacherously attacked.
2. It was announced that the British Cabinet would be reconstructed so as to make it more effective in pressing the war.
5. Premier Asquith resigned, having failed to rebuild the Cabinet. As the Constitution made it necessary for the King to call the leader of the pre-war opposition, Bonar Law was asked to form a ministry, being the first Canadian so honored. He refused the task.
6. Hon. David Lloyd George became Prime Minister of England. Bucharest was evacuated by the Roumanians, who did not defend their capital, and occupied by the Teutons.
   Hon. Robert Borden commenced the National Service Campaign in Canada.
10. The new British Cabinet was formed, with four men forming the new War Council.
12. Germany makes peace offers.
15. French launched surprise attack in Verdun sector, capturing 11,000 Huns and over 300 guns.
17. It was reported that the British army in Mesopotamia had defeated the Turks making an advance towards Kut-el-Amara. This news proved especially cheering, as there had been no activity on this front since the disaster in the spring.
18. It was announced that Canadians would tear up railroads to send the rails to France.
19. Premier Lloyd George announced that German peace proposals were unsatisfactory, and Allies will continue war until victory is won.
    Hon. W. J. Hanna, Ontario Provincial Secretary, resigned and was succeeded by W. D. McPherson, M.L.A.
20. English papers expressed approval of Premier Lloyd George's stand regarding Germany's proposals. The Prime Minister is endorsed for showing that the Allies are prepared to stand firm, without the door to peace being "banged and bolted."

Although the Allies have met with disappointments and local defeats, the situation at the end of the year provides every reason for optimism. The Germans have managed to crush another small nation, but on all the important fronts the Teutons must admit being worsted during the past twelve months. Italy has advanced against Austria; Russia has advanced against Austria and held fast against Germany; both England and France have made important gains on the Western front. Against none of the nations have the Huns made headway. Those are the important facts of 1916. And England is still mistress of the seas.

Another cheering feature of the situation is Germany's offer, arrogant though it may be, to consider peace. The Allies will not permit the war to end until they secure the things for which they are fighting. They started in to make the Germans accept their proper place in the world, and the Huns may be nearer to restored sanity than people know. That is what makes the German peace proposals important. They may be the first faint sign that civilization is going to be restored in the Kaiser's Empire as well as the rest of the world.

For Canadians, the outstanding feature of the year has been the growth of national consciousness. More and more the people of the Dominion are coming to understand what it means to be a "Nation within an Empire." The National Service Movement started by Premier Borden, the growth of recruiting, the characteristic Canadian undertakings and the increased interest in Canadian literature and art all indicate that such is the fact. The year 1916 with all its tragedy has been important in the development of the Dominion of Canada.

Wit and Wisdom

Comparing Expressions

—Did you see the pleased expression on Mrs. Brown's face when I told her she didn't look any older than her daughter? asked Mrs. Radway, after the reception.

"No," said Mr. Radway. "I was looking at the expression on her daughter's face."

Delicately Eliminated

"How did you get Mrs. Bounce out of your bridge club? Did you ask her to resign?"

"No, we didn't like to do that, but we all resigned except Mrs. Bounce and then we all got together and formed a new club."

No Danger

Fond Father—My son is taking algebra under you this term, is he not?

School Teacher—He has been exposed to algebra, but I doubt if he will take it.

A young and somewhat unpopular officer was explaining to his men what happened to a shell after it left the gun. The comedian of the company couldn't refrain from making remarks in an undertone much to the amusement of his pals. This was part of the lesson:

Officer—The shell on leaving the gun, owing to the bore, goes wound and wound.

Voice—The mulberry bush.

Officer—After its momentum is expended gravity draws it to the earth, otherwise it would go on forevah and evah.

Voice—Amen.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Allan and two children of Peterborough have returned home after enjoying the Christmas holidays with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Richardson, Charles street.—Port Hope Guide.

Mayor Duffus and City Clerk Armstrong were in Toronto yesterday on civic business.

Mr. Dan O'Connell, who is leaving the city to practise law at Toronto, will be tendered a complimentary banquet by representative citizens at the Empress Hotel tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Clarke wish to thank all those who showed kindness and all who sent flowers during their recent sad bereavement.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL ENGLISH

The funeral services in connection with the death of the late Samuel English will be held at the family residence, 226 Hunter St., this evening and in the morning the remains will be taken to Omemee per G.T.R., where the funeral will take place under Orange auspices to Christ Church Cemetery.

The deceased was born in Omemee 74 years ago and was a son of the late James English. For six or seven years he was proprietor of a hotel at Keene and later moved to this city. He is survived by his wife his son having died about two years ago. Four sisters, Mrs. Jas. Belford and Mrs. W. Clark of Carberry, Man., Mrs. Hodge and Mrs. Harding of Toronto, and two brothers, John J., of Vancouver, and William H., of Carberry, and Mrs. McNeely, a niece, of this city also survive him.

George MacDonald, who has three sons at the front, has been appointed secretary of the Soldiers' Aid Commission at Brantford.

Herbert F. Tuck, aged 31, who was attending the S.P.S., Toronto, and working in a munition factory, died from pneumonia at his home in Orangeville.

H. G. Wells Predicted "Tanks."

The descriptive writers are at it again. This time it is the mysterious, new armored monster in France that is giving a fillip to their fancies. What the formidable new "animal" is like the public will at present have to infer as best it can from the varying imagery available. Here are a few similes as basis: "Spiny hedgehogs," "giant tortoise," "prehistoric monsters," "an ichthyosaurus," "vast toads," "dry land submarines," "mobile forts," "snorting Billies," "land dreadnoughts," "monster tanks," "the Jabberwock," etc. And their behavior? Well, they behave like "grasshoppers," says one, "like kangaroos," says another.

Mr. H. G. Wells, who had a prophetic vision of these monsters nearly ten years ago, described them then as "something between a blockhouse and a giant dish-cover."

Mr. Wells' description of the creature of his imagination is indeed well worth recalling. "It had the effect," he wrote nine years ago, "of a large and clumsy black insect—an insect the size of an ironclad cruiser crawling obliquely to the first line of trenches and firing shots out of portholes in its back. The thing was putting down its feet one after the other, and hoisting itself farther and farther over the trench. . . . It continued to crawl until it was all over. . . . As soon as a gun came into play the monster turned itself almost on end and made, not for the gun, but for the nearest point on its flank from which the gunners could be shot down."

Rarely does real life plagiarise so slavishly from romance. — London Daily News.

RECEPTION AT EMPRESS HOTEL

AFTERNOON AND EVENING OF FRIDAY, DEC. 29.

RECEPTION AT ——— Associat. Ur:

The ladies of the nurse's supervision committee of the Health Association are making every effort to provide for the comfort and enjoyment of their guests during the afternoon and evening of Friday next, Dec. 29, at the Empress Hotel. Through the kindness of Mrs. Gliddon the fine orchestra of the Conservatory of Music will play during the tea hour and suitable music has been provided for dancing at night. The splendid lobby of the hotel will be at the disposal of visitors during the tea hour and again in the evening for coffee and music. To all visitors a hearty welcome is extended. Come yourself, and pass this invitation on to your friends as the committee is not sending out invitations other than this press notice.

Rev. Father Phelan, president, will say a few words both afternoon and evening on the work of the association.

Tables will be provided for bridge, euchre and five hundred, and the hostess of each table is asked to provide cards, score cards and pencils for her own table. Prizes will be given for the best scores in bridge, euchre and five hundred. To prevent confusion ushers will see that each lady finds her own table on her arrival.

The committee wishes to emphasise the informal nature of the reception; it is not intended in any sense to be a full dress function.

Admission for cards or dancing, 50c. Visitors afternoon or evening, 25c.

All ladies taking tables are asked to communicate as soon as possible with Mrs. Aylmer. Phone 303 or 548 Weller Street.

Cards will commence in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. Dancing in the evening at 8 o'clock.

WRIST WATCH PRESENTED TO PTE. HOPWOOD

LILY LAKE FRIENDS MET TO HONOR DEPARTING SOLDIER.

Last evening a number of the friends and acquaintances of Pte. E. Hopwood, who has enlisted with the Army Medical Service Corps, met at the residence of Mr. Fred. Cann in Smith for the purpose of wishing him good luck in his work for King George and Canada.

During the course of a pleasant evening the following address was read to the departing soldier by Mr. Archie W. Ackison, and on behalf of his friends Mr. John Steinkrauss accompanied it by a handsome wrist-watch:

Pte. E. Hopwood:

Dear Ernest,—Having learned that you are about to leave us, we your friends of Lily Lake felt that we could not let this opportunity pass without expressing to you in some tangible manner what your association has meant to us.

In the few short years during which you have been among us, we have learned to appreciate your many sterling qualities, and in going from us you leave a space in our community hard to fill.

We admire your spirit in determining to take your place and do your part in the cause of liberty and justice, and although you were rejected on former occasions, you persevered and are now "doing your bit." We, your friends, know that you recognised early the direction in which your path of duty lay, and that had you been accepted when you applied before we would have lost you several months ago.

We ask you to accept this wrist-watch as a slight token of appreciation from your friends of Lily Lake. May the wearing of it ever remind you that you have their best wishes for a safe and speedy return among them.

Signed on behalf of your friends of Lily Lake.

Jessie C. Swinton,
Archie W. Ackison,
John Steinkrauss,
Stanley Cann.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a round of games and other amusements, and at the conclusion all joined in singing the National Anthem.

BIG INCREASE IN INDIAN OCEAN FREIGHTS.

Teas during the past seven weeks have advanced at the auction in London, Calcutta and Colombo, from six to ten cents a pound. In addition to this, sea freights have advanced two and one-half cents a pound. Inevitably this means dearer tea for the consumer,—but "SALADA," so far, has only advanced five cents a pound, and, whatever the price at any time, the quality will always re-

CITIZENS OF ALL DEGREE BID D. O'CONNELL GOOD-BYE

Complimentary Banquet Tendered Popular Resident and Eminent Lawyer at Empress Hotel Last Night---Graceful Tributes From Bench, Bar, Clergy, Business Men and City Officials.

MR. Dan O'Connell, who is leaving this city after twenty years' residence, to make his home in Toronto, carries with him to his wider field of endeavor the best wishes of every class in the community. The regard in which he is held was admirably expressed in the splendid banquet which was tendered him by the citizens at the Empress Hotel last night, in which expressions of good-will abounded, and sufficient compliments were showered upon Mr. O'Connell to turn any head less sedate than his. As he himself remarked, so many nice things were said of him that he was brought almost to the point of believing them himself, and that if he was anything like as good a man as he was pictured, then Peterborough was too small a place for him.

The leading citizens of Peterborough attended the banquet and all classes were represented. There were lawyers in all parts of the dining-room, ministers of different denominations, business men, doctors, and municipal office holders, for, although the affair was initiated by members of the legal profession, it was representative in every sense. Judge Huycke was toastmaster and discharged the duties of that position with his usual grace and tact. Seated at the head table with him was Mr. O'Conusual grace and tact. Seated at the head table with him were Mr. O'Connell, the guest of the evening; Mayor Duffus, the vice-chairman; James Kendry, ex-M.P., and R. R. Hall, ex-M.P. At a table to the left, Rev. E. G. Peever and Rev. Fr. Phelan broke bread together and held converse in a truly fraternal spirit, a fact which did not escape the notice of Toastmaster Huycke, who remarked that he was sure the intercourse would do them both good, even though the benefit came rather high, at the cost of losing so estimable a citizen as Mr. O'Connell.

Every speech made was filled with encomiums of Mr. O'Connell. He was praised by his legal brethren from the Judge down, by Fr. Phelan, his pastor, by the clergy, who recognised in him a citizen of worth, and especially by men who have labored with him in patriotic work ever since the war broke out.

The speech of Mr. O'Connell was, of course, the event of the evening. Always noted for his eloquence, his address last night will live in the memory of his hearers as one of the best he ever uttered. He gracefully expressed his appreciation of the many kind things that had been said of him, spoke feelingly of the thought of parting from so many friends, and in a splendid peroration dwelt on the crisis through which the Empire is passing. While he realizes that the danger is not yet over, he has no fear of the final result.

To. Mr. Joseph Wearing's executive and organizing talent is largely due the success of the function. There was not a hitch in the entire arrangements. The bill-of-fare was all that the most fastidious taste coold desire, and the service was perfection itself. The oratorical program was punctuated by choice musical selections. Mr. Douglas Carlysle sang two patriotic solos, and Herbert Payton and Fred Waino, of the Band of the 247th Battalion, rendered cornet selections. Mr. John Allan accompanied on the piano.

The Toast List

It was 8.30 when the banqueters had reached the coffee stage of the feast, and then Toastmaster Huycke in a few admirably chosen words proposed the toast of "The King," after which the audience joined heartily in singing the National Anthem. Lt.-Col. Ackerman proposed the toast "Canada," speaking of the danger through which the country is passing, the struggle for national existence now in progress and the need of effort now as never before required.

Responding to this toast Mr. James Kendry spoke of the greatness of Canada, a country great financially, and in everything; a country, too, proud of the men she has sent out to fight. He congratulated Mr. O'Connell on the representative nature of the gathering turned out to do him honor, and which was a compliment to the man, who was deservedly popular with every class in the community.

Mr. R. R. Hall also responded to the toast. The struggle so far as Canada is concerned demands unity of purpose. In this respect Peterborough was a model for the rest of the country for here all creeds and other differences had been sunk in one great common purpose. Mr. Hall believes that all the people of this country do not appreciate the liberty that they have enjoyed ever since responsible government was secured. The colonies in all parts of the Empire have made this war their own. All are fondly attached to Great Britain. The Empire has a function to discharge on behalf of the human race and that is to bring liberty to the entire civilized world.

Referring to the guest of the evening, Mr. Hall said that his removal to Toronto was in itself an evidence of the success he had already met with in his profession. Any other business could be successfully conducted in smaller cities, but the best of lawyers must locate in the larger centres. He wished Mr. O'Connell every success and was satisfied that he will carry with him the best wishes of everyone in Peterborough.

Judge Huycke's Graceful Tribute

Judge Huycke spoke of the high professional attainments of Mr. O'Connell. His strength of character has been an inspiration to many. He is not only a leader among the profession in Peterborough, but in the province as well, one of the greatest lawyers of Ontario. He thanked Mr. O'Connell for the assistance he had frequently rendered him, although, of course, he did not always follow his advice. The judge has heard arguments in many courts, but some that Mr. O'Connell has submitted would be a credit to any tribunal in the country.

The younger members of the bar should strive to emulate Mr. O'Connell. The secret of his success was not his natural ability or his education, although in both these respects he was well equipped; but it lay in his unswerving and untiring industry. When he took a case he made himself the master of its every detail instead of doing what so many lawyers do—putting their trust in Providence, in the judge, or in both. Peterborough's loss will be Toronto's gain, although neither may yet realise what Mr. O'Connell's removal may mean to them.

He has the kindliest feelings for Mr. O'Connell and knows that there are bright days ahead of him yet. He has not only been prominent in his profession but in patriotic work and every citizen will wish him God speed, extending the same good wishes to his better half and his splendid family, whose removal will leave a social gap in the city that will be hard to fill.

At the conclusion of the judge's remarks the audience joined in sing-

HON. T. CHASE CASGRAIN DIES OF PNEUMONIA

CONTRACTED A CHILL ON HIS RETURN FROM NEW YORK.

ILL TEN DAYS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 29. — Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster-General, died this morning after several days' illness of pneumonia. He contracted a chill on the way home from New York ten days ago. He had passed a fairly good night, but at 7 o'clock this morning took a turn for the worse and sank rapidly.

SAMPSON IDENTIFIED AS THE "MR. BROWN" WHO MADE SALE OF CATTLE

R. McKelvie Who Bought Cattle and Boy Employed by Sampson Give Important Evidence at Trial.

R. McKelvie, who bought cattle from a man whom the Crown claim was Clarence Sampson, and Hector McArthur, who was employed by the same man, gave the chief evidence at the trial of Clarence Sampson today. The prisoner is charged with having stolen cattle in Dummer township.

Both witnesses identified Sampson as the "Mr. Brown" with whom they had dealings. Mr. E. G. Porter, of Belleville, is defending the prisoner.

The first case proceeded with was that of stealing two steers from Arthur E. Carveth.

A. E. Carveth, sworn, stated that he lived in Dummer and was a farmer. He kept a number of cattle and pastured them on Stewart Clydesdale's pasture land on the 5th concession of the township. There were 12 of them placed there, but only ten of them came back. He had never seen the other two steers since. One was a grey roan and the other a black and white one. They were marked on the left ear with a hole made by a wad cutter for a 12-gauge gun. The cattle were missed first about Oct. 1, shortly after he had heard about his neighbors' cattle being missed. He felt sure they had been taken from the field as the cattle had been pastured there for two years and never strayed before.

He had identified the hides in London, Ont., at Hyman's Tannery, where he had gone with Inspector Boyd and Mr. Clydesdale. Five hides had been positively identified by Mr. Clydesdale and himself from the natural markings and the holes in the ears.

The hides were produced in court and the witness had no difficulty in picking the hides of his cattle from the five exhibits.

"I identify the natural markings and the holes punched in the ears," said the witness.

Cross-examined by Mr. Porter, witness stated that others had grey roan steers like his and other people could use the artificial mark he had made.

"I can pick the hides from natural markings anywhere; I picked them out of 45 hides in London," was the positive answer of the witness to a query of Mr. Porter.

Mr. Carveth could not say as to whether a whole punched in an ear of an animal would change in size two years later.

The fences around Clydesdale's lot were in fairly good condition. None of the cattle missed from the lot had come back.

To Mr. Hatton witness stated that he had never seen two cattle of the same breed and age that had not some distinctive, natural mark. He had never given anyone authority to take the animals away.

From "Mr. Brown"

R. McKelvie of Campbellford testified that he had bought some cattle in October. He had bought nine head on Oct. 4 from Mr. Brown, who had driven to his farm in the morning. He had not seen him before. The witness went back to Trent Bridge with Brown and examined the cattle. Brown drove a grey horse, which was left in his stable. Hector McArthur went with them to Collin's farm, where the cattle were. He bought the cattle after less than half an hour dickering. He paid $2 on them and Brown and the boy started to Campbellford with the cattle. He paid Brown cash for the cattle in the post office, and got a receipt for the money, signed W. A. Brown. He could not remember how Brown was dressed.

Prisoner Identified

He identified Sampson as the man who had sold him the cattle under the name of Brown.

Mr. McKelvie was asked by Mr. Hatton regarding a telephone conversation at his home, but objection was made by Mr. Porter, and sustained by the magistrate.

Asked what he had said to Sampson after he left the telephone witness could not remember.

In the cross-examination Mr. McKelvie admitted speaking to a man by mistake, and knew of other people doing the same thing. The prisoner in the box was not dressed like the man Brown. Brown did not have a moustache on like the defendant has. He identified the prisoner by his eyes and his ears. There was something peculiar about them. He was quite positive that Sampson was the man. There was a possibility of his being mistaken, but to the best of his opinion Sampson was the seller of the cattle.

He had been shown the defendant in the cells but could not identify him there. He had met him yesterday on Water Street with an officer and had expected to meet him on the street. He had been told to watch for the prisoner when he was taken out for exercise and see if he could make identification positive.

He was more certain today than ever that Sampson was the man who went under the name of Brown.

Mr. McKelvie left the court to see a horse and said, "It resembles the horse that Brown drove, but I would not say."

Further Identification

Hector McArthur, a boy of 11 years who lives in Campbellford, told of going with Mr. McKelvie frequently this year driving cattle and other work. He remembered driving cattle in October for a man by the name of Brown, whom he had met at McKelvie's house. Brown told him that the cattle were at Trent Bridge and offered him 50c to drive them. The cattle had been taken to McKelvie's but he had got a pain in his side and was taken into the auto. Brown had gone home with the witness to get change for a dollar, but could not get it.

Brown had overalls on and a red handkerchief round his neck, but did not have a moustache. He had seen Brown in the bathroom in the Peterborough Police Station last week. Even with the moustache on he could identify him. He had also met him on the street with another man.

He could identify him while walking because he "turned in his toes."

Pointing to the prisoner in the box, he identified the prisoner Sampson as the man Brown.

In cross-examination the boy described the features of the prisoner and stated that Constable Moore had brought him to Peterborough to see

WITNESSES ABSENT WHEN COURT OPENED

At the trial of Clarence Sampson this morning the opening of the court was delayed by the non-appearance of a number of the Crown witnesses. Magistrate Langley gave notice of his intention to issue bench warrants for offenders in future. Witnesses must be on hand at the hour stated in the subpoena.

GERMAN INFANTRY ATTACK BROKEN UP BY THE FRENCH

A Few Hostile Troops Entered One Trench.

ON VERDUN FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 29. — German troops last night delivered an attack in strong force on a three-kilometre front between Hill 304 and Dead Man Hill, to the northwest of Verdun. The attack was broken by French infantry and machine gun fire, but one of the French trenches south of Dead Man Hill being penetrated, and this by only a few hostile troops. The attack was delivered after long and violent artillery preparations.

North of Verdun, on the right bank of the Meuse, a strong German reconaissance was dispersed east of Hardaumont.

THE BERLIN VERSION

BERLIN, Dec. 29.—On the Verdun front yesterday German troops transferred from the Somme front entered French positions on Hill 304 and on the southern slope of Dead Man Hill, the War Office announces.

The Germans advanced to the second and third French positions, capturing seven machine guns. Several French counter-attacks were repulsed. The Germans brought back 280 prisoners.

DOUBLE OUTPUT OF METAL PRODUCTS CO.

Montreal Capitalists Take Over the Plant Which Will be Enlarged to Meet Demands.

May Establish Drop Forging Plant in Peterboro.

An important announcement made today by Mr. G. N. Gordon, acting for the agent of Montreal capitalists, is that the munitions works of the Metal Products Co. have been taken over by Montreal interests, who will continue the manufacture of shells at the plant and double the output, in an effort to meet the appeal of the Imperial Munitions Board for a greater output of munitions. This will necessitate the plant being enlarged.

The deal was completed today and the purchasers are in possession. They have munitions plants elsewhere in Canada, including a plant for the manufacture of explosives at Renfrew.

Mr. Gordon said the company also have in mind the establishment of a drop forging business, here or elsewhere, possibly at the property taken over, or at some other location in the city.

It is understood that Mr. Harold Gagnier, of Toronto, who started the Metal Products Co. here, is to become a member of the Imperial Munitions Board, and for that reason is giving up his manufacturing interests.

About 300 hands are now employed at the plant.

The new company may take over the building formerly occupied by the Lundy Shovel and Tool Works.

LIQUOR CASE WAS HELD UP

PROSECUTION WANT TO SECURE MORE EVIDENCE.

County Magistrate Langley was in Havelock yesterday to hear the charge brought against William Anderson by Inspector Stewart for a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act, but at the request of Crown Attorney Hatton the case was adjourned until January 11th to give the prosecution the opportunity to get further evidence.

G. N. Gordon, who appeared for Anderson, was ready to proceed with the case.

A few weeks ago a charge against Anderson for a violation of the Act was dismissed.

FIGHTING TO GAIN HEIGHTS

Forces of the Austro-Germans Are Advancing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 29. — Austro-German forces continue to advance at several points on the Moldavian frontier, says a Russian official statement. They are fighting for heights held by Russians and Roumanians east of Seumezo.

35,000 TEUTONS ATTACK.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 29. — Violent fighting took place between Russian troops and a force of the Central Powers yesterday in Central Roumania. In the region of Samara a Teuton force 35,000 strong launched an attack on the Russian lines. The battle continued until evening, when the engagement slackened.

In the sector of Rimnik Sarat and Boldu all attacks of the invader were repulsed by Russians.

REACH DUMITREST.

BERLIN, Dec. 29.—The War Office announces German and Austrian troops captured by storm several positions lying one behind the other on the Transylvanian-Roumanian border, taking several hundred prisoners and several machine guns.

Bavarian and Austrian troops commanded by Gen. Krafft von Delmensingen on von Mackensen's front broke the strong resistance of the enemy in the mountains and reached Dumitresti, 20 kilometres north-west of Rimnik Sarat. The right wing of this army advanced north-eastward between the Rimnik sector and the course of the Buzeu, captured tenaciously defended villages and gave the retreating Russians no time to settle themselves in prepared positions in the lakes sector. In these, prisoners brought in yesterday numbered 1,400 Russians, and booty—three cannon and several machine guns.

In Dobrudja, Ratchela has been captured.

RUSSIAN SHIP STRIKES MINE

ONE PASSENGER AND TWO OF CREW DROWNED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The Russian steamship Kursk, bound from Archangel for New York, with 126 passengers aboard, was sunk by a mine on Nov. 29 off Kirkwall, Scotland. One passenger and two members of the crew were drowned while the lifeboats were being launched.

FIGHTING FAVORABLE FOR ITALIANS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Dec. 29. — On the Trentino front artillery was especially active, says today's war official announcement, and small encounters in the neighborhood of Sano, in the Adige Valley, resulted in our favor.

In Gorizia area the enemy shelled the town and its suburbs without causing much damage.

On the Carso artillery continued to be active. Our batteries shelled hostile columns moving along the Bristovizza-Selo road. A small attack attempted by the enemy on positions we occupied recently south of Monte Faiti, was repulsed promptly by us. Hostile aircraft dropped bombs on Alla, in the Lagarina Valley, and on Tezze in the Sugana Valley. No victims or damage have been reported, and the raiding aeroplanes were driven back everywhere.

It may take nine tailors to make a man, but one Christmas is enough to break him.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1916

MR. DAN O'CONNELL.

MR. DAN O'CONNELL, one of Peterborough's most prominent and popular citizens, after a residence of over twenty years, is about to remove from the city to Toronto, and his departure will cause universal regret. The banquet tendered him at the Empress Hotel last gniht, as well as the other tokens of regard which have been extended to him, express in a measure the esteem in which he is held by all classes. A bright and successful lawyer, a leading member of, and one of the most active workers in, the Patriotic League, a public-spirited citizen who interested himself in every question in which the welfare of the people was involved, is about to enter a wider field, and his removal to Toronto is an evidence of the success which he has met with in his profession.

Daniel Patrick Joseph O'Connell, for that is the full name conferred upon him by his parents at baptism, comes honestly by the loyal devotion to the British Empire for which he has been noted, especially as a patriotic speaker and worker since the war broke out. He was the son of an Irish patriot who was in the British army, and his father's regiment was stationed at Cape Town, South Africa, in 1863, when the subject of this sketch was born. Hhe graduated at the Toronto University in 1890, and nine years later was married to Miss Mary Mahoney. Previous to coming to Peterborough, he practised his profession for some years in Penetanguishene.

As a lawyer Mr. O'Connell has long stood at the top of the profession as a member of the local Bar, and has enjoyed a Dominion-wide reputation by reason of important cases which he has successfully handled. Last spring he was elected a bencher of the Ontario Law Society by a vote of the members of the legal fraternity throughout the Province. This is an honor which has come only twice to a Peterborough man since the organization of the society.

The office of bencher to which Mr. O'Connell was elected a year ago is no empty honor. The fact that the choice of thirty benchers rests with the lawyers throughout the Province is a guarantee of the high standing which must be held by the successful contestants. The Law Society has practical control of the management of the profession in the Province, and the benchers are the executive officers. Candidates for admission to the Bar must pass muster before them, rules regulating the conduct of members of the profession are framed by them, and they also decide upon such changes as may from time to time be deemed necessary.

Mr. O'Connell has for years had an extensive practice in this vicinity, as well as appearing in outside cases, but his energies have not been wholly devoted to the law. He has been an all-round useful citizen, popular with all classes in the community. In politics he is a Liberal, and in 1904 his name was prominently mentioned in connection with local cabinet honors. He has been a leader in church work, especially in the temperance activities of the T. A. S.

But Mr. O'Connell will be most kindly remembered by the people of this community for the patriotic work he has done ever since the war broke out. No member of the Speakers' Patriotic League has been more zealous and efficient for the cause, and no orator has travelled more extensively throughout the district than he, appearing on platforms everywhere. There was never any mistake as to his devotion to the Empire. He never failed to impress upon his hearers the liberties, civil and religious, that were impartially guaranteed to all races and creeds by the sovereignty under which we live. In this patriotic work his hands were strengthened by a personal military record, for in the Northwest Rebellion of 1885 he had a part with the soldiers of the Queen.

When it was decided to raise money for patriotic purposes by taxation instead of by voluntary contribution, it was Mr. O'Connell who drew up the plan upon which it is proposed to proceed, a plan so perfect in every detail that it is being adopted by other municipalities throughout the country.

For Mr. O'Connell, his friends hope and believe that the best part of his life, the highest measure of his success, is yet to come. In his new field of endeavor he will find greater opportunities for the exercise of the brilliant attainments that have made him what he is today.

HOW RECRUITING IS INJURED.

IMMEDIATELY after the Colonial Secretary announced that the British Government had approved from the first the arrangements made by the Canadian Government with respect to nickel, several newspapers that had criticized the Canadian Government expressed themselves as being perfectly satisfied.

These newspapers showed that their concern in the first instance was genuine and that they were not entirely lacking in a sense of responsibility. One or two other newspapers, however, continued their criticism. Such newspapers are actuated only by a desire to injure recruiting as well, and, to that extent at least, help the enemy.

Nothing could be more inimical to recruiting. Nothing is more malevolent than the effort to make Canadian people believe that there is any chance of their sons, husband, or fathers being killed by Canadian nickel shot from German rifles. One newspaper has already been suppressed for the statement that no further recruiting should be done in Canada. That statement was innocuous in comparison with the allegations reiterated by these few journals after the clear and unequivocal denial of the British as well as the Canadian Government,

WHY ELECT MR. GORDON?

WHY SHOULD THE VOTERS be asked to support Mr. Gordon for the School Board while there are other candidates equally capable concerning whose right to hold the office there is no question? Even if Mr. Gordon were returned at the head of the poll there will be, in all probability, an attempt made to unseat him on the ground that he cannot legally sit as a member of the Board while at the same time holding the office of city solicitor.

Mr. Edward Meek, K.C., who conducts the legal department of the Mail and Empire, is generally conceded to be one of the greatest authorities on municipal law in the Dominion. A short time ago Mr. Meek was asked to give an opinion on just such a point as the one urged against Mr. Gordon's candidacy. This was his answer:

> A city solicitor is an officer of a corporation insofar as the Municipal Act and the bylaws of the corporation make him a municipal officer. The High School Act says: "Any person who resides in the High School district and who is not an officer of a municipal council shall be qualified to be a High School trustee."
>
> It will be noted that any officer of the municipal council is disqualified from being a member of the Board of Education. The word "officer" is not defined, but I think it may be assumed that any person doing work for the municipal corporation and receiving a salary for his services is an officer of that corporation.

Mr. Gordon receives a salary of $1000 a year for his services as city solicitor. He is in the employ of the Council, and, according to the above ruling, is a city official, and as such is not qualified to sit as a member of the School Board.

Why, then, run the risk of legal proceedings by electing to the School Board any candidate, however fitted for the position, concerning whose right to sit there can be any question?

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS in Peterborough, taking one year with another, arouse little more public interest than the annual show of the local chicken fanciers and infinitely less than that which is excited by the coming of a well-knwon play to the Grand Opera House. Why should an event of so much moment to the welfare of the people be regarded with so much indifference?

The newspapers are to a large extent to blame. They have for years steadfastly refused to discuss the issues or the candidates, largely perhaps as a matter of self-interest and from a fear of making local enemies.

The personnel of a city council is of more importance to the residents of Peterborough than is the composition of either the Legislature or the Dominion Parliament. And yet, when an election is held for either the local papers valiantly gird up their loins and rush into the thick of the fray.

The paper that wil remain silent with regard to the mayoralty candidate or any other man seeking public office in Peterborough will fearlessly bombard a member of either the Provincial or Dominion Cabinet for his sins of omission and commission, real or existent only in journalistic imagination. It is safe to do this as no patronage is involved. This policy is in line with that of the cautious—it may be spineless—preacher who will close his eyes to the evils of the day and the sins that so easily beset the members of his congregation, while he lashes without mercy the many slips of David and the Israelites of old, and holds up as a terrible example the hard-headed prophet Jonah. The dead do nothing well and are, besides, incapable of reprisal. Those so remotely passed away have none so poor as do them reverence, no friends to come to the defence of their reputation.

Politics are supposed ot cut no figure in a municipal election. This is regarded as the ideal in civic campaigns, but perhaps it is after all considerable of a myth. Let the people be honest with themselves as they consider the matter. In other cities there is no profession made as to political independence. Local elections are fought out largely on party lines, and this does not mean an inferior class of candidates. It does arouse interest in the campaign and gets out the vote. Public meetings are held and the issues are discussed. The electors have an oportunity to size up the various aspirants and to make their selections accordingly.

Infuse a campaign in this city with a dash of politics and watch the result. The people immediately become interested. No one ever knew such an election to be regarded with so much indifference that it was permitted to go by default. When a candidate makes a local office a stepping stone to a higher place, when his object is mainly to maintain himself in the spotlight for a purpose still in the future, he immediately becomes the storm centre in the election, the man whose fate is watched and who calls out the vote.

Other things being equal, such an ambition on the part of any man is not only permissible, but is to be commended. The highest honors are most safely reached by easy stages.

HON. GEORGE TO LLOYD GEORGE.

THE MOST AMAZING and amusing contribution to current political and military literature is the cable sent from Toronto by Hon. George Graham to Hon. David Lloyd George saying that "Canadian Liberalism lines up beside you. The prosecution of the war to a successful completion is the first consideration of every true Britisher."

We have no quarrel with the substance of the cable, but the significant feature is the manner in which it is given out to the press. It says that the cable was sent "On behalf of the Liberal party of Canada by the Hon. George P. Graham, M.P., in the absence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who is conducting a recruiting campaign in Quebec."

Was not Sir Wilfrid quite as "present" as Mr. Graham? Was he not even nearer to Lloyd George at Quebec, than Mr. Graham was at Toronto?

THE WICKEDNESS OF IT.

NOT ONE OF THE MOST active agitators of the nickel question has a son or a brother at the front. But the men whom they represent as furnishing Canadian nickel to Germany to be sent back into the bodies of Canadian soldiers are represented by sons in France: Premier Hearst, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. W. J. Hanna and Hon. I. B. Lucas.

There is no danger of any near relatives of the agitators being killed at the front, and their concern and alarm is only simulated for political purposes. It is wicked, but what do they care?

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

When I met General Smuts for the first time, nothing impressed me more than his remarkably piercing eyes, says a correspondent of The Daily News. They are pentrating points of steel. They dart and flash and give you the uncomfortable feeling that you are being searched and probed to the depths of your being.

General Smuts is fair, as fair as a Viking. He has a thin, pointed golden beard; the forehead is high and clever; the nose is somewhat large, but the whole expression of the face is open and pleasing. Yet the eyes dart fire.

When we met in the tea-rooms of the House of Assembly, Cape Town, he was preparing to take charge of the operations in German East Africa. His eagerness to get away was almost boyish.

No man has entered the field to "do his bit" for King and country with more enthusiasm or with more passionate loyalty than this one-time enemy of ours. His gratitude to Great Britain is deep and strong. He does not care to be thanked for his loyalty.

"What else could we do than what we have done?" he asked. "Only one course was possible after England's treatment of us when we were conquered.'

General Smuts is one of the biggest intellectual forces in the Empire today. His mental powers are phenomenal. No more magnificent brain is being exercised on the field of battle. He is only 46, but he has been "doing things" for years. From his father's farm at the Cape he went to the Cape University. At Cambridge, later, he took a double first in the law tripos. In the Transvaal, President Kruger made him State Attorney when he was but 28 years old.

When the Boer War broke out Joubert made him a commandant as soon as he stepped into the field. His quick brain saw that raiding tactics were likely to cause the British most trouble. His mobile column darted hither and thither, and his lightning-like movements were as aggravating as they were mystifying. He was soon made a general. He was not thirty then.

One day he suddenly appeared at the head of his horsemen out of the Namaqualand Desert, and took Concordia, that busy little mining town, before some of the people knew that Boers were within a hundred miles.

Through it all, he was an honorable foe. When the peace treaty was signed he became a staunch loyalist. When the grant of self-government was made to the conquered states he stepped into the front rank of South African politicians. Side by side with his intimate friend and colleague, Louis Botha, he worked for the good of his country.

He is a man of amazing resource. In connection with the suppression of the rebellion and the carrying through of the campaign in South-West Africa he was Kitchener, Sir William Robertson and Lloyd George rolled into one.

He has been likened to Kitchener for his lack of human qualities, but those who know him best are aware that he is no human machine. It is true that where Botha draws men by the cords of affection, Smuts wins them by the subtle magnetism of his mind, but he is a happy husband and a father of delightful children.

"MODEL SALOONS" FOR CHICAGO

The saloons of Chicago are under municipal control and they have become the headquarters for all the political ward heelers in the city. So rank has grown their influence in civic affairs, the wide-open portico has created so much scandal that there is now a demand for reform. It is felt, however, that public sentiment is not in favor of local option. A committee was appointed to recommend changes in the license system. The report of the body, just published, has been followed by a special message from Mayor Thompson to the City Council, in which he recommended that the saloon license fee be increased from $1,000 to $1,500 a year.

The ideal saloon, and the saloon of ideals, as well as profits, was pictured by Ald. John Toman, chairman of the liquor commission, and by Robert J. Halle, secretary of the National Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.

A model saloon as viewed by Ald. Toman, should be:

A saloon into which you might take your wife and children with perfect safety and decorum.

A saloon which would not necessarily dispense whisky, but perhaps only beer and wines, whisky to be sold only under a special license.

A saloon without a bar, all drinks being sold at tables.

A saloon where husbands and wives, beaux and sweethearts might pass a sociable hour listening to a concert in which the world's masterpieces would be rendered, a concert sans ragtime or cabaret features.

A saloon owned and operated by a law-abiding American citizen—one who has earned a standing in the community equal to that of the grocer, the butcher, the druggist and even the clergyman.

"There are saloons in the outlying districts of Chicago, German places, many of them, which are as clean as a whistle," said Ald. Toman. "Men are not afraid to take their wives and children there. These places are run on the same system as the beer halls in European countries— countries which have astonished the world with their national efficiency, sobriety and law abiding capacity. Such establishments are of positive social benefit to the community, not a detriment like the typical American barroom."

Would Curb Treating

"The treating habit at least should be curbed in the model saloon," said Mr. Halle. "The custom of the bartender's 'buying back' in order to accelerate the flow of drinks is an evil that should be eliminated. However, I do not see how the beer hall, with tables, can supplant the bar as long as landlords expect three or more times as much rent from a saloon as from any other business. A loop district store which the owner was unable to rent for $150 a month is now paying him $600 because a bar occupies the place.

"The model saloon will be divorced from politics, but the police and the courts must be removed from politics at the same time. At present whenever a saloonkeeper is 'nipped' by the law he runs to a politician and soon the wicked circle of politics is in operation."

Mayor Explains $1,500 Fee Plan

Mayor Thompson gave reasons why he advocated a yearly license of $1,500 for saloons.

"Most of the trouble which the police must handle and the taxpayer pay for is caused by the saloons," he said. "Although the saloon license is $1,000 a year, the ultimate cost to taxpayers is four times this amount."

Mayor Thompson's recommendation was referred to the committee on license, the chairman of which, Ald. Toman, said be didn't know how many saloons a $1,500 license yould pnt out of business in Chicago, but that he was certain it would be "a whole lot.'

RESIGNS AFTER SIXTEEN YEARS AS TWP. CLERK

DAVID WEIR'S LONG SERVICE AS CLERK OF HARVEY.

After holding the office of clerk for the township of Harvey for sixteen consecutive years, Mr. David Weir has resigned, as he has sold his property in Harvey and is moving to a farm near Omemee. At the last meeting of the township council reference was made to Mr. Weir's long and valuable serivices to the township in the capacity of clerk, and a grant of $50 was made to him.

Reeve James Ingram has been returned to office for another year. In the contest for council seats the four sitting members, Peter Jackson, Thomas Flynn, Hugh Allen and Archie Wilson, will have opposition from James Pluard, Wm. Thompson and Darius Hall. Chas. McIlmoyle was nominated but declined to stand.

DECORATING GOOD HUSBANDS

The man with the magazine began it by remarking that his son and heir was the brightest lad in all the suburb.

"Suppose he is?" said the man with the cigar. "It's only natural that a son of yours should be. But remember that the suburb covers a wide area. I have a little nephew——" The man with the cigar hesitated.

"Did he ever win a medal for being the head of his class and have his name placed on the roll of honor?"

"I don't know. He's a smart boy, medal or no medal. I don't believe in medals or prizes of any kind, anyway. "It's nothing but high class bribery."

"It's true," admitted the man with the magazine, "that the medal is a kind of bribe. But we should have more medals and prizes offered in all the walks of life. The soldier fights harder if he thinks he's going to win a decoration that will look good to his best girl when he gets back from the trenches. Men show their heroism here every day by smoking cigars of doubtful pedigree in order to accumulate enough coupons to get the prize they are seeking.

"You were telling me recently that you had 27 office boys in as many weeks. You treat them kindly, I know, and they work under ideal conditions and for good wages. Money and ideal conditions evidently mean nothing to the lads, so why do they leave? They need incentive of some kind. There should be an order established to decorate with a large gilt adornment of some kind the boy who would stick to his job for at least two weeks. A higher badge of merit could be given to the ancient and honorable office boy who would stay at the works for a month.

"There are hundreds of other occupations to which the same idea could be applied with wonderful results. Take, for instance, the ordinary position of husband. Good husbands aren't appreciated as they should be. A husband may receive wifely praise for his saintly attributes—and he may not. A good, kind, proved husband should be decorated with a mark of honor. He could be permitted to wear gold epaulets that would attest to his standing or a star or other insignia embroidered on his coat sleeve."

"But suppose a man wanted to revel in the thought that he was young and single again?"

"In that case he could take off his coat so he wouldn't see the reminders," replied the man with the magazine."

"My gracious," answered Johnny.

A Sunday school teacher, after reading the story of Ananias and Sapphira to the juvenile class, proceeded to ask them a few questions.

"Now, children," sha said, "why doesn't the Lord strike everybody dead who tells a lie?"

"'Cause there wouldn't be anybody left, hardly," answered a bright youngster.

The famous landscape painter had pitched in front of an old two-roomed wattle-and dab hut, softened with a crimson-flowered creeper, which he thought would make an excellent sketch. While he was working, a tall, hairy man came out of the hut and regarded him with some misgiving.

"Watcher doin', mister?" he asked.

"I'm painting your picturesque dwelling."

The hut dweller regarded him dubiously for a minute, then went indoors. Presently he appeared with his wife, and the two advanced toward the artist.

"Mind yeh," said the man, pointing to the paintor, "I've got me witness—you're doing this at your own expense."

"IAN HAY" TALKS ABOUT WAR

CAPTAIN JOHN HAY BEITH, whose war book, "The First Thousand," written under the pen name of "Captain Ian Hay," is generally regarded as one of the best volumes published dealing with the early days of the war, has been visiting in Canada recently. Captain Beith was one of the first men to answer Kitchener's call in the terrible days of 1914, and he soon reached the front, where he was almost continuously in action until April of the present year. He was awarded the Military Cross for gallant conduct at the Battle of Loos. Early in the spring he came across the Atlantic to handle the British section of the great Allied Bazaars held in the United States, and that gave him his opportunity to visit Canada.

Captain Beith, although he has such a successful war book as "The First Hundred Thousand" to his credit, speaks rather humorously of the achievement of writing a book about the front. An author's last court of appeal among the critics must be the Tommies themselves, and "Ian Hay" says of them, "The soldiers read stories about the war eagerly. And one of their reasons for reading them is very interesting. They read them because one of their chief pleasures is to pick out technical mistakes. Nothing pleases them more than to read an account of a battle and find that the writer has stated something incorrectly. They greatly enjoy finding these mistakes and talking about them."

While visiting in Toronto Captain Beith spoke at the Canadian Club and made some interesting statements about the Dominion and our contribution of soldiers. He said, "Canada's contribution to our crusade, for this is a holy war, will never be forgotten throughout the Empire so long as Empire and patriotism stand for anything." He spoke as one who had fought side by side with Canadians at Ypres. His division, the 9th Scottish, went over at the beginning of the first period, that in which the remnants of the regular British army had held back so mightily the Germans, superior in numbers, but in that only. They had never been more than 120,000.

He said Canadian soldiers were very good at raiding. But the one thing the Germans could not understand was the spirit of the British, who went into a fight singing snatches of comic songs and kicking a football over "No Man's Land." "This revolting frivolity on the part of our troops it is which really offends the German sense of propriety. He takes his business of slaughter so seriously, so sacredly, whether he is emitting asphyxiating gas or sinking a hospital ship, that to encounter troops who regard war as a great clean game, as a great adventure, gives him genuine pain, and to be beaten by them shocks him to the roots of his being."

Captain Beith said the third period of the war would be the last, the relegation of bestiality and barbarism to their rightful places, and the restoration of Belgium, never again to be disturbed. He showed a piece of the first zeppelin that was brought down in Great Britain and praised the women's work. Thousands of them brought up in delicacy scrubbed, washed, and answered door bells to help, for nearly every large residence was now a war hospital. They had done it for months. His own wife served in an overseas canteen and rest-room, and her most precious possession to-day was five pennies given her as a tip by a Canadian soldier "to get candy." "He had remained true to the decimal system, even three thousand miles away."

"It must be galling," he went on, "to the Germans to know that the great-war machine they have been polishing up for forty years to beat Europe has failed, and that the first time they meet an army of amateurs, men who two years ago were artisans, shipbuilders, and workers at every trade but war it breaks down."

Unexplored Canada.

How little we really know of much of the world that we talk of familiarly is brought home by the statement that more than a quarter of the Canadian Dominion remains as yet unexplored.

The great war has interrupted the work of development and exploration in Canada, but Mr. Charles Camsell, of the Geographical Survey of Canada, takes stock in The Geographical Journal of the work that remains to be done when it is over. He gives an idea of the vastness of the great Dominion to learn from his calculation that 901,000 square miles of the mainland, or about 28 per cent., are still unexplored

The northern part of the Great Plains is the direction more than any other of probable agricultural development. In the valley of the Mackenzie River is believed to be one of the largest oil-bearing regions yet unexplored on the face of the earth. It is 300,000 square miles in extent. In thirty years' time, when the oil reserves of the United States will be exhausted, its time will come.

Canadian Ill-Treated.

Mr. and Mrs. Fuller, Folkestone, have received news that their youngest son, Private Walter Fuller, aged 20, of the first Canadian contingent, a prisoner of war in Germany, has been sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment for mutiny and that no parcels of food are to be sent to him. Fuller was wounded and captured at St. Julien. The mayor of Folkestone intends to bring the case before the American ambassador. Announcement was made in the British Commons on Nov. 7 last that several Canadian prisoners had been sentenced to twelve-year terms in German prisons.

Indians' Time Table.

Certain of the reservation Indians still cling to the calendar of their ancestors, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. The Indian method was to compute time by sleeps and moons. A sleep is twenty-four hours, and a moon is a month. There is also a midmoon, where the sun is at 12 o'clock meridian. This hour is indicated by pointing overhead.

When an Indian pointed quarter way up the sky he meant 9 o'clock; when he pointed quarter way down he meant 3 o'clock. Sunrise was the eastern horizon and sunset the western.

When there was a moon the time was indicated in the same way as by the sun. Where an Indian added the distance to a certain place or how far he had come he would say so many sleeps or days' travel. A sleep, as describing distance, was about thirty-five miles when walking deliberately or from fifty to seventy-five miles if going in haste with a message.

BANISH THE KAISER TO ST. HELENA

Deserves Punishment Meted Out to Napoleon.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—"The Emperor William deserves at least the same punishment as Napoleon. Napoleon was a gentleman compared to him," said Col. Geo. T. Denison, who spoke before the Empire Club yesterday on "The Alleged German Peace Offer."

"I am very much opposed to the Allied Governments giving the Germans any details of what their demands are likely to be," said Col. Denison. He went back into history to get examples that would serve as lessons to the Allies at the present time. He gave a description of the struggle between Rome and Carthage which lasted for a hundred years with two periods of peace in that time. After the second peace was concluded, Cato the Censor, who was in Carthage, returned to Rome and reported on the preparations that Carthage was making for another war. It was not out of revenge, nor for aggression, but for self-preservation, that the Romans again started to fight the Carthaginians.

Offered no Terms.

Col. Denison then went on to discuss the Napoleonic wars and the work which the Allies of those days did to force Napoleon to abdicate at Fontainebleau and retire to Elba. He described the escape from Elba and the campaign which culminated in the battle of Waterloo, and the imprisonment of Napoleon on St. Helena.

"No terms were offered to him," said Col. Denison. "He tried hard to make these, but the Allies did just what they wanted to do with him. If Blucher could have captured him he would have shot him. This fate befel Ney and Murat, and these men were not guilty as the Huns are today.

"Now we should go on and fight and make no terms. We should fight until the Hohenzollerns are broken, until every Hun is driven from Allied territory, and until the German Empire is broken up into different parts as separate kingdoms, and they would no doubt receive their freedom with gladness. Schleswig-Holstein should be returned to Denmark, the Kiel Canal should be made neutral and the defences should be levelled; the Krupps' factory should be smashed to pieces, and Heligoland should be given back to Great Britain.

Stupid and Insolent.

"The Emperor William deserves at least the same punishment as Napoleon. Napoleon was a gentleman compared to him."

The speaker also dealt with President Wilson's note, calling it stupid and insolent. He related incidents of the fighting between the North and the South and gave a description of how the Northerners treated the Southern leaders after they were defeated.

"Jefferson Davis had committed no crime such as the Emperor William has," said Col. Denison. "Emperor Maximillian of Mexico was condemned to be shot and he had never committed such crimes as the Germans have committed."

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street.

"The new ideal of patriotism—patriotism and preparedness—is a hard deal to reach up to."

The speaker was Representative Gardner of Massachusetts. He continued:

"Yes, before this splendid ideal the soft and selfish citizen is like the farm boarder.

"'I guess,' the farmer said to his new boarder from the city, 'I guess ye won't want to get up very early in the morning, hey?'

"'No, by heck,' said the city chap with a laugh. 'I think I prefer to sleep late.'

"'All right,' said the farmer; 'in that case, then, we won't have breakfast till 4.30 a.m.'"

It's a good thing to have a reputation that isn't bad.

FASHION HINTS

How Tailored Coats Are Appearing For Children.

King's blue gaberdine trimmed with huge buttons of black velvet to match the collar gives this charming small coat. The waist line is almost empire, cut on a good curve and corded. Also the pockets are curved to match. A double row of stitching finishes the hem.

FOR SCHOOL DAYS.

FOR YOUNGSTERS.

Style Tips About Clothes For Small Persons This Fall.

Long coats, which reach almost or to the dress hems, are the fashion for little girls. Made of faille silk in dull light blues, pinks, corn color or royal blue, they are just the right weight to wear over the lingerie dresses of batiste or georgette crape.

The older girl's coat is made more like the adult styles. Tricot serge, wool jersey and bolivia—a new weave that resembles somewhat chinchilla cloth—are used to make long coats that often have pelerine cape additions that reach to or below the elbows.

Middy blouse lines are idealized now for the betwixt and between girl. Combined with plaited or gored skirts, they make very trig looking frocks, suited for autumn school wear as well as for summer. Pongee, tussore, linen, la jerz and other fabrics such as are used for the dresses and wool jersey, serge and gaberdine will do for the autumn school frock.

These dresses are sometimes made sleeveless so that a washable guimpe may be easily adjusted and removed. Plaited collar and cuff frills are seen on these guimpes more often than lace, the edges finished with picot or hemstitching. Challies material which always seems to stay in style for young girls' frocks, seems to need a touch of black velvet ribbon for a dainty finish.

Russian and middy blouses, seen in the shops, are generally accompanied by a plaited or fulled matching skirt. In middy blouse types one of polka dotted raspberry lawn has a full gathered skirt. The blouse is fashioned with a round plaited collar of white organdie, picot edged, with cuffs to match. An organdie belt is the original note of this dress. It shows only at the sides, passing through slashes in the dress in front and back.

This belt fastens at one side with two flat pearl buttons. One Russian blouse dress of pink voile is bordered and belted with matching bands of linen. The skirt is gathered and has a deep hem band of the linen.

Very pretty bright colored felt hats are also seen in the shops for little and big girls. They match in color the bright tones of their dresses. Small poke bonnet forms, rather jockey shaped, with a single feather or plume ornament in front, are also new. High Russian caps, covered with gathered silk, are finished with silk pompons on top and little clusters of silk roses posed at the sides.

Dresses for young girls remain very short. In extreme fashion they hardly come to the knee, while the more popular styles stop just below. Their ampleness makes them fly out prettily. The revived fashion of petticoats, which show with the swish of skirts, gives them a fluffy look.

An Old Province.

Gascony, the old province of France, is a favorite locality to evolve heroes of fiction. It is in the south-western part, and derived its name from the Vascones, a Spanish tribe, which crossed the Pyrenees about 580. It is that area of land between the Pyrenees, the Garonne, and the Atlantic. In 1152, when Eleanor married Henry Plantagenet, it became an English possession and remained so until 1453, when the French reconquered it. Its inhabitants were noted for their slowness, courage, and passion for boasting.

THE MARK OF THE BEAST

INABILITY OF GERMANS TO UNDERSTAND ORDINARY HUMANITY.

There is something almost pathetic about the vain reachings of the Germans for neutral sympathy, says The New York Tribune. They murder neutrals, they sink neutral ships and they violate neutral rights, and then, in their desire for neutral approval, they buy newspapers in neutral capitals and eagerly reprint the comments appearing in the purchased columns. Thus it is that for the latest Belgian outrage Berlin finds warrant in the comment of Copenhagen and Stockholm newspapers.

And yet the most astonishing thing about the whole war is the complete inability of the German to understand the rest of the world. He sent his troops into Belgium; he permitted, he commanded them to murder, burn, rape; under his orders children were slain and women violated, cities were destroyed and homes ruined, and then the Germans produced a hocus-pocus of documents discovered in Brussels to defend his course, to justify not merely his offences against Belgian neutrality, but his offences in Belgium against all humanity.

And from the outset of the war the Belgian episode has endured as a final damnation of Modern Germany. It is one thing about which there is no argument in America. It is one phase of the war which is settled, not for the duration of the war, but for the life time of men and women now alive. We are numb with the horrors of this war, we are deafened with the charges and counter-charges, but in the matter of Belgium our minds remain clear and fixed.

It is not surprising that the nation which murdered Belgian women and children is now enslaving Belgian men. It is not surprising that the nation which is responsible for what was done, not merely in Louvain, but in all the villages from the frontier to Dinant, through which the troops passed, should now be invoking the methods of African slave traders in the conquered regions.

The true meaning of this Belgian episode is that there can be no peace while the spirit which is responsible for it dominates Germany. Europe canot make peace with such statesmanship of murder as rules in Berlin. To do this would be to recognize the spirit itself. A native village might as well make terms with a man-eating tiger which by night preyed upon its children as could France, for example, make peace with a neighboring Germany in its present mood.

British Army Transport Service.

Prior to the Somme offensive, an English officer now in this country says, no less than 600 vessels of all sizes crossed the channel in a few days, taking the munitions and reserves to the various French ports, and these were handled both at the English ports of departure and on their reception entirely by the British army transport service, and scarcely any accident of importance occurred. Nearly a million men are engaged in the army transport service and these have been picked with extraordinary care to do the work they are most fitted for. Men in the automobile business handle the huge number of machines transported, while those who had worked as carpenters and machinists before the war are given positions where they can best utilize their experience. The work of hoisting the heavy auto trucks and other impedimenta to and from the ships so that no damage is done is very hard and goes on night and day. Of course, the actual bringing up of ammunition and other munitions to the front line is done in part by the army transport service, and the toll of lives among the officers and men has been large.

At a party one evening a very pretty girl said to Mr. Sargent, the famous artist: "Oh, Mr. Sargent, I saw your latest painting and kissed it because it was so much like you."

"And did it kiss you in return?" asked the artist, gravely.

"Why, no, of course not!" was the astonished reply.

"Then," said Mr. Sargent smilingly, "it was not like me."

STARTLING FACTS —READ THEM

United States Government Statistics Reveal:
That Only 358,000 out of their 100,000,000 population report incomes in excess of $2,500 per year.
That Nineteen out of every twenty fail to provide either for their families or old age.
That Every second man of the population at age twenty-five will be dependent upon someone else at sixty-five. Which class will you be in?
That Nine out of ten men leave no estate.
That Life Insurance Companies are distributing more than $2,000,000 per day.
That Life Insurance has decreased pauperism more than thirty-three and one-third per cent. in thirty-five years.
That Less than seven per cent. of the value of American lives is covered by Life Insurance.
That Life Insurance saves the nation more than $80,000,000 per year in maintaining the poor.

Under such conditions, what is your plain duty, aye, and privilege? Clearly to insure your life while you can. You say where and how can this best be done?

We answer — A monthly Income Policy for your family or an Endowment for yourself in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

With its $75,000,000 of assets, there is no Company represented in Canada, can offer you better, if any can offer you as good.

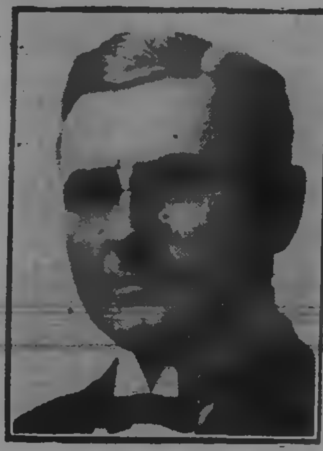
A. A. FOWLER FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION



NEW BLOOD MEANS NEW ENERGY

In selecting your candidates for the Board of Education, keep in mind that the keynote of progress is renewed life and vigor in the executive bodies that have to handle the business of this growing city.

In offering myself as candidate for a position on this Board, I do so realizing that only a man's best service will meet the growing need for practical business methods in this most important branch of the City's business. My record as a business man for the last fourteen years and a lifelong resident in Peterborough, residing in East City for twenty-five years, is well known to a large number of our citizens, and I trust is sufficient evidence of my ability to warrant your support in my present candidature.

Should I be elected, I promise to weigh most carefully all matters involving expenditure of the city's finances, and to countenance only strictly business methods in undertaking any work being handled by this Board.

Soliciting the support of every progressive voter, I am,

Yours for Progress,

A. A. FOWLER

To the Ratepayers of Ward No. 1

Having been nominated as a candidate for Alderman for Ward No. 1, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to secure my election.

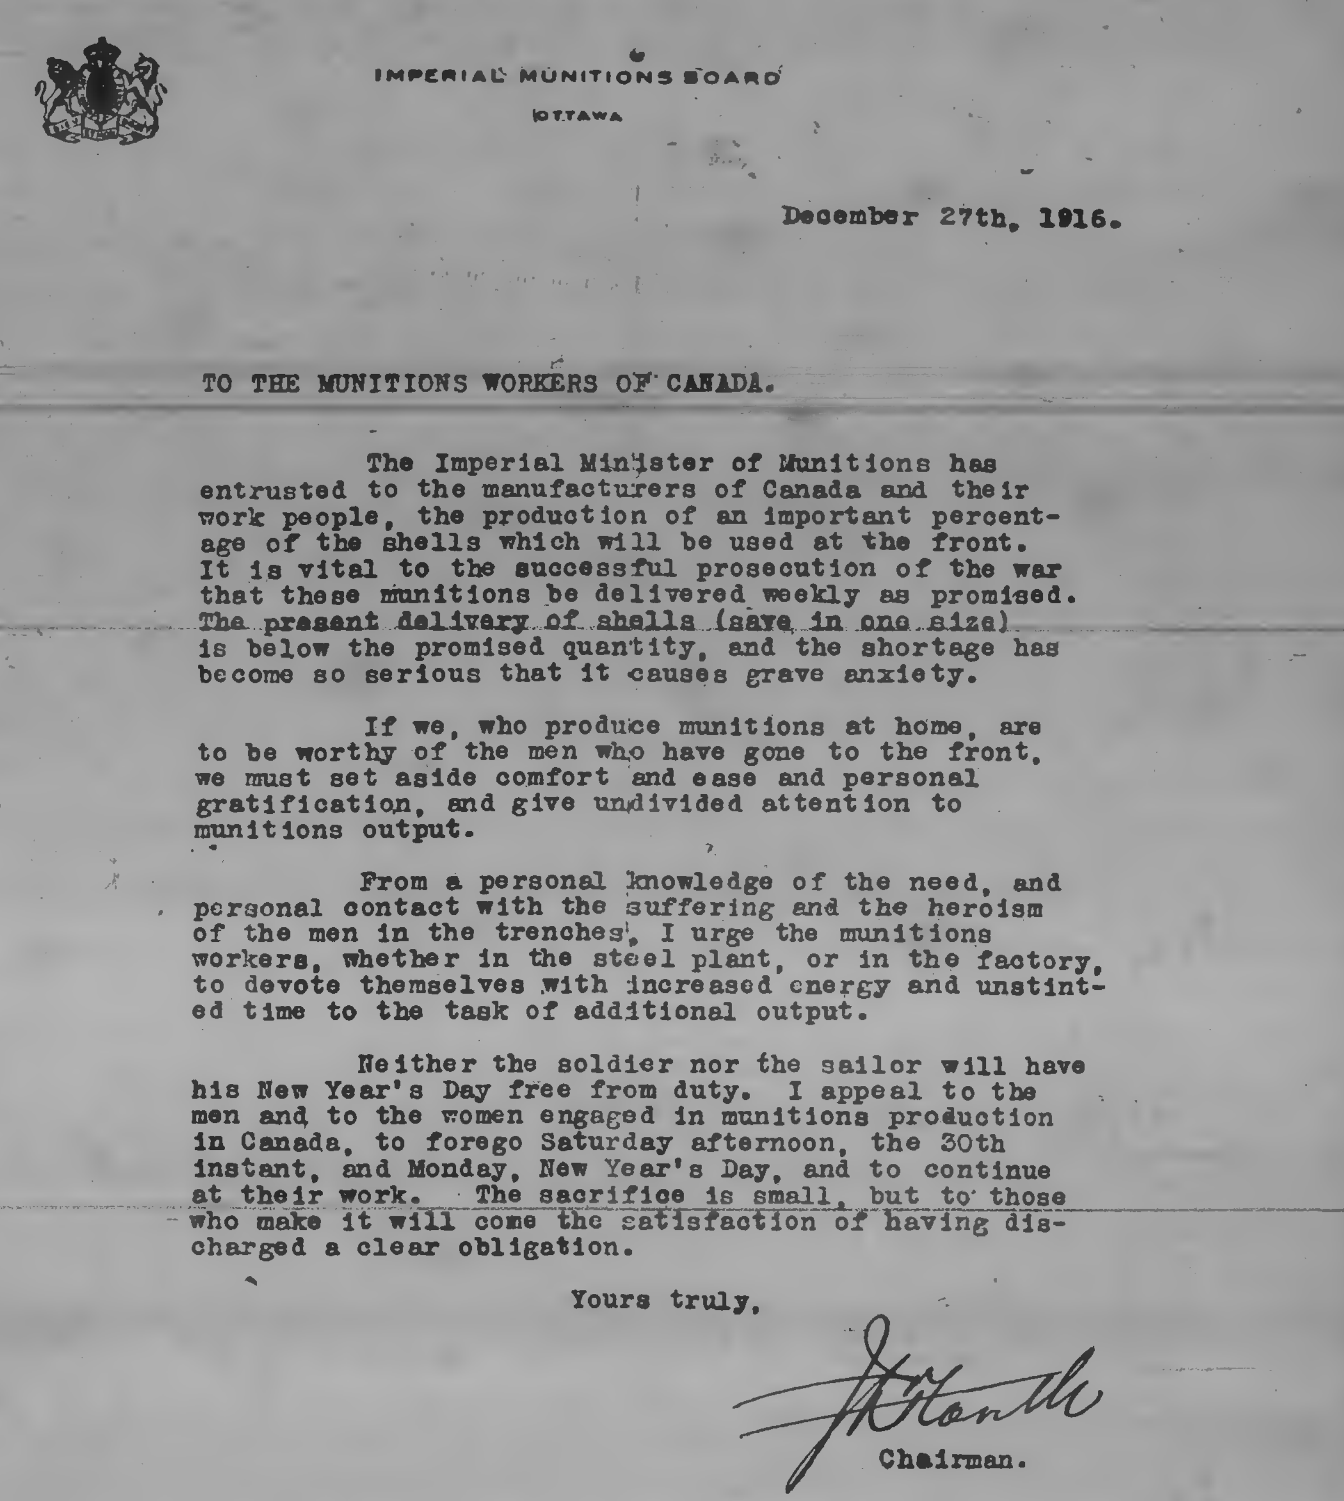
Now that the Street Railway is owned by the Provincial Government there is no reason why this railway should not be extended, without any expense to the ratepayers, to furnish better accommodation for the ratepayers residing in different parts of Ward No. 1, and if elected I shall use my best endeavors to secure such improved Street Railway accommodation.

There is a great shortage in the production of electric power at Niagara Falls to supply power to munition and other manufacturers. Peterborough could furnish immediately to manufacturers upwards of 2,500 horse power which is daily going to waste. The fact that Peterborough has such surplus power is not generally known throughout the Province. This surplus power could be used to manufacture much-needed munitions, encourage manufacturers to locate in Peterborough, and thereby be a great advantage to every workingman and property owner without the expenditure of a single dollar by the ratepayers.

If I am elected I pledge myself to actively assist in seeing that this great public utility is used for the best advantage of our city.

Yours respectfully,

W. H. Taylor



IMPERIAL MUNITIONS BOARD
OTTAWA

December 27th, 1916.

TO THE MUNITIONS WORKERS OF CANADA.

The Imperial Minister of Munitions has entrusted to the manufacturers of Canada and their work people, the production of an important percentage of the shells which will be used at the front. It is vital to the successful prosecution of the war that these munitions be delivered weekly as promised. The present delivery of shells (save in one size) is below the promised quantity, and the shortage has become so serious that it causes grave anxiety.

If we, who produce munitions at home, are to be worthy of the men who have gone to the front, we must set aside comfort and ease and personal gratification, and give undivided attention to munitions output.

From a personal knowledge of the need, and personal contact with the suffering and the heroism of the men in the trenches, I urge the munitions workers, whether in the steel plant, or in the factory, to devote themselves with increased energy and unstinted time to the task of additional output.

Neither the soldier nor the sailor will have his New Year's Day free from duty. I appeal to the men and to the women engaged in munitions production in Canada, to forego Saturday afternoon, the 30th instant, and Monday, New Year's Day, and to continue at their work. The sacrifice is small, but to those who make it will come the satisfaction of having discharged a clear obligation.

Yours truly,

JWFlavelle
Chairman.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED FOR FRENCH RELIEF FUND

Messrs. Green and Cruikshanks Receive Contributions When Purchasing Horses.

Messrs. L. Green and T. Cruikshanks, who are buying horses for the French Government, have also been receiving subscriptions for the French relief fund, a laudable move that originated with Mr. Green. To date the subscriptions amount to $61.50, which will be transmitted through the Bank of Toronto to M. Maurice Barres, 63 Avenue C Laups. Elysees, Paris. In buying horses at Campbellford, Belleville and Peterborough the salesmen were asked to contribute to the fund, and in practically every case a contribution of one dollar or more was made.

ANOTHER BLOW AT THE TURKS

IMPORTANT BRITISH SUCCESS IN DESTRUCTION OF BRIDGE.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—A British official communication, issued last night says:—

"On Tuesday a squadron of naval airplanes bombarded enemy camps at Galata, on the Gallipoli peninsula, with successful results.

"Wednesday a squadron of seaplanes attacked and destroyed the Chicaldar bridge, 18 miles east of Adana (Asia Minor)."

The Chicaldar Bridge across the Damihan River constituted a vital link in the Turkish railway communications and its destruction would cut off not only the Bagdad main line but the Syrian lines from railroad connection with western Asia Minor and the supply centres for the Turkish army in the Caucasus, Mesopotamia, Palestine and Arabia.

BRITISH ARMY SPREADS OUT ON FIGHTING FRONT IN FRANCE

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Major-General Frederick B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations of the War Office, has confirmed reports from Paris that the British army in France had taken over an additional section of the western front. While the information as to the geographical details of the extension of the British front was still reserved, owing to military reasons, it was understood to be not inconsiderable.

RED CROSS WORK ROOMS WILL RE-OPEN JANUARY 3

An Appeal to the Women of Peterboro to Help Bring About Increased Shipments of Red Cross Supplies.

The following letter has been re- ived by the local branch of the d Cross Society from the head of- in Toronto:

r Madam,—

The report from our assistant mmissioner, Major Harry Blaylock, of so much interest and importance at the executive have decided that pies of it should be sent to each rovincial and district branch.

I should like to call your attention ecially to the use made of socks the Red Cross, and also to the ature of the supplies which Major laylock has ascertained from the rench societies are most necessary the hospitals. You will see that ese are entirely along the line of dding and warm garments, and t of bandages and dressings. It s, unfortunately, been found ne- ssary for us to reduce our gift of ,000 cases a month to France, ow- g to the diminution of stores in serve in our warehouses. It is im- ssible for us to allow our supplies be entirely distributed as we are und to have a reserve for the use the Canadian corps in times of em- rgencies, as the Canadian pitals are the first charge on our supplies.

We trust you will give the widest possible publicity to this report and that it will increase the output of the necessary articles.

Adelaide M. Plumptree.

Open Work Room.

Acting on the advice of our headquarters, and in view of the extremely urgent need as disclosed by the report of the commissioner, Major Blaylock, of almost all kinds of garments, the executive of the local branch of the Society have decided to re-open the work room at the Public Library (formerly used for the making of surgical dressings) on Wednesday, Jan. 3, at 2 o'clock. This is in an endeavor to largely increase the shipments now being sent from Peterborough.

It is, unfortunately, too true that the number of those working at the various societies and auxiliaries on supplies for the men who are so splendidly upholding the honor of the British Empire, has decreased.

It is not that we care less for those fighting for us or enduring pain and suffering because they have fought.

We are all anxious that neither fighting nor disabled men should lack for anything that we can give them.

The reason for the "slackness" is that we have become used, not to the war itself, but to the thought that our Empire is in the throes of the most titanic and inhuman struggle known to history. The first feeling of shock and horror caused us by the terrible casualty lists in the early days of the war, has succumbed to a feeling of sickly numbness and strange wonder as to what the uprooting and attempted overthrowing of all that is best in our civilization, really mean, and some of us have allowed our early enthusiasm for work to lose something of its fervor, and are in danger of leaving "our bit" to be done by our neighbors.

Never in the history of the world have women had such an opportunity to prove their worth, to show their capability to think and act, as Lord Rosebery once put it, "imperially."

Not only to do duty as wives, mothers, and in the homes, but also to act as true and loyal daughters of the Empire, to build, uphold and sacrifice themselves for those principles which exalt a nation and without which we as a people were better dead.

Six Weeks' Campaign.

So we purpose having a six weeks' whirlwind working campaign, every afternoon of the week (excepting Saturdays) and all day on Fridays. There will be a large number of sewing machines, and the manager of the Singer Company has very kindly offered to keep them in good working order for us. Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons have been good enough to cut thousands of yards of material into garments. The citizens have given money as generously as last year, and thus we are able to buy to the best advantage and in such quantities as will keep all busy. The executive wish to state definitely and clearly that this effort is undertaken in no spirit of opposition to or dissatisfaction with existing societies. The fact is, it is hoped that this appeal will quicken the members to renewed effort, and that they will not forsake their own society's special day to attend at the Red Cross room.

What we do plead for (and this we do most earnestly) is that the women of our city and county will not be content to give only the one afternoon a week, but that for these six weeks they will do their utmost to attend every day or as frequently as they possibly can. If we do this, at the end of that period Peterborough will be able to forward a shipment of well-made garments, socks and other necessities such as will cause a thrill of satisfaction to every worker because of the knowledge in her heart that "she hath done what she could."

Our own Canadian men come first; as is only right, and the reserve stock of the Canadian Red Cross is such that there is grave danger if a sudden and heavy emergency call was made on it, of its not being able to meet the demand.

The knowledge that the help hitherto extended to France and so gratefully received by them, has had to be cut down, and that unless we rally to the call may have to be discontinued altogether, would cover us with shame after the splendidly heroic defence of Verdun, and in view of the glorious manner in which the women of France have endured their suffering and heavy losses.

Signed on behalf of the Peterborough Red Cross Society.

Annie Forbes Allan,
1st Vice-President,
Laura J. Davidson,
Secretary.

Mr. O'Connell Replies

When Mr. O'Connell rose to reply his position in the room did not please Magistrate Dumble, who lead him out to a place where he could be the better seen and heard.

"That is not the first time that I have obeyed a ruling from that quarter," remarked Mr. O'Connell. The reference to a little unpleasantness that arose some years ago in the way of the professional duties between Mr. O'Connell and the police magistrate was not lost upon the audience.

One of the best of the many anecdotes told by Mr. O'Connell in the course of his address had a local flavor. In the election of 1911 when a voter learned that the late J. R. Stratton had been defeated he told his wife to pack up as he did not propose to remain in a city that would do such a thing to a popular citizen. Then he went down town and learned of the result in other places. Returning home he said to his wife, "Never mind packing up. We won't move because there is no place to go."

Mr. O'Connell said he felt flattered by the reception and by the many kind things that had been said of him. Twenty years ago, when he came to Peterborough, it was a city with a population of 11,00, but the sterling qualities of the people had steadily pushed it ahead. He has formed friendships with all classes. He came to the city in the budding period when a man lays the foundation of his life.

Referring to the gentlemen with whom he has been associated professionally he declared that he was unable to say anything that would be too good for them. There is a mistaken idea that a lawyer is a man who will take the last cent from a client. But the men who are charged with the administration of the law, who are entrusted with the secrets and the property of others, are men who are just and upright, valuable assets to a community. Of the profession in Peterborough, it is sufficient to say that it is composed of men who possess the highest degree of ethics and the highest sense of honor.

It was a hearty and graceful tribute that Mr. O'Connell paid Judge Huycke as an exponent of justice. He was noted, he said, for his courtesy and patience, for his wise counsel and sound judgment. Every member of the profession was benefited by association with such a man—a man who, while he did not spare the hopeless criminal, never failed to give the first transgressor another chance and to extend to him a helping hand whenever possible. It was such a method as this that has made Peterborough the law-abiding community that it is.

Magistrate Dumble he characterized as "that stern administrator of justice, but with a good old Irish heart."

All officials in any way connected with the law were gratefully remembered, including Registrar Morrow, Chief Thompson, the latter of whom, Mr. O'Connell said, was gifted with the sense to take no action against a man unless first convinced that he was an offender.

The closing part of Mr. O'Connell's remarks were devoted to an eloquent sketch of conditions in Peterborough when the war broke out, of the destitution in this city during the winter of 1914, of the efforts made to raise money for the Patriotic Fund, and of the happy relations that had always existed between him and the other members of the league.

"I cannot leave these men," said Mr O'Connell, "without expressing my strongest affection. Nothing like discord ever occurred. All parochial creeds were obliterated. Whatever may have been the differences in the past, we are all brother patriots now.

"No man can tell how long the war will lost, but the Empire is prepared to see it to the end. Britain will never be subdued. We have seen little Belgium devastated and her people deported by hundreds into slavery; we have seen beautiful cities laid in ruins: Serbia and Roumania desolated; but for all of this the despoilers will be made to pay and after this war there will be perfect peace with such a thing as a difference of creed unknown in the world."

Our Municipal Institutions

G. A. Gillespie M.L.A., proposed the toast, "Our Municipal Institutions," and this was responded to by Mayor Duffus and Mr. T. F. Matthews, the latter giving a brief and comprehensive history of the Utilities Commission, as developed from the old Water Board, and outlining the Commission's plans for the future. They always, he said, in their operations, make provision for a city of 50,000 inhabitants.

The Learned Profession

Ald. Dobbin proposed "The Learned Profession," to which Rev. J. R. Webb, F. W. Dumble and Rev. Fr. Phelan responded. Mr. Webb said he coveted Mr. O'Connell, after listening to his oratory, for the Baptist ministry, and Fr. Phelan regretted that by the removal of Mr. O'Connell he was losing a good member of his church.

The Ladies

Mr. Joseph Wearing proposed "The Ladies," and Capt. O'Flynn of the 247th responded. "In this war," said Capt. O'Flynn, "it is the women who are making the real sacrifice. The men have the excitement to keep them up, but the women sit quietly suffering at home."

The singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

The Banquet Committee

The committee in charge of the arrangements were as follows:

Hon. chairman, Judge Huycke; hon. vice-chairman, Mayor Duffus; executive committee, Messrs. R. R. Hall (chairman), Jos. Wearing (secretary), James Kendry, E. A. Peck, J. A. Aylmer, W. G. Morrow, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., R. G. Kingan, T. F. Matthews, D. W. Dumble, K.C., E. G. Patterson, Robt. Ruddy, K.C., W. H. Denham and O. N. Gordon; Dr. F. P. McNulty, Ald. F. H. Dobbin, Adjt. McElhiney, Dr. J. V. Gallivan.

PREPARATION FOR POULTRY EXHIBITION

A RECORD ENTRY LIST OF BIRDS FOR SHOW IN JANUARY.

AN EXPERT TO JUDGE.

Details of the show to be held by the Peterborough Poultry Association in the market hall on Jan. 9, 10 and 11 occupied the attention of an enthusiastic meeting by association members in the Labor Hall last evening. President Roson was in the chair.

Entries are coming in by every mail and the early indications of a record entry list for the show bear promise of fulfillment. General satisfaction will follow the definite announcement that Mr. Geo. Robinson, an expert from the Dominion Department of Agriculture, will be here to judge the birds. The association is particularly fortunate in being able to command his services. Miss Yates, from the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will give demonstration of interest and value to all persons engaged in the poultry business. Mr. G. Paxman has been secured to superintend the show, which is a guarantee that the work will be carried out thoroughly and well.

The Lindsay Poultry Show, which came to a close yesterday, enjoyed considerable success. Among the exhibitors were: Bert Letts, Lindsay; W. W. Lord, Campbellford; G. A. Lucas, Lindsay; T. Bothrell, Bowmanville; Harry Daniels, Lindsay; J. W. Colwill, Port Hope; F. Hollworth, Port Hope; J. R. Stewart, Bobcaygeon; Thos. Eyres, Cameron; Wm. Elliot, Ottawa; R. H. Dillings, Bowmanville; R. CAR BARNS AND RADIALS BURN

LOSS OF $500,000 FOR THE TORONTO RAILWAY COMPANY.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—Loss unofficially estimated at $500,00 was caused by a fire which last night destroyed the King Street car barns of the Toronto Railway Co., and a number of cars not yet definitely known. The fire began about 8.30 o'clock in the north-east corner of the building, which was located just west of the Don River, and after a spectacular blaze, seen from all parts of the city, the building and contents were reduced to ruins in two hours. It was estimated last night that possibly one-half of the '30 cars usually stored in this barn were in the building, and as the value of each is placed at about $7,000, the loss in cars would exceed $400,000.

The Duke of Devonshire witnessed his first game of Canadian hockey a few days ago in the Arena at Toronto. The game was put on in connection with a patriotic fete, and the Governor-General and his two daughters were present. The Duke faced off the puck and watched the game. He was greatly interested in the speed of the typical Canadian game, and commented several times on this feature of the play. Ladies Maud and Blanche Cavendish also enjoyed greatly the brilliant and flashing sport.

MONASTERY OF TRAPPIST FATHERS IS FAR FAMED

The famous monastery at Oka, which was fire swept last Wednesday morning, was one of the prides of the Province of Quebec, and was visited annually by hundreds of tourists. The order of monks at Oka are known as the Trappist Fathers, but they are actually an order of the Cisterian Fathers, one of the orders of the Benedictine Fathers which was founded in 1098 at Citeaux, France. It is said that the name Trappist, or "La Trappe," was derived from the monks' monastery in the Alps, which was situated on a high and rugged crag. The building was almost inaccessible, and for this reason was called "The Trap."

Austerity of Ritual

The Cistercian order of Fathers is noted for the austerity of the ritual, and out at Oka, the creed is followed to the minutest detail. Silence is one of the laws of the monastery, and when the monks don the cowl and hood of the order, they take the vows not to speak during the remainder of their lifetime, which is spent in the monastery. Almost incredible penances are performed by these devout men, who inflict self punishment as absolution for their sins. If a monk commits, or feels that he has committed any sin during the day, in many cases he will descend to one of the dark cells, and, after divesting himself of his orthodox garb, puts on a goat skin, with the hairy side next to his skin. There he will remain suffering and praying in solitude until he absolves himself of his breach of faith.

Agricultural Pursuits

Primarily, the Oka Fathers are agriculturists of the first order, and the large farming land which belongs to the monastery is tilled by the monks themselves. In fact, all the time that is not spent in prayer is spent in producing various crops. Melon growing in particular is a specialty, and the famous Oka "Montreal" melon is known thoughout the continent of North America. Cheese making is another very large branch of the Oka monks' work, and the Oka cheese has the largest sale of any domestic cheese in Canada.

A large agricultural college is run in connection with the monastery, and every branch of modern and scientific farming is taken up in the curriculum, including bee raising.

Fathers Rise at 2 a.m.

The Trappist Fathers, awakened by the monastery bell, arise at 2 a.m., when they congregate for silent prayer and communion. Shortly after prayers, they partake of the one meal of the day, which consists of a goodly allowance of food, for the most part grown on the monastery farm. The balance of the day, until they retire at 5 o'clock, is spent in tilling the ground. Not a word is spoken all day long by the "silent fathers," as they are known to the community.

The monastery grounds are well wooded, and here and there one finds a rustic shrine, situated in one of the valleys or on one of the high peaks in the woods. These shrines are visited annually by pilgrimages from the Province of Quebec and the States, and on any great fete day of the Roman Catholic Church, hundreds of devout worshippers are to be seen wending their way up the narrow, rocky paths to pay their vows to the statues of the Virgin Mary or the Christus.

No Women Allowed

Despite the strict ritual of the monks visitors no matter of what church they belong, are always assured of a cordial and hospitable reception at the hands of the Trappist Fathers, who take a great delight in welcoming tourists to their domains, and having them partake of lunch, and sample the famous "Oka" wine, and equally famous Oka cheese. Male visitors, however, are alone admitted, for in the annals of the Oka monastery no female has ever passed inside the portals, although many attmpts have been made by women masquerading as men.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N.B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

Indian Football.

Like lacrosse, the great Canadian national game, the Indian played his game of football upon the flat sands. The ball was made of leather, sewn with a thong and filled with moss says a writer in Boys' Life. The goals were a mile and more apart. The players ordinarily were braves of the same tribe, but upon special occasions the game would be waged between selected players of different tribes, one tribe being arrayed against another.

In these tribial contests, says a writer in the Princeton Alumni Weekly, the players came to the sands arrayed in war bonnets, war paint, and full savage regalia. As the time drew near for the game to begin bows, quivers, shields and bonnets were discarded, and the Indian, lithe and athletic, stood forth eager and alert. Before commencing play the rival players shook hands and rubbed noses in formal token of the friendliness of the fierce encounter.

And were our comrades of this primeval game without technique? Harken unto the words of William Wood: "They 'mount' the ball into the air with their naked feet. Sometimes it is swayed by the multitude." Say, you sons of college gridirons, is not this a concise description of a kick-off or a punt? And can that swaying by the multitude be aught else than a scrimmage, however crude?

Our genial reporters of three centuries ago tell us that sometimes several days were required to obtain a goal.

Fur Combinations.

From present indications two kinds of fur will be combined in many of the coats next winter. So if you have an old fur coat in fair condition or a collar or muff save it and see what your furrier can do in using the good parts of the old garments for trimming a new fur coat.

INTER CLASS ATHLETIC MEET AT Y.M.C.A. NEW YEAR'S AFTERNOON

On New Year's afternoon an inter-class athletic meet will be held between the junior Collegiate class and the senior employed boys in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The events will be 60 and 100 yards, potato races, high and broad jumps, fence vault, and 8-lb. shot-put. Every boy in these two classes may enter, and a prize will be given to the all-round winner. The first five scores of each team in each event will be counted and all who qualify by securing a place amongst the first five in any event on the winning team will receive a Y. M. C. A. pin. This event is causing great interest among the boys, and the competition between the two groups is sure to be very keen. J. Thirnbeck is in charge of the Collegiate boys, and H. Copp is looking after the employed boy athletes.

The first event will be run off at 2:30.

Omemee is noted for turning out school teachers. Among those now home on vacation are the Misses Bertha, Nora and Jessie Nichols, Stanley, Grace and Maid Laidley, Phyllis Brown, Ethel Caldwell, Carrie and Ormond Poast, Lulie Bushwell, Evelyn Sandy and A. Thompson.

The annual Orange concert was held Christmas night in Coronation Hall under the joint auspices of the Soldiers' Aid and the Orange Order. The capacious hall was filled to overflowing long before eight o'clock. The concert opened with an Allied flagflag drill by twelve young ladies. Miss M. Adams representing Canada and Miss L. Parsons Britannia. After the drill a Christmas play entitled Under the Mistletoe was given, the characters being as follows.

Anastacia Bluebloodchester—Miss M. Shannon.

Mrs. Christopher Oldboy—Miss F. Down.

Miss Molly Blake—Miss L. Parsons

Miss Phylis Darling—Miss J. Smith

Americus, Vespucious Oldboy—Mr. C. Connell.

Christopher Oldboy—Mr. H. Williams.

Tom De Long—Mr. O. Bannon.

Freddy Locke—Mr. H. Bradley.

The play sparkled with wit and humor from start to finish and kept the audience in high good humor for upwards of an hour and a half.

The second part of the programme took the form of an old-time concert, namely, Sir Roger de Coverley's Christmas House Party, about twenty taking part in it. The costumes were very quaint and beautiful, many of the ladies' dresses dating back almost a century. The men wore knee breeches, frilled shirts and white wigs. The program given was as follows:—

Song—The Old Oaken Bucket, Mr. W. Stephenson, with full chorus.

Tableau—The Old Oaken Bucket.

Solo—I Cannot Sing the Old Songs, Mrs. Bryson of Cobalt, with accompaniment on spinett, over 100 years old.

Duet—The Crookit Bawbee, in Scottish costume, by Miss Rita Johnston and Mr. E. Bushwell.

Song—The Charming Young Widow I met in the Train, by Mr. R. J. Cornwall.

Tableau—Blind Man's Buff.

The concert closed with the quaint old drill, Sir Roger De Coverley, after which those taking part formed a circle, crossed hand and sang Auld Lang Syne, followed by God Save the King.

The entertainment was one of the best ever given in this locality. Rev. Downe acted as chairman. The proceeds amounted to over $200, the bulk of which will go to the local Soldiers' Aid Society. Much credit is due the ladies who worked so diligently to get up this entertainment.

The nominations for reeve and councillors for 1917 for the village of Omemee was held in Coronation Hall on Dec. 22. After the nomination Mr. Drury of the Hydro-Electric Co. gave a very instructive address, answering many question on this subject, for which there is a by-law to be voted on on Jan. 1.

Nominations for Reeve were—R. J. Mulligan, T. A. MacPherson, Dr. Howden, Harry Lamb, T. J. Parsons. All withdrew but T. J. Parsons, so he was elected by acclamation.

Nominations for councillors— Dr. Howden, David Graham, John Sanderson, Harry Lamb, S. Skuce, Robt. Boyd.

DR. LOUDON DEAD

PRESIDENT OF TORONTO UNIVERSITY FOR FOUR YEARS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Dec. 29.— Dr. James London, who was president of Toronto University from 1892 to 1906, died this morning after a brief illness, aged 73.

Sampson Identified

the prisoner. He was able to identify the prisoner with his moustache on. It was the peculiar walk of Sampson that made his identification positive, regardless of anything else.

Geo. Sparkhill, a livestock commission dealer of Toronto, remembered receiving a consignment of cattle from R. McKelvie of Campbellford on Oct. 10. There were 35 cattle in the shipment. He could not describe them. He sold some to Wm. Bowman, of St. Catharines, and others to J. Ziegman and some to Harris Abattoirs at the Union Stock Yards, Toronto. There were six in the lot sold to Bowman. He could not identify the hides as being those of cattle received from McKelvie. It was a difficult matter to identify cattle from their hides except to people brought up with the herd.

Wm. Bowman, of St. Catharines, remembered buying four steers and two heifers from Geo. Sparkhill of Toronto—one steer nearly white, two black, one red (a heifer), one white with pale red spots, and one strawberry roan (a steer). He sold these, with 15 others, to his brother the next day. He always scissor-cut the cattle when he bought them to distinguish them when he got home.

RECEPTION AT EMPRESS HOTEL

BY THE PETERBOROUGH HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

The ladies of the nurse's supervision committee of the Health Association have made every effort to provide for the comfort and enjoyment of their guests during this afternoon and evening at the Empress Hotel. Through the kindness of Mrs. Gliddon the fine orchestra of the Conservatory of Music will play during the tea hour and suitable music has been provided for dancing at night. The splendid lobby of the hotel will be at the disposal of visitors during the tea hour and again in the evening for coffee and music. To all visitors a hearty welcome is extended. Come yourself, and pass this invitation on to your friends as the committee is not sending out invitations other than this press notice.

Rev. Father Phelan, president, will say a few words both afternoon and evening on the work of the association.

Tables will be provided for bridge, euchre and five hundred, and the hostess of each table is asked to provide cards, score cards and pencils for her own table. Prizes will be given for the best scores in bridge, euchre and five hundred. To prevent confusion ushers will see that each lady finds her own table on her arrival.

The committee wishes to emphasize the informal nature of the reception; it is not intended in any sense to be a full dress function.

Admission for cards or dancing, 50c. Visitors afternoon or evening, 25c.

Dancing this evening at 8 o'clock.

IS A CANDIDATE

When Mr. B. F. Ackerman was elected to the Board of Education in 1904 the value of public school property was $90,500. Today the splendid buildings and property are conservatively estimated at a value of $366,000. In all that time Mr. Ackerman was a member of the building committee, and he was chairman of the building committee having supervision over the erection of the Queen Mary and King Edward Schools, which are second to none in the province.

Mr. Ackerman believes the citizens appreciate the value of Peterborough's fine schools, and that they realize that the best possible value has been received for the large expenditures of money.

He is a candidate for re-election to the Board.

If you are suffering from constipation or sick headache, try Dr. Norvall's stomach and tonic tablets.

Be sure you get the genuine, as they are guaranteed and should they fail to give you relief, return the bottle to your dealer and he will refund your money.

Effect of War on Oxford.

The effect of the war upon the University of Oxford is strikingly shown by the reduced number of freshmen coming into residence. This year the number has gone down to 126, including twenty-seven American Rhodes scholars. Last year the freshmen numbered 239, and in the previous year 532. The average for the four years previous to the war was 934. It is officially stated that about 10,500 members of Oxford University are serving in the army or navy, and nearly 500 more are in other Government employment. Over 1,300 of them have obtained distinctions of various kinds. There are nine Victoria Crosses, 120 D.S.O.'s, and 267 M.C.'s; 700 have been mentioned in despatches, besides four D.C.M.'s and D.S.C.'s. Besides these there are forty-eight foreign orders, including twenty-two French and eight Russian. But the proportion of losses is high. No less than 1,230 Oxford men are reported killed and 96 missing. The University retains its predominant military aspect. In the colleges there are companies of officer cadet battalions. The Royal Flying Corps school of instruction occupies five, while the hospital in the examination schools has overflowed into one of the colleges adjoining.

He showed the scissors-marks on the hides in the court room.

The case is proceeding.

To Insure Safe and Prompt Return of the National Service Cards from the Township of Otonabee, the local National Service Committee have appointed a committee for each polling subdivision of the township to assist in filling the cards and collecting, checking, and returning the same to the National Service Board of Canada.

The cards must be filled in and promptly returned by all males between the ages of 16 and 65 inclusively.

Do not seal or mail your card; collectors will call for it.

LONG DELAYED REPORT ON PLUMBING IS RECEIVED

Inspector Thompson Says Wesley Rose Failed to Appear for Final Test---First Class Job he Says.

The long delayed report on the plumbing in Mayor Duffus' residence was presented to the Property Committee at the meeting last night and the special report speaks for itself. There was an underlying feeling among the members that more rigid plumbing inspections must be made and the city bylaw enforced to the letter.

Inspector Thompson's report is as follows:

Gentlemen:

I beg to report re inspection and smoke test of plumbing wrok done in the residence of Mayor Duffus, as follows:

Mr. Rose, Mr. Jamieson, the foreman for F. R. J. MacPherson and myself inspected the work all through the house and found it satisfactory. Mr. Jamieson and myself then gave it the smoke test and found smoke coming out of the down pipe, there being no trap there. We disconnected same and plugged it, and then used the test again, and found everything all right. We kept the float up for about twenty minutes, waiting for Mr. Rose, but he failed to show up as promised. I can safely say that Mr. Duffus has a first-class job in this house except for the down pipe in the rear of the house, which in my opinion should be changed, and I would recommend that a trap be put in at the foot of the down pipe in the spring.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Yours truly,
P. THOMPSON,
Plumbing Inspector.

The Discussion.

Ald. Edgar—Did MacPherson get a certificate for this job?

Inspector Thompson—Not until I smoke tested it.

Ald. Edgar—How does a person building a house know that the plumbing is perfect?

Inspector Thompson—Most of the jobs are simply tested with water.

Ald. Langford thought inspection certificates should be issued for every job.

Mayor Duffus wanted the inspector's opinion on the smoke test. The city should compel a proper system of plumbing inspection and see it carried out.

Ald. Langford—Make the getting of a certificate compulsory on the plumber doing the job.

Ald. Saunders did not think it possible for one man to do the inspecting in Peterborough.

City Clerk Armstrong informed the Mayor that the city bylaw called for certificates on all plumbing.

Mayor Duffus will see that in futur all jobs are inspected and that the people get the protection the bylaw gives them. If it is necessary to suspend or fine someone it will be done. There will be no more haphasard business in the city.

The members of the committee were unanimous in the opinion that if there are any more complaints, an independent inspector will be called in and someone will pay the piper.

No Further Contracts for Advertising Liquor

The Review will take no more contracts for liquor advertisements after the first of the year, and when the contracts now running expire, no more liquor advertisements will be published in this paper.

In arriving at this decision the manegement of The Review act entirely on their own initiative, and have not been coerced or over-persuaded by any individual or organization. From the early days of the agitation in Ontario for war-time prohibition this paper has favored the movement. It recognized that the object in view was to promote thrift and efficiency during the struggle against the danger which threatened the entire world. Now that the wishes of nearly ninety per cent. of the people of the Province have been given effect by the Legislature,-co operation of all classes is necessary to make prohibition a success.

The Review is still of the opinion that even if every newspaper in Ontario refuses this class of advertising, the importation of liquor will not be stopped. Quebec newspapers will be circulated free of charge or will be paid for by those who wish to lay in a supply of wet goode. The mails will be loaded down with circulars issued by the liquor dealers, but The Review does not propose to be a party to anything that has a tendency to impair the efficiency of the Ontario Temperance Act. If it is inadvisable to publish liquor advertisements or to circulate literature booming a business against which legislation has been enacted, the most effective measure of all in the interests of prohibition would be to deny the use of the mails to such newspapers and circulars. This, of course, could be done only by the Federal Government, and even if such a step was taken, the express companies would probably continue to act as circulating mediums.

JOS. HOULIHAN SUCCUMBS TO HIS INJURIES

22ND VICTIM OF FIRE AT THE QUAKER OATS PLANT.

Another life was added to the toll of death from the fire at the Quaker Oats plant, when Joseph Houlihan, who was employed in the feed room and was severely burned, passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital last evening about 7 o'clock. Deceased, who was aged 36, was born in Peterborough and had spent part of his life in Downeyville. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mary Hazel. His parents predeceased him. Four brothers are John, Denis and James of Peterborough and Frank of Downeyville. His sisters are Mrs. Oscar Foren and Miss Annie Houlihan, Toronto, Mrs. B. Skuce, Edmonton, and Mrs Robert Winn, Downeyville.

The late Mr. Houlihan was a member of the A.O.H.

The funeral will be held from his late residence, 501 Sherbrooke St., Sunday afternoon at 2.30, to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's Cemtery.

22 Deaths

The death list from the fire now totals 23, made up of 11 deaths in the hospitals, 5 bodies recovered from the ruins, and 6 bodies not recovered.

PTE. KIMBALL WOUNDED; GUNSHOT IN THE EYE

Lt. M. Dunsford Sends Letter From France.

Pte. Theodore Edward Kimball, of 397 King Street, who went overseas with the 93rd Batt., and has been fighting in France with the Mounted Rifles, is reported wounded by gunshot in the eye. He was wounded on Dec. 10.

Pte. Kimball is the fortieth casualty in the 93rd Batt.

The following is an extract from a letter to W. H. Dunsford from his son, Lieut. M. Dunsford, of the 19th Batt., France:—

"There is quite a lot of excitement over the Cabinet situation. I think with Lloyd George at the head of the new Government a lot of good should be done. The people in England are just waking up now to the fact that they are beginning to feel the pinch in food. They certainly need some kind of organization if they are ever going to win this war, and the same thing should come to Canada, too. It is funny to see the petty squabbling the Canadian papers carry on when every effort is needed to win the war."

The congregation of All Saints' Church will honor its members who have fallen in battle during the present year, on Sunday evening. The sermon on this occasion will be of a memorial nature. There will be special music and the rector will preach a sermon suitable to the occasion. During the offertory Mr. Geo. Chandler wil sing "Be thou faithful unto death."

Those to be remembered are:
Private Arthur White,
Private George Mahood,
Private William Hall,
Lieutenant Crawford Rush,
Driver Claude Manley,
Private George Wilkins.

The friends of these men are invited to attend this service, which will be of a bright, triumphant nature.

H. W. Mann, J. H. Hargreaves and H. Drummond have joined the C.A.S.C., the former two with the horse transport and the latter with the mechanical transport. Teamsters, motor drivers, blacksmiths and others are required for the service and application maye be made to Capt. J. H. Warner at the Armories.

The Militia Department has notified Mr. F. H. Dobbin of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund the following list of additional separation allowances:

Mrs. Carrie Brain, Havelock.
Mrs. Maud Emmorey, Havelock.
Mrs. Laura E. McElderry, Monaghan Road, Peterborough.

Today's orders for the 247th Battalion include the following:

Responsibility for Debts—

This battalion will not be responsible for any debt contracted by any member of the battalion unless accompanied by an order signed by the adjutant and bearing the orderly room stamp.

DEFENCE TRIES TO PROVE AN ALIBI FOR SAMPSON

Relatives Say He Was at Home on Day of Alleged Sale of Cattle to McKelvie at Campbellford.

The defence in the trial of Clarence Sampson is endeavoring to set up an alibill for the prisoner, it being claimed that Sampson was at his farmon Oct. 4, the date of the alleged sale of cattle by him to R. McKelvie at Campbellford.

Last night, the evidence of Sampson's wife and his mother and his brother-in-law, Russell Hill, was heard.

This morning Kate Hill testified that Clarence Sampson was at their farm filling grain onOct. 4 and took it to Norwood on the 5th. She did not know where he was on the 3rd as she was away. She had never telephoned McKelvie nor had she ever been in Campbellford.

James Sampson, father of the prisoner, also stated that his son Clarence and Russell Hill were both at his place helping to set up corn on Oct. 2; the next day they were filling bags with grain to take to Norwood. He had seen both of them several times on the 4th of October. "It would be impossible for Clarence to be in Campbellford on Oct. 4th," was one of the witness' answers to Mr Porter.

Mr. Sampson also knew that his son was not on good terms with Davis Hill. The grain was sold to Roxborough of Norwood. It was about 25 miles from his place to Campbellford.

In cross-examination witness told of hearing the prisoner order Davis Hill off the farm. He never knew of them speaking or being together. His son had never told him that he was going away and he had not seen the defendant after the Rusow sale until in the cell at Peterborough.

Sampson Called

Clarence Sampson, the defendant, was called to the stand. He was 26 years of age and had lived about 15 years in Dummer. He had not been charged with any offence before. He denied that he had anything to do with the stealing of Carveth's cattle. He denied being at Collin's farm, near Trent Bridge. He was not at Rich. McElvie's and the first time he had ever seen M. Kelvie was at Peterborough police station after his arrest. He was at home on the 4th of October and went to Roxboro's at Norwood and sold some rye, on Oct. 5. He had left some peas at the same time but did not get the money for them until he had brought all the peas in. Hard luck had overtaken him last summer and he had decided to sell out and get out of the country. He had never been without a moustache since the latter part of September. He wore black overalls on the 4th, and had never had blue ones until after the 5th. He always wore a hat. He wac never on good terms with Davie Hill.

Feud For Years

Cross-examined by Mr. Hatton, witness stated that the unfriendly feeling with Davis Hill had existed for years. He had negotiated for the rent of the Rusaw farm with Robert Hill. He had bid his wife goodbye when he left home on Oct. 17. He did not know that Davis Hill had been arrestde et the Sampson home until after he arrived in Watertown. He had walked part of the way to Campbellford and the other part he had driven to Hastings with a stranger and then went to Campbellford next morning on the train. He did not know what hotel he stopped at in Hastings. He did not sleep at the hotel. He got his meal at the restaurant across the bridge from the hotel. He stuck around for a while. Not having very much money he did not get a bed. He tried to get a job in several factories in Campbellford. He had asked for work at the woollen mill. He took the afternoon train out of Campbellford to Belleville. He stopped at different places until he reached Brockville, where he was unsuccessful in getting work. He then went across to Watertown. He never knew all this time that the police wanted him.

Why He Changed Name

"What reason had you for going under a different name?"

"I used part of my name, 'Joseph Vardi.'"

He did not know anything about the emigration laws and had been advised to change his name if he went to work. His sister in Watertown had given him the advice. It was not because the police were looking for him that he took an alias. His sister might have known. He only worked a few hours at the factory there before he met with an accident. He had been in Watertown two weeks or more before going to work. He was under the name of Sampson at his sister's house, but used "Vardi" at the ammunition factory. He did not tell the doctor his name but simply handed him the card from the factory. He was going to get some papers signed by Morrison in order to clear the deed of his farm There was an annuity due him. He denied telling anyone that the farm sold for $8,000 and would be invested in dairy business.

He did not see Davis Hill on Oct 4. He did not know Stephen Collins but had a sister in Campbellford married to a man named Collins. He was not in a hotel in Campbellford on Oct. 4. He did not see Kate Hill in any hotel there on Oct. 4.

The case is proceeding.

The body of Austin Church of Auburn, Ont., who was found dead in a stall three weeks ago, was exhumed and brought to Goderich for an inquest.

DISTRIBUTION OF N. S. CARDS IS COMPLETED

TELEGRAM OF GREETINGS FROM R. B. BENNETT, DIRECTOR-GENERAL.

Postmaster Edgar reports the distribution of National Service cards by the postmen was completed this afternoon The following telegram was received this morning by the postmaster:—

"On the eve of National Service week, may I extend to you and your staff the season's greeting with best wishes for your health, happiness and prosperity during the coming year, and at the same time express the hope that your city will give such a prompt and complete response to our inquiries through National Service cards as will enable the full power and resources of Canada to be directed against our common enemy, and thereby assist in securing a conclusive and lasting peace. — R. B. Bennett, Director-General.

COLLECTION OF N. S. CARDS.

The collection of the National Service cards by the postmen will start on Tuesday, when it is hoped to complete the task in Ashburnham. All who are requested to sign the cards should remember this duty and have the cards ready so that the collection will not be delayed. The postmen will notify the public of the area to be collected from on Wednesday and the following days of the week.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1916

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

THE TIME FOR forming resolutions, for registering new vows to live better lives, has come around again. The usual resolves will no doubt be recorded, too often only to be broken, cast aside, and forgotten before the new cycle of time is many days old.

This forming of new resolutions shows a commendable desire on the part of humanity to mend its devious ways and to walk the chalkline of rectitude in the future. But vows made only to be broken tend rather to weaken the character than otherwise. There is one resolution which, if made in good faith and rigidly observed, will do more to help make the world an earthly Paradise than any scheme that can be devised by mortal man. "Owe no man anything" should be the slogan for 1917. This is the season when all debts should be wiped off the slate, even if self-denial is necessary in order to accomplish the object. The grocer, the business man and the dealer in any other line who has carried you over when times were dull should not be forgotten now. The chances are that with so many accounts outstanding he is really as hard up as you ever were. He generally works harder and longer hours than you have ever known. The fact that he is in business for himself instead of in the employ of others is not conclusive evidence that he is a plutocrat. It may be that what is represented on his books in the way of debts is all that is between him and bankruptcy.

If you have fallen behind in the matter of keeping up your instalments for the Patriotic Fund or any other charitable scheme, now is the time to attend to it. Try by all means to start the new year off with a clean slate before you.

The man who attempts to dodge the payment of his just debts, who runs a bill in one place and then deserts the dealer for another when the day of settlement arrives is, after all, little better than the burglar or the footpad. It is simply a difference in the methods that are employed by each.

THE PASSING YEAR.

THE YEAR 1916 will always be recalled in Peterborough as the year of the big fire, when the Quaker Oats plant was destroyed and over a score of lives were lost. Up to date, this event holds the record as the worst calamity of the kind that has ever befallen the city.

Otherwise in local circles the year has been a quiet one. It will always be remembered as one of unparalleled prosperity with everyone at work at good wages and prosperity, unfortunately, that was to a large extent created by the calamity of war. The 93rd Battalion departed for the front during the year, and some of the members who left here "full of lusty life" have already fallen in battle.

The shadow of the war has fallen with the darkness of death over many a home in Peterborough. Brave young men who answered the call of Empire will never return. Others today are lingering between life and death in the hospitals, while the fate of all the others is in doubt. Any day the news of death, sickness or wounds may come to the anxious relatives. "The air is filled with farewells to the dying and mournings for the dead.

Many a Peterborough soldier has brought honor to his city by the distinction he has won for brave conduct on the field of battle. The city has every reason to be proud, not only of the number of men sent to the front, but of the record they have made while there.

The year has been an eventful one so far as the war is concerned. The tide has turned in favor of the Allies. The natal day of the Dominion of Canada marked the beginning of the big drive that was so long looked for. The end of the war may not yet be in sight, but the outlook is certainly brighter than it was at the beginning of the year. The very fact that Germany is sending out tentative terms of peace is proof that the Kaiser realizes he has undertaken a hopeless task.

The year 1916 will always be remembered, too, as one of abnormal weather conditions and of excessively high prices for the necessaries of life, the latter phenomenon being accounted for by the fact that nearly fifty million men have been taken from the ranks of the producers to fight in the trenches. At all cost these men must be fed, and the whole world is affected. The months of seedtime in Canada were marked by rainfall so heavy that not more than half the usual acreage of crop was sown. The wet spell was followed by a period of drought never before equalled in this country. Fires swept through the woodlands of New Ontario, villages were completely wiped out, and scores of lives were lost. It is not war alone that brings disaster to a nation.

For the coming year the prospects are, fortunately, hopeful. The industrial life of the country is still vigorous. Everyone able and willing to work can find employment. This city has enjoyed the most prosperous holiday season it has ever known. And, best of all, hope springs eternal in the breasts of the people that the end of the year upon the threshold of which we stand will find the world at peace.

THE SCHOOL BOARD ELECTION.

EVEN AMONG the more intelligent voters there appears to be a misapprehension with regard to the system of electing members of the School Board. These are chosen, not by wards, but by a general vote. There are six candidates now before the people, and of these four are to be elected. Any voter can put a cross opposite the name of four candidates, or if he wishes to render any one of them extra assistance he can vote for him alone, thus putting him in advance of all the others.

NO MORE LIQUOR CONTRACTS.

THE REVIEW management have decided that after the first of the year no more contracts will be taken for liquor advertisements. As soon as the contracts now in force expire, no advertisements of liquor will be published in this paper.

This decision is in line with that which has been reached by papers in Toronto and in other parts of the Province. The big dailies in Toronto will take no more of this class of business, but the contracts already in existence must be carried out or the papers would find themselves forced to defend actions for damages brought by the men with whom the agreements were made.

The management of The Review, in this matter, are still of the opinion that liquor will be imported into the Province, even if every newspaper in Ontario refuses to carry the advertisements of the dealers. The individuals and organisations that have been so active in this agitation have, we are convinced, approached the difficulty from the wrong direction. If it were illegal to import liquor into the province, the real object the agitators have in view, the question of advertising would cease to be an issue. The Province of Ontario has the power to stop the importation by a simple act of legislation, as The Review has repeatedly pointed out. We believe that the Legislature is as well within its rights to make it illegal for a man to keep liquor in his private house as in his garage, his stable or his office.

We still in all sincerity believe that the political party that when in power and since sitting on the Opposition benches made a football of the temperance question, to their own undoing, are yet playing with it. All attempts to get the issue out of politics have been frustrated. It is being thrust back again deeper than ever. Premier Hearst, when he passed the Ontario Temperance Act, took his political life in his hands, but, convinced that he was doing right, he accepted the issue. His opponents had nothing to risk. The Act, which they made a show of supporting, was vastly different, went infinitely further than their own sorry compromise on the temperance question, their banish the bar policy, that never for a moment deceived the majority of the people.

The Hearst Government have met with two reverses by reason of their temperance legislation. With ghoulish glee that they are unable to suppress the Opposition think that they have the Hearst Administration in a tight corner. They now propose to get the Dominion Government in the same predicament.

The Globe or any other Liberal organ, including our neighbor on George street, knows that liquor regulation is a purely provincial question. Quebec has just refused to adopt general prohibition. That being the case, the Federal authorities have no right to pass a Dominion-wide enactment that would force prohibitinon on Quebec. Such a measure would never survive a review by the Privy Council.

At the last session of the Dominion Parliament the Government went as far in this matter as it had authority to go. There can be no liquor imported into Ontario if the Legislature chooses to say the word. Will Mr. Rowell and his cohorts, the lukewarm temperance brigade that lacked the courage to even suggest the closing of the liquor shops, back up the Administration in a measure to forbid the private use of liquor?

It is politics, and small politics, too, on the part of any paper or party to urge the Dominion Government to take unconstitutional action. The trick is transparent. If the Government did take such a course it would be condemned. If it refuses to do so, the hope is that the prejudices of the temperance forces will be aroused against it.

The Review has the consolation of knowing that it supported provincial prohibition during war time from the first days of the agitation. It did not publish the paid-for arguments of the liquor dealers against it, as The Examiner did. When the Ontario Temperance Act was finally passed The Review did not find it necessary to turn a complete somersault in order to identify itself with the winning side.

THEN AND NOW.

IN 1908, Sir Robert Borden, then leader of the Opposition, voted that the then government had displayed deplorable inefficiency in having entered into a contract with the Ross Rifle Company, "which would bind this country for all time to come." Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his supporterts voted it down.

Now Sir Wilfrid and his supporters who made the contract perpetual against Sir Robert Borden's protest condemn him for maintaining the Ross rifle as a service arm.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE CANDIDATE may be mute wthout being inglorious.

• • • •

AND WHILE President Wilson keeps on writing, the British keep on shelling.

• • • •

THEN AGAIN, some candidates bring about their own defeat by indiscreet utterance.

• • • •

MAYOR DUFFUS seems to improve as a public speaker with his every appearance in that role.

• • • •

ISN'T IT REMARKABLE how many voters attempt to pose as labor men at every election?

• • • •

THE INTERESTS of our schools are paramount. Do not forget that when preparing your ballot next Monday.

• • • •

WITH SIX MEN in the field and four places to fill, which of the candidates is to be left on the outside?

• • • •

THE MAN with the acclamation returns in his inside pocket is about the only voter who can calmly regard the coming contest.

• • • •

THE WORLD is a year older, but President Wilson, groping for a reason for the war, does not appear to have added to his stock of wisdom during the past strenuous twelve months.

• • • •

DEFEAT MAY BE the best possible fate some of the candidates could meet with on Monday, as it may induce them to abandon running for office and take to chicken raising or some other side line as an avocation.

A GERMAN submarine commander is to be decorated for sinking, as he claims, one hundred and twenty-eight ships of the Allies, but a man who would follow that business is not to be trusted in the matter of keeping count.

BILLY SUNDAY PREDICTS HOT TIME FOR THOSE WHO DIE UNSAVED

Billy Sunday is conducting a series of revival meetings in Boston and the Herald of that city publishes the following account of one of his services:—

"There is no-o-oo-o second chance for the sinner!" preached Billy Sunday in the tabernacle last night. "And you've got a lot of brass, old man, you've got a lot of cheek, to ask a second chance when you wouldn't take what was offered you here!"

In a sermon bristling with the darts of the devil's imps, blistering with the heat of hellfire and pungent with the fumes of brimstone, the evangelist evoked visions of the everlasting, relentless torment of the damned. Declaring that hope of salvation ends with life, and the second death is a living death that lingers through all eternity, he condemned the unrepentant to the tortures of accusing conscience without hope and without mercy forever.

Out of an audience of somewhat less than 300 persons he drew 200 trail hitters. "I never saw more people come forward, in proportion to the size of the crowd," he said, as he dropped the trap door into place. Young men and young women led the trail hitting and made up the majority of those on the 'mourners' benches."

Mr. Sunday attributed the reduced attendance of the past few days to the weather and the holiday season. "I've never seen such a streak of bad weather as I have here," he said. "This is the second time I'm ever preached through the Christmas period. I told the committee I did not want to do it, but it was that or not at all. The other time was out in Joplin, Mo. I never tried it in a big city before, and I'll never do it again. Another time I'll cancel an engagement rather than do it."

Homer Rodeheaver put life into his reception of the special delegations. He was especially pleased by the group of 25 students from the Boston School of Painting, who had brought their pencils to sketch Billy and others of the Sunday party.

"This is the first time we've ever had a school of this kind at one of our meetings," he said, while the embryo artists, strove to transfer his smile to paper. "I thought at first that I could claim a part with them, but I find this isn't any kind of painting. I painted houses and furniture.

"A famous artist who paints farm scenes told me that instead of showing his picture of an ear of corn to his friends he showed it to a horse. If Dobbin tried to eat it the artist knew it must be all right.

"I heard of a great contest. An artist painted grapes so perfectly that birds came down and pecked at the canvas. But he failed to win the prize because another chap made a picture of a hen so perfect that when it flew into the waste basket it laid there.

'Wonderful possibilities are before you students. Some of the greatest messages to the American public have been given by the artist and the cartoonist."

Nearly half the members of the delegation shook hands with the evangelist after the sermon. Their pockets bulged with the sketches they had made during the meeting.

Rody played two trombone selections at the request of the big party from the Boston Sash, Door & Blind Co. He told the Hickok shorthand school people that they, with the artists, ought to be able to give a full report of the meeting.

WHY DO PEOPLE ATTEND CHURCH?

Frank B. Willis, Governor of the State of Ohio, was recently asked why people go to church, and submitted in reply the following list of reasons:

Because in every man's heart there is an everlasting hunger for something better than himself. Churchgoing helps to satisfy that longing and brings nearer the realization of his ideal.

Because attendance at church calls the mind away from the weary trifles and vexations of life and fixes it upon those things that abide and fade not away.

Because every man feels within his inmost soul the consciousness that his puny butterfly existence of a day is not the end—that after all the toil and disappointment and accomplishment of life he is not, as the autumn leaf, to fade and flutter to the earth, to pass into nothingness—churchgoing makes more confident that knowledge and assurance.

Because there burns in the breast the hope of another and better life beyond — the sacred atmosphere of the sanctuary keeps alive that flame and nurtures that hope.

Because he realizes — perhaps vaguely, but none the less truly—that somehow through the centuries the Church has kept alive the forces that have uplifted mankind and preserved civilisation. Attendance at church brings him in closest touch with those forces, and makes him feel their influence in his own life.

Because at church he hears in simplest, most eloquent and most majestic words from the Book of Books the sublimest truths which the human soul, groping for light and help, ever seeks.

Because at church he can lift his voice in song and keep fresh the memory of inspiring old hymns, strangely and sadly sweet, as they were sung by a mother's voice, perhaps silent now in this world, but singing on, we know, on fairer shores as she waits our coming.

Folks go to church because, in a way which they themselves might be unable to define, they there get the inspiration that feeds the flowers of hope and makes possible the fruitage of better life—because the crowds wending churchward and the spires pointing skyward symbolize the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God—a relationship made understandable and possible by the vicarious life of the lowly Nazarene.

WHY THE NEIGHBORS PUT IN A PHONE

Mrs. Markham looked across the breakfast table at her husband. "Well," she said, "I've stood all I'm going to! I don't care whether they are next door neighbors; I've no call to——"

"You mean you've had too many calls for them, and you feel that you have no call to them any more, and so when you call them to answer a call, you don't want to call them, but you do want to call them down, because somebody has called them up——"

"The subject doesn't admit of jesting," Mrs. Markham said sternly. "If you had to do it you'd see. If it isn't Mr. Holt on some business matter, it's Mrs. Holt with some of her club associates, and if neither of the parents is wanted it's one of the girls to talk to her beau, or that young Indian of a boy to answer some school friend!"

Markham smiled. "Well," he assured her, "if you really feel that way about it, I'll see what I can do."

Mrs. Markham appeared skeptical, but she said nothing, and Markham went away to the office. At half-past 12 o'clock the telephone in the Markham home rang, and a voice asked pleasantly for Mr. Holt. Mrs. Markham frowned, but she went over and called him. Holt appeared surprised when he took up the receiver. He said: "What?" "Who?" "Oh, yes, I see." He was extremely noncommittal after that, and as he left he looked queerly at Mrs. Markham. At half-past 1 o'clock came a call for Mrs. Holt. Mrs. Markham considered that two calls in one afternoon was rather more than was appropriate, but she summoned her neighbor. Mrs. Holt also seamed to find something peculiar in the speech of the person calling her. As she left she looked knowingly at Mrs. Markham. Then, at half-past 2 and half-past 3 respectively came calls for the two Holt girls as well. The first answered in her sweetest beau voice and then snapped "Oh!" and cut the conversation as short as was consistent with good manners. The second girl seemed angry when she came at Mrs. Markham's notification, and barely answered the person asking for her. She seemed angrier when she left. Then, at half-past 4, the boy was called. He appeared sheepish, but he evidently had been well coached, for all he would say into the transmitter was, "Oh, I don't know nothin' about it." For the life of her Mrs. Markham could not understand. She was still puzzling over it when Markham came home early.

"George, the strangest things happened today," she began. "The Holts——"

Markham grinned. "Be at ease," he counselled her, "the police are not after them. That was a friend of mine. He asked 'em each and every one why they didn't have a 'phone put in. And he called me just before I left to tell me that Holt appeared at the telephone office and ordered one in immediately."

"Well," said Mrs. Markham, "I'll never again repeat the old stuff about genius being nothing more than an infinite capacity for taking pains!"

Twenty Years Ago

From The Review of Dec. 30th, 1896:

R. Sheehy, T. J. Doris, John Kylie, Dr. Moher and M. H. Quinlan were nominated for Separate School trustees.

A YEAR AGO TODAY.

French troops in the Vosges won a victory, the captures of several days totalling 1,663 prisoners. Germans suffered heavy losses in British bombing attack at Armentieres. The Austrians were forced to retreat before the Russians on the Besarabia border. Serbs and Montenegrins join forces and drive the Austrians from Montenegrin territory.

Two Austrian destroyers were sunk in the Adriatic.

British cabinet crisis was surmounted, Asquith receiving influential support.

LAKEFIELD

(Special Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 30.—Miss Ella Higgins, who graduated with honors last month from Aultman Memorial Hospital, Canton, Ohio, is at present visiting relatives in the village.

Mr. Alex. Macdonald has returned to the village after spending the past six months in Melfort, Sask.

The annual New Year's entertainment will be given in the town hall under the auspices of the Presbyterian Sunday school. A splendid program, consisting of songs, recitations, drills, dialogues, etc., is being prepared.

The next meeting of the Choral Society will be held at the home of Mr. John Waldon, Regent street, on January 8th.

The regular meeting of the A. Y. P. A. was held in the S. S. room Tuesday, Dec. 26th. A Christmas party was the program scheduled for the evening. In addition to this a shower for the convalescent soldiers at Gravenhurst was given and donations were sent in.

Mr. Chas. McWilliams of Ottawa is spending a few days in the village visiting his grandfather, Mr. McWilliams.

Pte. Harry Simpson, who has been invalided home, is spending a few days' leave at his home here.

Mrs. Reginald Barlow of Toronto is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Sawyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kidd of Toronto spent Christmas the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Kidd.

The annual Christmas treat for the pupils of St. John's Sunday school was given in the Sunday school room Thursday afternoon.

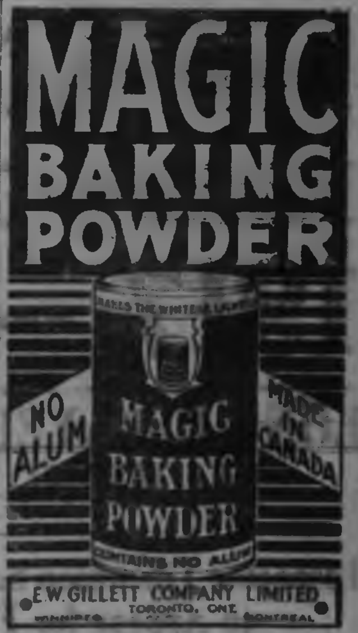
Mr. R. G. Madill of Queen's University, Kingston, is spending his vacation at his home in the village.



Wit and Wisdom

A boy in a Sunday School, when asked the questinon, "What is the chief end of man?" replied, "The chief end is the end with the head on."

Tommy—What is "being candid," father?

Father—Speaking unto others as you would not like them to speak to you.

Willy—I met our new minister on my way to Sunday school, mamma, and he asked me if I ever played marbles on Sunday.

Mother—H'm—and what did you say to that?

Willy—I said, "Get thee behind me, Satan," and walked off and left him.

Little Bessie was experiencing all the suffering which ingratitude brings in its train. Her little brother, only now convalescent from an attack of measles, was sitting up in bed munching at a sponge cake.

"Won't you give your little sister a piece?" she asked coaxingly.

"No, I won't!" said Sammy, with uncompromising decision. And he ate on steadily till the last mouthful was disposed of. Then Bessie could stand it no longer.

"Mother," she cried. "Sammy's a wicked, greedy boy! He wouldn't give me the tiniest piece of his cake, and all the time it was me that gave him the measles."

The highest rewards, we thoughtfully observed to the young lady across the way, are found in service, and she said she guessed that was about right, and they were paying their cook $9 a week now.

SHE WAS A QUEEN

SOME REMNANTS OF FADED ROYAL GLORY EXIST IN HAWAII.

When the picturesque opera bouffe kingdom of Hawaii succumbed to the law of destiny in 1893, when the reigning Queen was deposed and a republic set up, and five years later when the republic became a territory of the United States of America, the romance of the old-time Government disappeared with the furling of the beautiful Hawaiian flag. But the old moonlit nights still remain; the same incomparable climate still enthralls, and the tinkle and the strum of the ukulele and guitar are heard beneath the cocoanut palms as the native Hawaiians sob their ear-haunting melodies.

No longer is the old palace filled with diplomatists of foreign stations, distinguished generals, admirals, writers, and playfolk are no longer received in the old throne room by a Hawaiian king or queen. Of all the old regime, there still remains only the deposed queen, Liliuokalani, living a still eventful life in Washington place, the home of her husband, the prince consort; a home filled with relics of the days of royalty.

To-day, however, the Queen is honored in Washington place and elsewhere as if she sat upon the throne of old Hawaii. On Hawaiian holidays, on her birthday, and many other occasions, she receives in semi-royal state; the guests are ushered into her drawing-room by the same officers who officiated when she was in the palace; the introductions are made by the same courteous gentleman who officiated as chamberlain during her reign; her attendants are the same women who attended her in the brilliant days of the monarchy. Social life in old Hawaii still centres in Washington place, and all delight in honoring the beloved queen. The people of Hawaii who overturned the monarchy still give sincere homage to this woman.

The monarchy made its impress upon the people and their customs in the past, and many of these customs of habit and precedence have not yet been overcome, for the etiquette of the court of St. James prevailed at the palace during the reign of King Kalakaua and Queen Liliuokalani.

There are as many beautiful gowns seen in Hawaii as in the cities of the mainland. In former days, when Hawaii was an independent country, silks and satins were easier to obtain than now. In the old days the opera house would be filled with beautifully gowned women, and men always wore conventional evening clothes. The formal affairs were and are characterized by such toilettes as are seen in London, Paris, and Berlin.

The army now forms a large part of the population of Honolulu. Its uniforms are seen at all formal affairs; in fact, the companies that assemble in Honolulu are often far more brilliant than are to be met in mainland cities. The social code of Honolulu is strict, and formality demands a regard for the rules that have been found necessary for the common good of society everywhere. The city of Honolulu is divided into social districts, all of the women of the same neighborhood receiving on the same day.

Dreaded Cargoes.

At first sight it would seem that dynamite was a cargo to be carefully avoided. But from a sailor's point of view there are far more dangerous loads. He dreads, for instance, a cargo of sugar. Put hundreds of tons of cane sugar in casks in the hold of a vessel and let the ship steam through a belt of hot weather. The odor is sickening. The sailors cannot get the sweet taste out of their mouths. They crave vinegar or lemon-juice—anything sour. They lose their appetites and are always glad when a voyage on which the cargo was sugar is over.

Coffee is as disagreeable as sugar, in addition to being very dangerous.

Cotton is a really dangerous cargo. If a little oil happens to touch raw cotton the result is what is called spontaneous combustion. A single bale of cotton saturated with such an oil as boiled linseed, and lying at the bottom of a hold, can be compared only to a slow match attached to a bomb.

Acids and other chemicals form dangerous cargoes. Carbide of calcium, for instance, is more dangerous than dynamite. Acetylene gas is made from this chemical, and the gas is constantly given off if the product is exposed to the air.

Shipmasters dislike carrying drums of acid where they cannot be reached readily. A Chilian ship put in at the Falkland Islands leaking badly. Her cargo was made up of drums of acid and chalk. The acid had leaked from the drums and mixed with the chalk, forming carbonic acid gas in the hold. This gas is deadly and the crew could not make repairs. Meantime the acid had gathered at the bottom of the hold and eaten away the iron frames of the ship.—Tit-Bits.

Where He Drew the Line.

There is a story going the rounds about the famous sandstorms that swept over Camp Borden during the past summer. One particularly windy day when the clouds of sand were driving across the grounds a recruit ventured to seek shelter in the sacred precincts of the cook's domain. After a time he broke an awkward silence by saying to the cook: "If you put the lid on the camp boiler you will not get so much sand in the soup."

The irate cook glared at the intruder and then burst out: "Look here my lad, your business is to serve your country."

"Yes," interrupted the man in khaki, "but not to eat it."

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema—and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning—as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

An Expert Tells Mothers How to Avoid and Prevent This Scourge.

The following statement was issued recently by Dr. Charles F. Bolduan, director of the bureau of public health education of New York city:

"Infantile paralysis is caused by a very small germ, perhaps the smallest germ known, entering the brain and spinal cord of little children. The germ probably gets in through the nose or mouth. It is important to keep your children away from those who have the disease and also away from the other members of the family in which the case has developed.

"The reason for this is that the germ is in the nose and throat of the patient and frequently is carried there by others in the household.

"Read the list of addresses where the disease has occurred and which are published in the newspapers, and keep away from the infected houses.

"Every mother should keep her children about her much as a hen looks after her little chicks. It is dangerous to let children attend parties and festivals and to take them into crowds where they may sit alongside of some person who has the germs in his or her nose.

"Since the germs are so very small and may be present on the hands or the face or soiled handkerchiefs, even when there is no visible dirt, the utmost cleanliness is necessary. See that the hands and the faces of your children are kept absolutely clean. Soap and water, after all, are the greatest foes of all disease.

"Clean up your house. Throw away all useless rubbish. Take down the curtains and wash them. Wipe all the woodwork with a damp cloth."

"Know thyself," but don't overdo things by being too exclusive.

NATIONALISM AND THE WAR

GREAT SPIRIT THAT MAKES FOR GOOD AND EVIL.

At the first of a series of meetings arranged by a Liverpool committee for the study of international relations, Prof. J. Ramsay Muir, the well-known historian, delivered a lecture in which the topics of militarism and nationalism were touched upon. Prof. Ramsay Muir said that a study of history enabled them to gain an understanding of the elements of the problem presented by the European situation, but it did not offer a solution. Some held that a state of war was a state of nature, while others attributed wars to the defects of politicians. Both those statements were shallow. He did not regard the maintenance of an adequate army as militarism. The inadequacy of the army of France or Britain might encourage the militarism of Prussia. It was not militarism which had advanced Prussia, but the unification of Germany.

Every war of the Nineteenth Century could be traced directly to the operation of the nationalist tendency, but despite the wars it had caused, nationalism had proved to be one of the most beneficial factors in the history of civilization and the only means of establishing effective self-government. By allowing nationalism to be fostered instead of repressing it a permanent peace would be promoted. If nationalism had been wisely developed in Austria-Hungary and Southeastern Europe, Germany would not have found the opportunity to launch this war. Nationality did not rest on a racial basis, but on language. Dealing with the relation of trade to war he did not think that commerce could bring peace to the world, many wars having been due to trade rivalry, and others to the rivalry of European powers for the domination of the whole world. British imperialism, he was happy to say, had come to have a new meaning, a stable government for the peoples of India and Egypt, and a protection and uplifting for the backward races of Africa.

Cautious With Bill.

"When Bill Biffkins goes to church they always pass the contribution plate to him before any one else."

"Why is that? Is he such a generous giver?"

"Not he. By passing it to him first they don't stand a chance of losing anything but the empty plate."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Fertility.

"So you think that this land would produce forty bushels of corn to the acre?" asked the newcomer of Farmer Baggs.

"Forty bushels an acre!" replied Baggs. "Why, that land would produce forty bushels an acre if it was never planted."—New York Times.

The Bubonic Plague.

The bubonic plague of today is identical with the "black death" of the middle ages. Primarily a disease of rodents caused by a short dumb bell shaped microscopic vegetable, the pest bacillus, it occurs in man in three forms—the pneumonic, which has a death rate of almost 100 per cent; the septicaemic, which is nearly as fatal, and the bubonic, in which even with the most modern methods of treatment the mortality is about 50 per cent. The disease is now treated by a serum discovered through the genius of Yersin. This is used in much the same way as is diphtheria anti-toxin.

Cats Made Her a Pauper.

"I have known her to have as many as 100 cats, and I am afraid they proved her ruin," a witness, according to The London Chronicle, said at the inquest on Miss Jane Derby Hyde, who died suddenly in the street at Sydenham. The witness described her as an animal specialist. He had known Miss Derby Hyde since 1901, when she was rather well off. Her hobby was prize cats. "She possessed some of the finest animals in the world," he said. "They were of all kinds—English and foreign—and I suppose she must have taken some of the most valuable prizes and medals in the world. Sometimes she would pay 40 or 50 pounds for a cat, and once I knew her to pay even more. At last it came to an end." Miss Grace Waldy, with whom Miss Derby Hyde had lived for twelve months, said that the dead woman was brought up in a convent. Originally she was well off, but recently she had been dependant on charity.

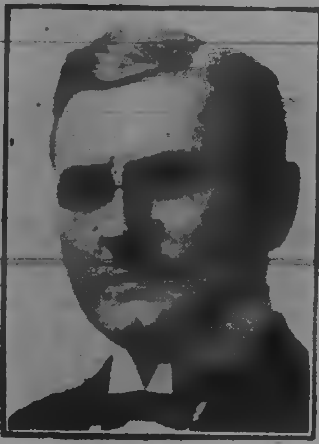
A. A. FOWLER FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION



NEW BLOOD MEANS NEW ENERGY

In selecting your candidates for the Board of Education, keep in mind that the keynote of progress is renewed life and vigor in the executive bodies that have to handle the business of this growing city.

In offering myself as candidate for a position on this Board, I do so realizing that only a man's best service will meet the growing need for practical business methods in this most important branch of the City's business. My record as a business man for the last fourteen years and a lifelong resident in Peterborough, residing in East City for twenty-five years, is well known to a large number of our citizens, and I trust is sufficient evidence of my ability to warrant your support in my present candidature.

Should I be elected, I promise to weigh most carefully all matters involving expenditure of the city's finances, and to countenance only strictly business methods in undertaking any work being handled by this Board.

Soliciting the support of every progressive voter, I am,

Yours for Progress,

When Mr. B. F. Ackerman was elected to the Board of Education in 1904 the value of public school property was $90,500. Today the splendid buildings and property are conservatively estimated at a value of $366,000. In all that time Mr. Ackerman was a member of the building committee, and he was chairman of the building committee having supervision over the erection of the Queen Mary and King Edward Schools, which are second to none in the province.

Mr. Ackerman believes the citizens appreciate the value of Peterborough's fine schools, and that they realize that the best possible value has been received for the large expenditures of money.

He is a candidate for re-election to the Board.

ANNUAL BIG ENTERTAINMENT AT CHEMONG

OSHKIGMONG, Dec. 30.—Christmas Day has brought another gladness to the people of Chemong, more especially to the children, who at an early hour of the morning called at each house with the usual greeting, "Merry Christmas," and in return the visitor received as a token of appreciation for their morning call an apple, candy, etc.—a custom practised for generations past and is still existing in Chemong. In the afternoon the members of the band rendered some fine selections in the town hall enlivening the occasion, while Mr. Alf. McCue and Mrs. Robt. Duggan were busily engaged in preparing the children for the evening entertainment, which by their elaborate efforts the children were able to execute their pieces with efficiency.

The evening program consisted as follows:—

Selection by the choir—Glory to God in the Highest.

Address by the Chief.

Recitation by Ethel Jacobs.

Song by the children—Tiddle-de-winks.

Dialogue—Not quite a bargain, by Stella and Maggie Taylor.

Recitation by Bernice Tobico.

Song—Sweetly sang the angels, by the children.

Recitation—What little folks can do, by Steven Taylor, Willie F. Whetung, George McCue, Viola Johnson and Lavina Taylor.

Cornet solo by Dave Taylor.

Dialogue—Fanny Gray, by Austin McCue and Lottie Johnson.

Recitation —Kechemockekee, by James Johnson.

Song—Let them come to me, by the children.

Recitation—An owl wooing a nightinagle, by Clayton McCue.

Dialogue—Almost a runaway, by George Whetung and Steven Taylor.

Violin selection by John F. Jacobs and Mrs. D. E. Whetung.

Cantata—The ever green club and flower girls, by the children.

Dialogue—Sick doe, by Stella and Maggie Taylor and Steven Taylor.

Song—Waiting for a bite, by Geo. Whetung, D. McCue, C. McCue and S. Taylor.

Violin and mandolin section by John Jacobs and son.

Song—Good-by, mother dear, by Mrs. A. and Miss Coppway.

Watching for Santa Claus, by Allan Taylor and Bertie McCue.

Recitation—What I can do, by G. McCue.

Song—The little gipsy girl, by Maggie Taylor and Lottie Johnson.

Song—I want to kiss daddy tonight, by Bertie McCue.

Few of our neighbors at Hiawatha were present, including Chief Crow.

David Simcoe and Pte. A. Stinson of Barrie spent Christmas with their friends at Chemong.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Duggan and Lavinia Whetung drove to Hiawatha on Tuesday.

Miss Ruth Whetung is recovering from her sickness.

Mr. A. W. McCue of Toronto is here visiting friends.

THE LATEST REPORT on the condition of Mr. G. N. Gordon is: pulse normal, appetite normal, patient resting comfortably; no setback expected.

IF WAR ANSWERS Sherman's description, what is a municipal council, and why do seemingly well balanced citizens break their necks in an effort to get there?

◆ ◆ ◆

TO DATE no candidate has claimed the credit of the municipal free rinks for the simple reason, probably, that the free rinks have not struck their mid-season form. Another reason is seen in the acclamation of Ald. Dobbin to the chamber where they sometimes sing, "We won't be home till morning!"

To the Ratepayers of Ward No. 1

Having been nominated as a candidate for Alderman for Ward No. 1, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to secure my election.

Now that the Street Railway is owned by the Provincial Government there is no reason why this railway should not be extended, without any expense to the ratepayers, to furnish better accommodation for the ratepayers residing in different parts of Ward No. 1, and if elected I shall use my best endeavors to secure such improved Street Railway accommodation.

There is a great shortage in the production of electric power at Niagara Falls to supply power to munition and other manufacturers. Peterborough could furnish immediately to manufacturers upwards of 2,500 horse power which is daily going to waste. The fact that Peterborough has such surplus power is not generally known throughout the Province. This surplus power could be used to manufacture much-needed munitions, encourage manufacturers to locate in Peterborough, and thereby be a great advantage to every workingman and property owner without the expenditure of a single dollar by the ratepayers.

If I am elected I pledge myself to actively assist in seeing that this great public utility is used for the best advantage of our city.

Yours respectfully,

W. H. Taylor

SERVICES TOMORROW IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

At the morning service in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church the pastor, Rev. R. Pogue, will refer to the call for National Service and the duty of the church to the Empire in the present hour. He will discuss whether or not prayer is a national asset and whether or not the church is doing all that she might against the power of German militarism in the use that she makes of the power of prayer. His subject in the evening will be specially appropriate for the last day of the old year. He will speak on the text: "And the door was shut." Strangers are welcome to the services.

Whatever you do, don't miss voting for A. A. Fowler for Board of Education.

TRAVELLING MEN DINE.

Matthews-Blackwell Staff Hold Annual Convention.

The travellers for the Matthews-Blackwell Company held their annual convention yesterday and the proceedings wound up with a dinner at the Empress Hotel. Those present were: Messrs. J. A. Harper, R. S. Hall, M. Rosenburg, M. J. Shea, W. R. Hardy, Joseph Bleakley, F. Lowe, C. McLean, B. Everett, J. A. Jary, L. Ball and W. R. Draffin.

TENDERS FOR ASHES LAID OVER BY THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE

The Property Committee met last night to see what could be realized for the ashes from the incinerator for the year 1917. The members were considerably disappointed in the tenders, as the highest offer was $85 less than what was received for them last year.

The tenders received were:

M. M. Stevens	$ 50.00
George Doig	125.00
H. F. Doig	155.00

After considering all the possibilities, the committee decided to make inquiries as to what disposal Toronto and other cities make of the ashes from their incinerators, and in the meantime they will return the deposits of the two lowest tenderers. The chairman, after considering the contracts of other municipalities, has power to dispose of the Peterborough product.

Says Mr. Gordon Has Record Which Has Been For the City's Good

Edward Navey Finds Much in Favor of Candidate.

Editor Review: The Review did me the honor of partly answering my letter in an editorial, but The Review has not kept in mind the fact that Mr. G. N. Gordon is offering his services to the public, and is the only lawyer at present on the Board of Education. It is quite true that there is a doctor or two on the Board, which is also helpful, and business men with their varied experiences are useful in assisting in the management of the Board's affairs. However, Mr. Gordon has always been active in assisting in the city's government. He has put in his time in trying to get industries here, and, in fact, did locate various industries like the De Laval, the Henry Hope, and the Vermont Marble, and I see that he has recently been using his efforts to induce some wealthy Montreal capitalists to extend the old Cordage Plant, where the Peterborough Metal Products Co. is now carrying on business. All these things help and show a record which should not be forgotten, but show that a man who is active with the city's good should be kept in public life, and used to help the city as far as he is able, and Mr. Gordon has a record in Peterborough which has been for the city's good.

It is true he is ready to criticize things he does not accept as satisfactory. Perhaps at times his criticism is more strongly put than usually is done, but he is enthusiastic in the belief that Peterborough is to be a great city, and his support to Peterborough has been strong and vigorous ever since I have known him. In addition to that he has a most kindly and generous disposition; he is always willing to get suggestions and to listen to what ratepayers have to say, and his good sense in this is shown by the fact that no doubt he has been credited with ideas he has really obtained from people who had thought these matters out and given their opinions to him.

He is one of the men who is needed in the young life of this city to help it along. He has done his part, and has given assistance when called upon to assist in any enterprise, and the fact that he has been spending his week of election time in organizing a big company in the hope that it will double its output and double its payroll, shows that he is willing to give up a good deal of time he might have spent in canvassing for his election, to help everybody concerned in this city, because the only way in which this city will ever grow to be a great city is by the increased development of the manufacturing interests, and having these and making these as diverse as possible.

As a working man who earns his living by his daily toil, I feel that it is in the interests of all that Mr. Gordon should be one of the men returned to the Board of Education, because he is a believer in education and we would have in Peterborough the best system of technical education a city of this kind can afford, because it means increased earning power, a better city and happier community.

I urge all my old-time friends to give a vote for Mr. Gordon, whom I have every confidence will not hesitate to see that right is done and do the best that he can in the interests of the men who pay the taxes.

EDWARD NAVEY.

Don't Confuse the New Edison with a "Talking Machine"

There is this Vital Difference

THERE are nearly 100 different makes of talking machines and so-called Phonographs on the market. Each differs from the others in certain mechanical details, but all have a common characteristic in varying degree, viz.: — a strident and unnatural tone. So much for all talking machines.

Now with reference to

The NEW EDISON

BY actual comparison with more than a score of great singers and instrumentalists it has been demonstrated that the New Edison re-creates all forms of music with such literal fidelity that the original cannot be distinguished from the Re-Creation when both are heard in direct comparison. The truthfulness of this statement is not open to question. These comparisons were made in public before more than 300,000 people and are chronicled in nearly 300 of America's principal newspapers.

No talking machine could sustain such a test and no talking machine manufacturer would dare to submit his machine to such a test in public. Therefore, you will understand why we say the New Edison is not a talking machine.

Come to Our Store

We want you to hear this wonderful new instrument. We want you to read what the leading newspapers have to say about this New Edison invention. But most of all we want you to hear the instrument itself.

WATCH-NIGHT SERVICE WILL BE HELD AT BETHANY TABERNACLE

As we purpose holding an old-fashioned watch-night service in the Tabernacle on Sunday night, I gratefully use the columns of our generous dailies in extending to all a sincere and hearty invitation to attend this annual "feast of fat things."

The regular service will begin at 7 p.m., with a bright, joyous song service, followed by an address on "The Year of Jubilee." In these portentous days, so full of startling events, pointing with indisputable precision to the approaching storm of Tribulation and outpoured Divine wrath, this subject should bring much-needed comfort and blessing to all who believe.

Miss Nellie Jones will bring us a special message in song, and at intervals throughout the evening other addresses will be given by Rev. Robert Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, Mr. H. B. Cowan, of the same congregation, Mrs. McElhiney of the Salvation Army, and others who have so kindly consented to help us in making this service a peculiar blessing to the Christian public of Peterborough.

Song, testimony, prayer, and a quiet question hour on the prophetic chart will fill in the intervals between addresses.

Friends attending this service are requested to feel at liberty to come in or go out at any hour of the evening as they may choose, as the service will continue until the New Year has been announced.

We extend herewith our heartiest wishes for a happy New Year to the Press staff and to all fellow-Christians of our city.—A. G. Doner.

SLEIGH RIDE AND TEA FOR S.S. SCHOLARS

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL OF ST. ANDREW'S.

Instead of the customary Christmas concert and tree St. Andrew's Sunday School was entertained yesterday evening in a very unique fashion. Messrs. Petrie, Grier, White and McKee, farmers and members of the congregation, and Dr. F. L. Robinson kindly brought or sent sleighs and gave the children a ride around the city. The junior pupils went early in the evening and the seniors later. Upon the return of the sleighs to the schoolroom an excellent tea was served to all. To say that the children enjoyed the drive, the meal and the bag of candy given each one would be putting it mildly. After the tea Rev. Thomas H. Mitchell gave a brief but excellent talk upon the qualities of spirit that should prevail at Christmas time. He emphasized the elements of joy, generosity and forgiveness.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to those who had so generously provided the sleighs, to the ladies for the excellent tea they had provided and served, and to the superintendent, Mr. Gilman, for his kindness in donating the ice cream. This most pleasant and informal programme was brought to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne and prayer by Mr. Mitchell.

The Sunday School desires to thank most heartily all those who assisted in any way in giving the pupils such an enjoyable evening.

A. A. Fowler is the promising young business man who is offering his services to the city. Vote for him on Monday.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

TAKE NO CHANCES

Buying a Ford is much like buying a new farm or a good bond. It is a profitable investment. A Ford is what the bankers call a cash asset.

The man or woman who buys a Ford car takes no chances. There is no risk involved. It is an investment that is absolutely safeguarded and one that will yield a great return in health, pleasure, and satisfaction. It will bring increased cash returns in business.

Ford cars have the strongest backing and guarantee of any motor cars made. They are constructed on gineering principles that have prov their merit beyond any shadow doubt. The fittest survive. Nei men nor machines, if they are un can long withstand the crushi strain of an exacting existence. strength has withstood supreme in every land where man himself penetrated.

Would Give Good Service to City

A. A. FOWLER WELL EQUIPPED FOR SEAT ON THE SCHOOL BOARD.

It has always been a difficult thing to persuade the successful business man to undertake a share in the municipal government of the city, but there is an opportunity to secure one at this election.

Mr. A. A. Fowler, who has allowed his name to go before the electors as a candidate for a seat on the Board of Education is one of our rising young business men and his fourteen years' experience in the city has been one of systematic advance, always keeping his establishment fully up to most modern requirements, and the same foresight and aggressiveness given to the important affairs that are handled by the Board of Education will make Mr. Fowler a most valuable member of that body.

By all means see that Mr. Fowler is elected on Monday and let him see that his willingness to become a civic servant is appreciated.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Sugar is easier in tone and further declines would not come as a surprise when the new Cuban crops of raws begins to reach the market in volume in the first month of the year. Prospects for a record crop of cane sugar in Cuba continue good. Live and dressed hogs hold steady with an anticipation of light supplies, which is expected to make firmer prices before the week is over. Butter is easier in tone and a downward tendency is not improbable. Eggs are also easier in price. Consumption has been curtailed, and new-laids are coming in in little better numbers, with the prospect of better supplies in January. Cheese is holding firm, due to the export demand. Poultry received a setback in Ontario during the week. Considerable stocks were left in the hands of Toronto wholesalers and retailers after the Christmas trade. This will have the tendency to make prices easier for some little time.

Canned tomatoes are easier owing to the decreased demand. Corn and peas, however, hold firm. There is still some inquiry for United States canned goods. Dried fruits were well cleaned out of wholesalers' hands for the holiday trade. Some California fruit now on the way is being held up through freight embargoes on the American railways.

Flour advanced during the week, and has recovered some of its former strength.

This week business is quiet, owing to most of the travellers being in off the road, and on account of stocktaking, which is now under way in most wholesale and retail businesses.

Fake Mines Common.

These are prosperous days for the unscrupulous mining promoter. With copper, zinc, lead, and other metals selling at prices which enable anything entitled to the name of a mine to pay dividends of unprecedented amount, it is the easiest thing in the world to excite the public's imagination with respect to the possibilities of almost any kind of mining enterprise and to separate the person of small means from his hard-earned savings.

The commonest method of approach to the public is through the advertising columns of newspapers. "Buy now before the stock is listed," reads one advertisement. "Do not wait, because the price is going to be advanced 10, 25, or 50 cents a share after such and such a date," reads another. "Latest advices," declares a third, "announce a big strike of bonanza ore." "So and so, the famous mining engineer," reads still another, "wires that the future of our property is assured." Sometimes a map shows the alleged strike and the contiguity of the property to the mine of some reputable corporation. The photograph of men engaged in actual mining is frequently resorted to. And the public—well, they simply "fall for it" in droves.

It is probably no exaggeration to say that at least 25 to 50 per cent of this kind of thing is inspired by out-and-out crookedness, and that the greater part of the remainder, though free, perhaps, from the taint of dishonesty, has its roots in the ignorance and unfounded enthusiasm of prospectors and promoters. If more than two or three out of every fifty new mining enterprises whose securities are publicly advertised today develop into profitable undertakings, then we may safely abandon the teachings of experience. For if there be more than two or three established mines to-day whose securities were advertised in the same bizarre fashion ten, fifteen, or twenty years ago, we can not readily call to mind their names.

Under the auspices of the Brantford trades and labor council, Miss Laura Hughes of Toronto gave an address advocating that women workers receive equal wages with men.

Even an amateur organist can play a wedding march that is entirely satisfactory to the female in the case.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SOLDIERS TWO BEHIND

The 247th hockey team played a friendly game in Parry Sound last night and were defeated by a score of 4 to 2.

The game is described as a good one and the soldier boys were surprised at the strength they demonstrated in their first real game of the season.

A despatch on the game says:

Parry Sound, Dec. 29. — In an exhibition game here tonight between the 247th Bn. O. H. A. intermediate team, Peterborough, and Nobel, the latter won by the score of 4 to 2. The game was lively throughout and towards the end some very fast play developed. Penalties were few. Jamieson and Halpin starred for Peterborough, while T. Arbour and McMenemy were the best for the locals. The score by periods: First, Nobel 1-0; second, 2-2; third, 1-0. The teams:

247th Bn. — Goal, Legroe; defence, Halpin and Newman; rover, Flanagan; centre, Jamieson; wings, Armstrong and Evans.

Nobel — Goal, Brothers; defence, Flesher and Taylor; rover, McMenemy; centre, T. Arbour; wings, Jones and J. Arbour.

Referee—D. Campbell, of Parry Sound.

VICE-PRESIDENT—W. D. Campbell, D Davidson, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, W. H. Denham, H. F. Foote, R. P. Best.

2:30 P. M.

PRESIDENT—W. M. Lang, T. F. Matthews, J. W. McDermid, W. H. Taylor, R. M. Waddell, R. G. Sturgeon.

VICE-PRESIDENT—W. G. Morrow, W. G. Ferguson, Dr. Greer, Robt. Hicks, A. C. Kay, Dr. Wightman.

LINSDAY SCORED 20 COUNTERS

SCORED ALMOST AT WILL AGAINST TEAM FROM COBOURG.

LINDSAY, Dec. 30.—By the score of 20 to 4 Lindsay trimmed Cobourg in the opening game of the O. H. A. intermediate season here last night before one of the largest crowds in years. Cobourg were simply outclassed from the drop of the puck, while the locals put up a good brand of hockey and scored almost at will. The game was free from roughness, only a couple of penalties being imposed. The teams:

Referee—Bond, of Peterborough.

Mark X opposite A. A. Fowler's name on the Board of Education ballot on Monday. He deserves it.

LAW ASSOCIATION WILL GIVE FREE ASSISTANCE

The members of the Peterborough Law Association have unanimously agreed to give all necessary assistance free of charge to those requiring help in filling out the National Service cards. YOUNG MEN AND BOYS ARE INVITED TO Y.M.C.A.

Welcome Awaits Them on First Day of New Year.

The Y. M. C. A. will be open to the young men and boys of the city on Monday, New Year's Day. All young men and boys over 12 years are invited to take advantage of the privileges. The Boys' Department schedule for visitors is as follows: Game room and skating rink open 9:30 to 11:30; gymnasium, 9:30 to 11:30; swimming pool, 11 to 11:30. Mr. Cowan has agreed to play ten members of the Boys' Department at one time in a checker tournament. This will be an interesting event for the players of the game as well as for spectators.

In the afternoon the athletic meet will be held at 2:30 for the senior employed boys and junior Collegiate class.

The customary formal reception will not be held this year on account of the many and important activities carried on by the ladies who usually provide this feature.

Bowling and billiards will be free during the day for senior members and their friends, and at night bowling tournaments will be arranged.

The regular gymnasium classes which have been somewhat interrupted during the week, will be resumed on Tuesday, January 2nd, and the prospects are that all classes will continue to maintain the high standard of interest and attendance set during the last three months. The Senior Employed Boys' League will open the new series on Thursday night, January 4th. The Junior Collegiate team will aso get started this week in the second series, the first games being scheduled for Saturday morning.

J. H. SMITH TELLS WHAT HE WILL DO FOR ASHBURNHAM

If Voters in East Ward Elected Him Aldermen Next Monday--Street Cars and Better Fire Protection for East Side.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I am a candidate for the office of alderman for the year 1917. As most of the candidates have told you through the press what they have done for the city and what they propose to do if elected, I thought possibly you expected to hear from me as I have not the time to make a personal canvass.

I am in favor of improved fire protection in the city, particularly in the East Ward.

I will also do all in my power, if elected, to get street car service across the river.

I am also in favor of improved bridges to get the cars across.

I think in the last two items, if we had proper bridges and [illegible] service to the East Ward, it would bring a lot of residents over here who now go down to Monaghan to live, where they have car service. The increased building would amply provide the money in taxes without raising the rate, which is now altogether too high for what we are receiving.

I was born and have lived practically all my life in old Ashburnham. Everybody knows Jack Smith and I expect all the old ratepayers and most of the new ones to support me particularly as I have no axe to grind and if elected will use every means to make this city a better and greater Peterborough.

Wishing you all a prosperous New Year.

J. H. SMITH.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD and PINE LIMIT

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to and including the 1st day of February, 1917, for the right to cut pulpwood and pine timber on a certain area situated on the Black Sturgeon River and other territory adjacent thereto, in the District of Thunder Bay.

Tenderers shall state the amount per cord on pulpwood, and per thousand feet board measure, on pine, that they are prepared to pay as a bonus in addition to dues of 40 cents per cord for spruce, and 20 cents per cord for other pulpwoods, and $2.00 per thousand feet, board measure, for pine, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque, payable to the Honorable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten thousand dollars ($10,000), which amount will be forfeited in the event of their not entering into agreement to carry out conditions, etc. The said $10,000 will be applied on account of bonus dues, as they accrue, but the regulation dues, as mentioned above, will require to be paid in the usual manner as returns of cutting of wood and timber are received.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

G. H. FERGUSON,
Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines.

DOWNER—RICHARDSON.

On Wednesday evening, December 27th, a pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. John Richardson, Otonabee, when his only sister, Annie Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. Lewis S. Downer, of Otonabee. The bride, who was given away by her brother, entered the drawing room as the wedding march was played by Mrs. John Johnson, niece of the groom. The bride was tastefully attired in blue silk trimmed with lace and white fur and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Miss Olive Richardson, cousin of the bride, who was dressed in white silk, acted as flower girl. She carried pink and white carnations. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the wedding couple stood under a pretty arch. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. K. Edmison, pastor of the Methodist Church, Keene. At the conclusion of the ceremony the bride led the way to the dining hall, where a wedding repast was served. The guests numbered about forty, consisting of the intimate friends of the contracting parties.

The bride and groom received numerous useful and valuable presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a muskrat coat, and to the flower girl a bracelet, [illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Downer will reside in Otonabee.

The annual at home of the Lakefield High School was quite successful and was very well attended. About 8.30 the guests assembled in the music room, which was very artistically arranged with flags and bunting, where a very interesting program of songs, recitations, addresses, etc., was given. The refreshment room was decorated in the school colors, black and gold. The reception room in a green and red, while the halls and promenade room were decorated with evergreen boughs.

The following notice from the Toronto Saturday Night will be of interest to the music lovers in Peterborough:

"Many Toronto concert-goers were delighted to hear once more Mrs. Helen Davies-Sherry, a pupil of Dr. Albert Ham, who gave a recital last week and who, as Miss Davies, used to be an attractive figure in the concerts of the National Chorus. Mrs. Sherry is now a resident of Neepawa, Manitoba. She is the possessor of a soprano voice of exceptional compass and beautiful velvety quality, while her diction and style are exceptionally fine. In declamatory numbers she has few equals among Canadian singers, as was shown in her rendering of Mendelssohn's "Hear Ye, Israel," with Mr. Otto James at the organ. Her program as a whole was very interesting, especially Delibes' unfamiliar "O Sea, Dreadful Sea," in which her tones had a poignant dramatic quality."

Mrs. Davies-Sherry has most kindly consented to give a recital in the near future under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E., which will be certainly one of the most important events in musical circles this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Goulah of Montreal are visiting at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Grady, 122 Park Street.

Mr. R. Bullen of Campbellford is a holiday visitor here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Drope of Grimsby are visiting friends in the city.

Mr. W. Cummings of Montreal is in the city attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Whyte.

The six weeks' Red Cross sewing campaign commences next Wednesday at 2 o'clock prompt, and it is specially hoped that all the presidents of the various societies who do not meet on that day will try and be present. Mrs. T. F. Matthews, the president of the society, who has just returned from England, will speak about her recent visit to the headquarters of the Red Cross Society in London, England, and tell of the work carried on there. Mrs. Matthews also saw many of the Peterborough boys, so her message will be a most interesting one. Everybody please be punctual as it is expected a great deal of work will be accomplished.

SUCCESS ATTENDS RECEPTION OF PETERBORO HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Receipts of Afternoon and Evening Were $295.

The reception held by the Peterborough Health Association at the Empress Hotel yesterday afternoon and evening was a magnificent success, and the ladies of the nurses' supervision who managed the affair are highly pleased with the result of their efforts, the total receipts being $295.

Hundreds of citizens visited the reception rooms during the afternoon and evening and took much enjoyment, provided in cards, dancing, music, and the social chat over a cup of tea. It is anticipated that the function held yesterday will arouse greater interest in the work of the Peterborough Health Association, whose helping hand is felt by the sick and ailing, without distinction.

The members of the supervision committee who had charge of the reception are: Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, convenor; Mrs. W. H. Denham, Mrs A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. J. G. Scott, Miss Archer, Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron, Mrs. (Dr.) Neal, Mrs. (Dr.) Mann, Mrs. (Dr.) Gallivan, Mrs. Geo. Helson and Mrs. Jas. Kendry, who were ably assisted by Dr. G. Stewart Cameron, the secretary of the association.

Mrs. Gardiner won the prize in bridge, first place in "five hundred" was won by Mrs. Edwin Seabright, and Mrs. W. S. Merrell won first prize in euchre.

The thanks of this committee is extended to Mrs. Gliddon, who arranged for the Conservatory orchestra to provide music during the afternoon, to Mr. G. N. Graham, who threw open the entire hotel for the use of the association, to Mr. A. W. Cressman for rugs, Mr. R. Denne for carnations, and to the citizens who patronized the reception.

The following donations, which are included in the report on the total receipts, are acknowledged: Mrs. Macdonald $10, Mrs. Denham $5, Mrs. R. R. Hall $2, Mrs. Gardiner $2, Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, Christmas stamps, $5; Bishop O'Brien $10, Rev. Father Phelan $5, Dr. Hammond $5, Dr. Neal $5, Mr. A. A. Fowler $5.

180 Cases in 11 Months.

During the course of the afternoon Rev. Father Phelan, president of the association, extended a welcome to the guests, and gave some information bearing on the work accomplished during the year, thanking Mr. W. H. Dunsford, the treasurer; Mrs. Scott, of the supervision committee, and Miss Hamilton, district nurse, for furnishing the data. Father Phelan pointed out that for eleven months, from January 1 to November 30 of this year, 180 new cases were reported; 1,978 visits were paid, with a revenue of $124 from paid patients. Also a large number of dressings, etc., had been supplied free of charge, and a quantity of magazines distalbuted among the patients. There were 28 tubercular cases, in the treatment of which 857 visits were made and many articles of necessary supplies provided for the patients.

Speaking of the finances of the association, Father Phelan said the year was begun with a balance of $385.07, to which was added $550 from the City Council, $409 in contributions, $124 nurses' fees, balance and interest $15.17, making a total of $1564.24. The expenditures were: Salaries $1200, supplies $3.90, rent for room $60, sundries $10.45, making a total of $1660.45 and leaving a deficit of $96.21.

The ladies of the supervision committee distributed 3,594 quarts of milk, 438 dozen eggs, and a number of families have been receiving a quart of milk daily.

Speaking again in the evening Father Phelan referred to the work being carried on by the association, thanked all who were aiding the work by their efforts and financial assistance, and the speaker also extended thanks to the representatives of the De Laval Company for their generous contribution of $51.50, and to Mr. Graham for his generosity in placing his handsome and commodious hotel at the disposal of the association.

$51.50 From De Laval Travellers

A noteworthy incident came to pass towards the close of the reception held by the Peterborough Health Association, when the representatives of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company, who were holding a banquet at the hotel, made a contribution of $51.50 to the Health Association. Father Phelan extended the hearty thanks of the Association to the De Laval travellers who were lined along the stairway. The representatives from Quebec sang "God Save the King" in French, and Father Phelan spoke to them briefly in th same language.

CHORAL SOCIETY WILL SING "THE MESSIAH" NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

The immortal oratorio The Messiah was composed by Geo. Frederick Handel in 1741, and the first performance was given in Dublin under Handel's own direction. Handel was English in everything but the accident of birth. He had himself naturalized as an Englishman and he wrote nearly every one of his notable works in England and to English words.

English oratorio is one of the most successful branches of musical art. There is nothing in existence that can be called an oratorio before Handel, and if it was necessary for us blindly to bow the knee to one single work, no doubt The Messiah would be our wisest choice.

No musical work has had such continues and enduring popularity as The Messiah. Much of the veneration with which it is regarded is doubtless owing to the subject, but much also must be attributed to the splendid music, some of which—The Hallelujah Chorus, Glory to God, and Amen—are not for an age, but for all time. After all possible allowances have been made for associations, the Hallelujah Chorus remains one of the most colossal things in art. The effect on the London audience (on its early production) of the unison passage in the chorus, "For the Lord God omnipotent reigneth," was electrical; the whole audience, along with the King, rose to its feet and remained standing. This custom has been kept up ever since, and wherever the chorus is sung the audience all rise.

While writing the Hallelujah Chorus Handel said, "I see all Heaven open before me, and the Great God Himself." He knew his Bible so well that for several of his oratorios he was his own librettist.

No composer has ever understood so well how to extract from a body of voices such massive effects by means so simple and yet so skilfully conceived.

In oratorio at least, Handel is the people's composer, and such he must remain so long as oratorio holds its place with the public.

Handel possessed a mastery over a particular kind of choral technique and no one but he has been able to procure that extraordinary balanced clearness of sound. His chords ring out like bells and he can hurl himself straight through the rules of professional orthodoxy with an effect astonishing in its brilliance.

The Messiah is the great Christmas oratorio and embodies the promise of the Messiah, the preparation for His advent, His titles and character, His birth, passion, death, resurrection and ascension, and concludes with the triumphant song of the redeemed Heaven.

The Peterborough Choral Society will render this immortal masterpiece in St. Paul's Church on Tuesday, Jan. 2, at 8 o'clock.

RUSSIANS ARE HOLDING AT BRIDGEHEAD

GERMANY LOOKS FOR DRIVE FROM VERDUN

Turning Out Guns and Munitions for the Test.

Year Will be One of Privations for Germans.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 2 (via wireless).—Germany is turning out now many thousand cannon per week and will have a new supply of all calibres to meet the admittedly gigantic effort of the Allies upon the renewal of the war in full vigor four months hence. Stupendous quantities of ammunition and machine guns are also being turned out and confidence is felt that the enemy will be unable to break through this wall of steel and fire. German military experts expect the extended effort of the Western Allies will not be on the Somme front but at Verdun.

The new year will be a year of privations. An increased harvest of grains is offset by a disappointing potato crop and even with supplies captured in Roumania, no prospect of an increase in the total ration can be held out for the present.

RUSSIANS MAINTAIN POSITION

At Other Points Foe Continues His Success.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 2. — Army headquarters announces that on the Roumanian front Teutonic troops stormed the heights on both sides of the Oituz valley and captured Soveya in Susita valley, taking several hundred prisoners.

Mackensen's ninth army is sharply pressing the enemy and has forced the Russians to retreat further. From the west and south German and Austrian troops are approaching bridgehead positions near Fokshani and Fundeni. More than thirteen hundred prisoners and much war material was taken. Between Buzeu and the Danube the enemy maintains his bridgehead.

In Dobrudja, east of Braila, German and Bulgarian troops captured Russian positions and threw the enemy back to Matchin.

GERMANS BEATEN OFF

PETROGRAD—The Germans took the offensive yesterday in Galicia near Brody, but were beaten off by Russian fire, the War Office announces.

ROME—Heavy artillery fighting is in progress all along the Austro-Italian front, it is reported. Along the whole front, in answer to activity of the enemy's artillery, our batteries kept the Austrian trenches and lines of communication under heavy fire.

PETROGRAD—Russian and Roumanian forces have retired at some points on the Moldavian west frontier and in Dobrudja they have taken up new positions, the War Office announces. In Kasino River sector, close to the Hungarian frontier, however, the Roumanians have regained lost ground and are holding it against continued strong attacks.

ALL OFFICERS RETURN TO DUTY TO CONTINUE RECRUITING.

COL. MILLS HERE.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman and his officers were all on hand this morning after the holiday and ready to begin a hard campaign to bring the 247th up to strength if possible. This afternoon a systematic personal canvass was inaugurated by a number of the officers and men, taking the names from a list which had been prepared some time ago under the supervision of the O.C.

The most encouraging reports have been received from the officers from district points, who reported in person today.

Two recruits from Coe Hill were in to get examined and attested this morning.

J. H. SMITH IN THE EAST

He Had Majorities in Two of Three Divisions.

After being first reported as the winner in the East Ward aldermanic contest, Ald. George Evans went down to defeat at the hands of J. H. Smith, who has a majority of 4. Ald. Evans' stronghold was at Swanston's where he had a majority of 17. Smith led at Hill's by 9 and at Coon's by 12. The first report from Coon's, which completed the polls, gave Evans the victory, but the report was in error. When the correct returns were made some time later, Smith was found to be leading by 4 votes. What Ald. Evans did to Ashburnham remains a puzzle. He was well spoken of by the electors. The vote:—

	Evans	Smith
20 Swanston	65	48
21 Hill	50	59
22 Coon	34	46
Totals	149	153

Smith majority—4.

Capt. Cleghorn, who has been in Apsley, spent the holiday in the city.

Lieut. A. H. Cameron, Sergt. J. C. Gainey, Corp. A. E. Cole left today to attend the B. F. and P. T. School at Kingston

Lieuts. J. M. Shook, J. V. McElderry, Sergt. A. C. Cole, Ptes. C. G. Pilkey, D. MacLeod leave tomorrow to attend I.S. of I. at Kingston.

The band reported this morning and were inspected. They will be welcomed at the hockey match at the rink tonight when they will make their first bow to the Peterborough enthusiasts since their return home.

Lieut.-Col. Mills, inspector of supplies and transport, paid an official visit to the Armories today.

"I AM GOING, GOODBYE" CRIED DYING WOMAN

Mrs. Ed. Tighe Takes Carbolic Acid to End Life.

Mrs. Edward Tighe committed suicide on Sunday morning by taking carbolic acid at her home, 513 Donegal Street, where she lived with her husband and her mother. Excitement over a family quarrel was likely the cause of the deed.

Late on Saturday evening the police were called to the Tigh residence when Mrs Tighe complained that her husband was abusing her, but after investigation the officers thought that she was laboring under a delusion, and with her mother there, was not in any danger of harm at the hands of Tighe.

Quiet Restored

The visit of the police apparently quieted the family as they retired for the night. About nine o'clock on Sunday morning the husband got up to light the fire, and called to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Heffernan, who was upstairs, to get ready for church. Finding that she was up, he then turned his remarks to his wife, and in a rather commanding voice told her to get ready for church.

Wife's Dying Words

In a few seconds the husband heard the words, "I am going. I am going. Goodbye Edward." He rushed into the room which adjoined the kitchen and noticed his wife's lips were all white and a blue bottle was on her bed. He at once got liquor and gave his wife a mouthful and then sent in a call for Dr. Amys, who arrived in a short time, but Mrs. Tighe was dead.

The body was removed by the coroner's orders to Belleghem's undertaking rooms, pending the decision on an inquest. After getting all the particulars available it was decided that an inquest was not necessary. It was shown that Mrs. Tighe had made previous attempts to take her life.

Mrs. Tighe was born in Douro 33 years ago and is survived by her mother, Mrs. Heffernan, and her husband, Edward J. Tighe.

The funeral will be held from the late residence, 513 Donegal Street, on Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at 1.15.

RED CROSS

SEWING CAMPAIGN TO OPEN TOMORROW.

It is urgently requested that there be a large attendance of officers and members at the opening of the Red Cross sewing campaign at the work room in the public library, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Matthews, the president, will give an interesting address on her recent trip to England.

Fowler, Gordon, Eastwood and Denne for Trustees

Fowler Headed the Polls, and F. W. Doan, Other New Candidate Was Defeated— B. F. Ackerman Unsuccessful.

To the delight of his legion of friends, A. A. Fowler headed the polls in the contest for Board of Education. He was high candidate in eleven subdivisions, and, besides polling a splendid vote in Ashburnham, his home ward, he did well in the general vote. G. N. Gordon stood second, V. Eastwood third and R. Denne, who headed the polls two years ago, was fourth. B. F. Ackerman, a member of the School Board for twelve years, was fifth and was defeated. Mr. Ackerman did not do so well in the South and Centre Wards as was expected. F. W. Doan, a new candidate, fell below the expectations of his friends, being low man in all wards, including the North Ward, where he lives. The vote:

SKIRMISHING ONLY REPORTED

IN WOODS NEAR BORDER OF LORRAINE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Skirmishing occurred last night at some points at Le Pretre and Jury Woods near the Lorraine border.

Otherwise, today's official announcement says, the night passed quietly.

ALD. EVANS APPLIES FOR A RECOUNT OF BALLOTS

Is Not Satisfied That J. H. Smith Has Beaten Him for Alderman in Ashburnham— Tells How Votes Were Counted.

Ald. Evans, who on the fact of the final returns was defeated by four votes by J. H. Smith in the East Ward yesterday, has demanded a recount of the ballots cast. He made the required deposit with the City Clerk today.

Ald. Evans said to The Review this morning that he and a friend waited outside of the Coon polling subdivision last night to hear the result. After a time they were joined by Mr. Smith, who was on the same mission.

Mr. Craig, one of the election officials, opened the door and called Mr. Smith in. Ald. Evans and his friend followed.

The members of the board declared that they were unable to make their count correspond with the number of ballots cast. They had counted the votes three times and each time found 38 for Evans and 41 for Smith. This was sufficient to give the election to the former by a majority of five. There had, however, been eighty votes cast altogether.

The ballots were counted twice again, Mr. Smith keeping a tally as the names were called out.

In each case the result was Evans 38, Smith 41. The missing ballot was accounted for on the theory that some elector had failed to vote for alderman.

Mr. Smith then acknowledge defeat, and shaking hands with his opponent, congratulated him on his victory. Ald. Evans left and telephoned the result at that polling subdivision to the City Clerk.

It was an hour or so later that the amended returns were sent in showing a change of four votes in favor of Mr. Smith, besides accounting for the ballot that was originally supposed to be missing.

Ald. Evans does not charge anyone with irregular official conduct. He says, however, that he is unable to understand how the change was made and for his own satisfaction he will have the matter investigated.

H. B. RYE FOR REEVE; J. H. BELL, THE DEPUTY

John Williams May Not Retain Council Seat Because of Contract With Township.

The close of an interesting election in North Monaghan found H. B. Rye leading by 6 votes in the contest for reeve against Reeve John McIntosh. The sewage disposal plant was a large factor in the election. The vote was not a large one and not up to last year, when McIntosh and Howden each had 99 votes at May's school as against 82 for McIntosh and 79 for Rye yesterday.

For deputy, Bell defeated Robson by 48 votes. R. Dobbin, Thos. Henry and John Williams were elected by acclamation to council seats. There is some talk of Mr. Williams not being eligible for a seat by the fact that he has a contract with the township in connection with the dump grounds.

The vote:

	—Reeve—		-Deputy-
	McIntosh	Rye	Bell	Robson
Grady's	45	141	147	36
Town Hall	91	4	13	82
May's	83	79	84	78

ALD. EDGAR LOST SEAT

W. H. Taylor Successful, His Majority Being 146.

On the aldermanic contest in the South Ward, Ald. Edgar lost his seat to W. H. Taylor, the vote being: Edgar, 150; Taylor, 296—nearly 2 to 1 for the new candidate. Ald.-Elect Taylor had a good-sized majority in four of the five subdivisions, and defeated Ald. Edgar in the latter's home division by 60 to 24. Naturally Mr. Taylor is highly pleased with his success. He says himself that he is known better in other wards of the city than in the South Ward, "but everybody knows me today." The vote:—

	Edgar	Taylor
1 Freeburns	32	78
2 Braund	27	49
3 Halpin	22	73
4 Co-operative	24	60
5 Murray	45	36
Totals	150	296

Taylor majority—146.

GRIFFITH IN BELMONT TWP.

REEVE KETCHEN WAS 80 VOTES BEHIND.

In Belmont W. E. Griffith was elected Reeve over Reeve Ketchen by 80 majority. The new township councillors are F. Breckenridge, W. Anderson, G. Steinberg, Coleman Elliot.

REPLY BY ENTENTE

Under Consideration of Different Cabinets.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 2.—The Allies' reply to President Wilson's note has been completed and is now being considered by the different Cabinets. It probably will not be published until the end of the week.

In reply to the proffer of Germany and her allies for a peace conference, the Entente Allies, in a collective note, declare that they "refuse to consider a proposal which is empty and insincere."

ALD.-ELECT EDGAR WORTH
West Ward representative in City Council, takes seat by acclamation.

YOUNG IN ENNISMORE

Won Reeveship in the Contest With D. Holland.

John Young won the contest for Reeve of Ennismore by a majority of 21 over D. Holland. Clayton Telford headed the poll for council, getting 141 votes. Jas. Sullivan came next with 113, Patrick Crowley was third with 88 and W. Harrington fourth with 84. E. Sullivan missed a seat, his total being 80.

It was a fine compliment Ennismore people paid to Clayton Telford. The Telford family have lived in Ennismore for many years and they stand high in the esteem of the people

APSLEY ELECTIONS

Reeve Lean retains the Apsley reeveship, being re-elected yesterday in a contest with Brown, by a majority of 8 votes. The councillors are Matthews, Stone, Earnshaw and Tucker.

FRANK STATEMENT ON POSITION OF GERMANY

Nation Will Have to Make Peace Soon.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 2. — A Daily News despatch from Amsterdam says the Berlin Vorwaerts, in an article entitled "Peace Year, 1917," gives an amazingly frank picture of Germany's international position. "We are an isolated state," it says. "The whole male population is having an economic holiday. Gold is shut up in the imperial bank, a stupendous mass of paper money is in circulation, the public debt has attained dimensions which the most fantastic romancer before the war would have shrunk from suggesting. Our fields are sucked dry, and building activity is stopped."

Admitting that it requires courage to describe 1917 as peace year, it says: "There can be only one more short, sharp fight, and the year 1917 will be the greatest year in the world's history for it will again bring us peace."

It is quite clear, Vorwaerts is represented as saying, that Germany will have to make peace soon. It defies annexationists and militarists by this declaration, and says that peace must be grounded on the recognition that treaty rights are more important than rights of possession.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JANUARY 2. 1917

MR. GORDON RE-ELECTED.

MR. GORDON has not only been re-elected a member of the School Board, but crowded Mr. A. A. Fowler for the coveted place at he head of the polls. We believe that Mr. Gordon has achieved his purpose. He has proved that he has a following in the city, friends who will stand by him through thick and thin. He is now the logical candidate of the Liberal party for the nomination for the Federal Parliament. All his competitors for that honor have been distanced. Others have followed the course of Mr. Gordon and endeavored to make municipal office a stepping stone to higher place and have failed in the attempt. Mr. Gordon has succeeded, and for the present, we believe, has realized his ambition by proving his strength in the local field. Even if the threatened action to disqualify him as a member of the School Board were put into effect, the result, so far as the hopes of his friends and his own personal ambition may be, would remain unchanged. He would still be in line for the coveted honor, for which there are so many aspirants ready and anxious to tempt fate.

YESTERDAY'S ELECTION.

THE ELECTION of yesterday was filled with surprises besides confirming conclusions that were already arrived at before the polls were opened. The first surprise was in the light vote polled. As polling day fell on a holiday, it was expected that the voters would have no [illegible] from the polls, but the vote polled yesterday was the [illegible] in years. This is probably due to the fact that the election lacked the excitement of a contest for the Mayoralty.

Another surprise was the defeat of Alderman Edgar in the South Ward. It was recognized from the day of nomination that the result in that ward was in doubt, but no one believed that Mr. W. H. Taylor could score so decisive a victory. His personal popularity and his business standing proved more of a factor than even his warmest supporters imagined. He seems to have struck the right gait when he came out in favor of a better street care service for the residents of his ward. There was the right ring, too, about his declaration in favor of developing the idle powers that abound in this vicinity, as an inducement to manufacturers to locate in this city.

Ex-Alderman Edgar has been one of the most industrious members of the City Council that Peterborough has ever known. He has originated more plans designed for the benefit of his ward than any of his colleagues for the past two years, but even this record was unable to save him against the popularity of his opponent.

Mr. J. H. Smith will succeed Alderman Evans in the East Ward, unless his narrow majority of five votes disappears on a recount. Mr. Smith will not be a new man in Council, having acted in that capacity years ago in Ashburnham before that village became a part of the city. He has been elected on practically the same platform as that upon which Alderman Evans stood. He is in favor of a new highway across the river, and an extension of the street car service to his ward. Mr. Smith is well known in every section of the city. He will be an aggressive representative, a man who will never weary and who will fear nothing in any task to which he sets his hand.

Mr. A. A. Fowler's aggressive campaign, added to his personal popularity, put him at the head of the polls in the School Board election. Ever since the announcement was made that he was to be a candidate, his election was regarded as assured. The city is fortunate in securing his services as a member of the Board that has given Peterborough one of the best educational systems in the Province. His friends turned out and worked for him vigorously. Over-confidence was responsible for the defeat of other candidates, as is so often the case.

There is a defect in the election machinery which unduly favors the candidate whose friends vote for him alone. The "plumper" vote was largely resorted to yesterday, as an investigation of the returns will show. When there are four candidates to be elected and the voters persist in marking their ballots for only one, a Board so chosen can hardly be regarded as representative.

FILL UP THE CARDS.

EVERY RESIDENT of Peterborough between the ages of 16 and 65 years should fill out the National Service card which his postman has left with him, as a patriotic duty. If the matter, when presented to him in this light, does not appeal to him, he would do well to act in his own interest. One thing is certain, he will save himself further annoyance by filling out and promptly returning the card. If he fails to do so, his case will surely be followed up by the authorities.

There are no impertinent questions on the card. These are not as searching as those propounded by the census taker every ten years. No attempt is made to pry into your private affairs. Even if you do answer every question [illegible] stances are such [illegible] to permit you to enter the ranks without the sundering of family ties or leaving a gap hard to fill in the industrial army, the local recruiting officers, after the close census they have taken, are already in possession of that information.

[illegible] threatened with [illegible] refuse to answer the questions, but the penalty will come later if you do not act, just as conscription will most certainly be resorted to if the voluntary system breaks down.

The ministers of the city in their services yesterday referred to these cards and asked their people to sign them. There are men needed to make munitions for the Allies just as urgently as recruits are wanted for the army. When these cards are returned, the Government will be in a position to readjust industrial affairs so that men can be employed to the best advantage in the work designed to bring the war to a successful conclusion.

Again, then, fill out the cards. It is your duty to do so as a patriotic Canadian, and by doing so you are likely to save yourself considerable trouble, for this information the Government is bound to secure, if not voluntarily on the part of the public, then by the employment of harsher methods.

GHASTLY RATHER THAN FUNNY.

"IT IS FUNNY to see the petty squabbling the Canadian papers are carrying on when every effort is needed to win the war."

So writes Lieutenant W. Dunsford from the battlefront to his father in this city. The matter to which he refers must certainly strike the men in the trenches as a ghastly joke. They must realize that the salvation of the Empire is of more moment than the fortunes of political parties. It is for the first that so many of them die and for which all of them suffer. They did not abandon their careers at home, they are not suffering the hardships of warfare, daily exposed to the risk of death, in order to demonstrate the worth of one party or the inefficiency of another. Theirs is a higher, a nobler mission than that.

A certain newspaper exhausts every journalistic device known to the profession in its local columns to induce young men to enlist. Editorially, too, it makes frenzied appeals for recruits. So far so good. But frequently the same editorial column that contains such appeals asks us to believe that the Government of Canada is in league with the Huns, that Cabinet Ministers are conspiring for gain to send Canadian nickel to make munitions to shoot down volunteers from this country. The same paper insinuates basely and mendaciously that Canadian troops are sent overseas improperly equipped and that every volunteer is only another opportunity for official graft.

Is it any wonder that with newspapers pleading such falsehood as this that recruiting has fallen off? Papers of this stripe, while urging the Government to take more drastic measures, shudder at the very idea of conscription for a reason everyone who runs may read.

Many a bovine freely fills a ten-quart pail brimful of milk, to kick it over into the gutter in the last stages of the process of drawing the lacteal fluid. Many an otherwise competent chef has prepared a delectable dish of beans, but spilled the tempting mess on the way from the kitchen to the dining room.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE KINDEST THING the local historian can say of him is that "he also ran."

• • • •

HE IS INDEED a wise candidate who keeps himself clear of entangling alliances.

• • • •

AND NOW Ashburnham will certainly get a place not only on the map but in the sun.

• • • •

THE GREATEST BOON the New Year could bring would be honorable and conclusive peace.

• • • •

MR. FOWLER'S advertising campaign certainly worked on the eyesight of the electors to some purpose.

• • • •

THE MARGIN with which some of the candidates got there was suggestive of nothing so much as a dental operation.

• • • •

BUT IF EVEN half the reforms promised by the newly-elected are carried out, 1917 will be the banner year in municipal history.

• • • •

ASHBURNHAM can comfort itself with the thought that it is one year nearer a new Hunter street bridge and a street car service.

• • • •

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S messages on the war were always clear enough and did not need the addition of a postscript to explain them.

• • • •

A BURGLAR FLED when two young ladies began to sing. This is not by any means the first time that musical culture has kept the wolf from the door.

• • • •

BUT THE OLD proverb to the contrary notwithstanding, lightning does frequently strike in the same place and with telling effect at that.

• • • •

SO FAR AS ONE candidate was concerned, the School Board election was considerably in then ature of a convention for the Liberal nomination to Parliament.

• • • •

THE CANDIDATE who makes creed an issue brings about his own defeat in a municipal election in Peterborough. The minds of men are being widened by the process of the suns.

• • • •

THE NAMES of Ald.-elect Taylor, Ald.-elect Worth and A. A. Fowler, the new member of the School Board, were first mentioned in connection with the offices to which they have been severally elected in The Review.

MESSAGE TO THE PATRIOTIC

His Excellency the Governor-General as President of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, has issued the following New Year's appeal on behalf of the Fund:

Twice His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught appealed to the people of Canada in support of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The prompt and generous response on each occasion proves how truly Canada appreciates the debt which she owes to her sons who are fighting for the Empire. Heavy as the sacrifices have already been, the Dominion is as determined as ever to carry the war to a successful conclusion, and, however onerous the burden may be, she is equally determined to help the families of those who are serving in the army and in the navy. The administration of the Fund has been most successful and economic, and subscribers can be fully assured that their contributions are being expended to the best advantage.

Fifty-five thousand families, comprising one hundred and fifty thousand individuals, are today dependent upon the Fund, and it is estimated that twelve million five hundred thousand dollars will be required to meet the requirements of the next twelve months.

The sum is a large one, but when the circumstances are fully realised I am confident that the people of Canada will willingly contribute the amount necessary for the fund to continue its patridtic and beneficent work.

$8,073.46 SUBSCRIBED HERE FOR THE BRITISH RED CROSS

Mr. F. D. Kerr, secretary of the British Red Cross Fund, has forwarded to the treasurer at Toronto a cheque for $8,073.46, being the subscription of the city of Peterborough and the citizens to this fund, made up as follows:—

Grant from city	$5,000.00
Subscription by citizens	3,073.93
Bank interest	10.53
	$8,089.46
Paid for advertising and printing	16.00
	$8,073.46

The townships of Burleigh and Anstruther have, through the local committee, forwarded to the British Red Cross Fund the sum of $25. This is in addition to sums remitted by Rev. Mr. Gardiner direct to the fund.

STILL HIGH IN PUBLIC FAVOR

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS AGAIN RUNNING AT THE GRAND.

On the fourth presentation in Peterborough, "The Birth of a Nation" is popular as ever, among those who patronize the wonderful spectacular drama now being those who have seen it on former occasions. The story of war, love and political intrigue was presented at the Grand yesterday afternoon and evening and a more appreciative audience never witnessed it, as the frequent and hearty burst of applause testified.

The orchestra, as usual, is not the least of the attraction. The pictures illustrate the musical selections and the music renders the pictures more vivid. All the old familiar airs are played, the airs to which one part of the American nation marched triumphantly to victory and the other to defeat.

The play will be presented again tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening and this will probably be the last time it will ever be seen in Peterborough.

So many persons were turned away yesterday that the management of the Opera House have decided to change their program and will give a special bargain matinee Wednesday afternoon at 2.30. Admission to the entire lower floor will be only 50 cents, and 25 cents to the balcony.

First Prohibition Act.

The first prohibitive measure was that of the Saxon King Edgar, who, nearly a thousand years ago, on the advice of Dunstan, put down many alehouses, allowing only one to exist in any village or small town and at the same time limiting the draughts of the drinkers. The common drinking cup of that day held about two quarts, and Edgar had eight pegs placed at stated distances in each cup, heavy penalties being imposed on those who drank from one peg to another at each time. Neither the working nor the result of the act encouraged Edgar's successors to further action, and the next prohibitive legislation on the sale of liquor is due to Henry VII. who, by an act against vagabonds and beggars in the year 1495, gave power to any two justices of the peace to stop the common selling of strong ale in towns and any other places they thought necessary.—London Mirror.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Allow me through your paper to correct the report presented to the property committee by the plumbing inspector in regard to a test that was made a short time ago.

Now, in the first place, he states that I, in his company, found everything satisfactory. That is erroneous, and that I did not show up is also a misleading statement.

The test was to take place at 9 o'clock. I was there, in company with a witness that I had invited; also the chairman of the committee, Ald. Saunders. No one else showed up. We left at 10 o'clock and the test was started between then and 12 o'clock and was not finished till long after dinner.

I would like to ask if he gave any explanation why he was not there on this, and two other occasions that I was officially notified to be present, when no one else showed up?

Why he did not mention these other instances that were pointed out to him, that are contrary to the plumbing by-law.

Why I was not notified by letter to attend the meeting on Friday night, when I was notified to be there the night previous.

It appears to me that my presence would be too disastrous to certain parties.

One more item has caused me to wonder — why this matter was brought before a defunct committee, practically, some of whom may never attend another meeting. Just a little wire pulling, and the farce goes on.

Crowded Gibraltar.

In no place on the surface of the globe is rent so high as at Gibraltar, the reason being that the geographical position of the town precludes the possibility of its being extended in any direction. A long, narrow strip of what was once sea beach is alone available for building purposes. All the rest is precipitous rock.

Upon this narrow parapet, in some cases less than 100 yards in width, are crowded the homes of 25,000 people. As much as a sovereign a week is asked and obtained for the use of one small unfurnished room, and this, too, in a place where the normal rate of wages is quite 70 per cent less than in England. Naturally the overcrowding is fearful, and, the water supply being scarce and intermittent, cleanliness of living, as we understand it, is almost impossible.

No wonder that in the old days the plague and the cholera ravaged the "Rock" with a virulence unknown even in the filthy and pestilential cities of the far east.—London Opinion.

How Ivy Climbs a Wall.

At first ivy is a little plant with a brittle stem and leaves of three or five lobes. As it grows the stem becomes less brittle, and if it finds nothing to which to cling it creeps along the ground, sending down tufts of fibrous roots. These roots, however, appear only when they can be actually used to the advantage of the plant. If the ivy climbs a wall its stem throws out a number of tufted fibers, or claspers, by the aid of which the plant can cling to the wall. These claspers are really modified roots and do not penetrate the wall, but merely cling in sucker fashion to the irregularities of the surface. They are produced from all the parts of the stem nearest to the wall, but if the ivy is creeping along the ground the claspers, being useless, are not produced at all. The tufts of fibrous roots which the plant throws out when it is growing on the ground are produced only from those parts of the stem that are opposite to the leaves.—Kansas City Star.

HAPSBURGS HAVE MIGHTY PAST

Of the greatness of the House of Hapsburg, from a historical point of view, there is no end. Hapsburgs have been dukes and archdukes of Austria since 1282, Kings of Hungary and Bohemia since 1526, and Emperors of Austria since 1804. They have also been Roman Emperors, Kings of Spain, and German Kings, and in the reign of the Emperor Charles V., when the house reached the summit of its greatness, the Hapsburg dominions spread themselves over some of the greatest and wealthiest states of Europe.

The history of the House of Hapsburg is complicated to the last degree, any just consideration of it would involve the writing of a very large part of European history. Nevertheless, complicated as it is, perhaps no other royal house presents such marked characteristics, or has preserved through the centuries a general policy so unchanged and unchanging. In the very early days of their history, the Hapsburgs were famous for the way in which they increased their possessions by judicious marriages, and they have been famous for this ever since. It was thus that they first obtained possession of Bohemia, and it was thus also that they first obtained possession of Hungary. It was through his marriage with Mary, the daughter and heiress of Charles the Bold of Burgundy, in the fifteenth century, that Maximilian I. obtained possession of the Netherlands and other rich lands belonging to the famous Duke; and in many other directions, by the same means and by other means, they added steadily to their inheritance.

The name Hapsburg, which is a variant of the older name Habichtsburg, or Hawk's Castle, was taken from the Castle of Hapsburg, built on the banks of the Aar, not far from its junction with the Rhine, by the Bishop of Strasburg in 1020. The Hapsburgs, however, do not begin to come certainly into history until the closing years of the Twelfth Century. About that time we find one Albert styling himself Count of Hapsburg, and increasing the area of the Hapsburg lands with all the characteristic Hapsburg astuteness. Some seventy years later, a Hapsburg, in the person of Rudolph, was seated on the German throne, and thence onwards they were foremost figures in European history.

Amongst the notable reverses incidental to their history in the Middle Ages must be mentioned the revolt of the Swiss. The Swiss people had chafed for many long years under the rule of the Hapsburgs, and the open struggle continued for nearly two centuries. Duke Leopold I. was defeated at Morgarten in 1315, and Leopold III. at Sempach in 1386, and so it went on, until the signing of the "Perpetual Peace," in 1474, ended the rule of the Hapsburgs in Switzerland.

It was, however, within a comparatively short time of this reverse that the House of Hapsburg reached the height of its power. Charles V. was Emperor. He had succeeded to all the hereditary lands of the Hapsburgs, and to the power and prestige which flowed to him as head of the Holy Roman Empire was added the wealth and commerce of the Netherlands, of Spain, and of the Spanish colonies in America. In Italy, he ruled over Sardinia, Naples, Sicily, and the duchy of Milan, whilst to his inherited possessions in the Netherlands be added Groningen, Gelterland, and the bishopric of Utrecht. At the same time his brother Ferdinand was ruler over the Austrian archduchies and Tyrol, Bohemia with her dependent provinces, and a considerable part of Hungary. Thus, the House of Hapsburg had really only one rival in Europe, and that was the House of Valois in France, and it was with the Valois that the Hapsburgs measured swords so grimly, some two hundred years later, during the war of the Spanish Succession. The Austrian Hapsburgs fought long and bitterly with Louis XIV. of France for the Spanish possessions of the house, but the Grand Monarque was too strong for them, and, by the peace of Rastatt, Spain passed from the Hapsburgs to the Bourbons.

The next great landmark in the history of the Hapsburgs is, perhaps, afforded by the reign of Maria Theresa in the Eighteenth Century. The story of how her father, Charles VI., tried to secure her succession; how he issued the famous Pragmatic Sanction, which declared that the Hapsburg monarchy was indivisible, and that, in default of male heirs, a female could succeed to it; how be spared no ingenuity in securing the assent of all the powers to the arrangement; how, immediately on his daughter's succession, many of these Powers threw it aside and clamored to possess themselves of Hapsburg lands, and how Maria Theresa finally triumphed, make up one of the great stories of history.

And so, by way of the treaties of Paris and Vienna after the Napoleonic wars, treaties which were highly favorable to the Hapsburgs, we come to the year 1848 and the accession of Francis Joseph. The rest is the story is of yesterday.

Story of Familiar Hymn.

The familiar hymn beginning "God moves in a mysterious way," known as "Cowper's Hymn," says the Pittsburg Post, had its origin as follows: Cowper was all his life the victim of melancholia, and more than once attempted suicide. One day, bent upon destroying himself, he got into a cab and ordered the driver to take him to a certain point on the river, where he intended to drown himself. The cabman, noticing his strange appearance and feeling that all might not be right with him, drove him about the city and finally stopped in front of the poet's door. Stepping out and recognizing the old familiar surroundings and shocked at the thought of his narrow escape, Cowper exclaimed, "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform," and, rushing in, immediately composed the immortal hymn.

STORY OF AUSTRALIA

A COUNTRY THAT "DRIFTS" INTO HUMAN KNOWLEDGE.

Australia, which of late has figured so prominently in the news of the day, should be reckoned, geologists tell us, amongst the oldest land in the world. As far as annals are concerned, however, it is, of course, amongst the youngest. Who first discovered the great Southern Continent is a question still unsettled, and is likely, as far as can be seen, to remain so; but one thing seems to be certain enough, and that is that for many centuries before its coasts were sighted and explored by Europeans, the fact of its existence was generally known in both East and West. The Chinese, who have managed to forestall Europe in most things, had certainly some knowledge of it, as far back as the Thirteenth Century. The Malays were probably acquainted with the northern coast, and Marco Polo, the great traveler of the Thirteenth Century, makes reference to the reputed existence of a vast southern continent. There was no great dramatic discovery of Australia, such as there was in the case of America. It seems, somehow, to have straggled into the knowledge of the West by way of ships blown out of their courses, and through tales carried overland from the East.

Early in the Seventeenth Century, however, Philip III. of Spain took the matter in hand. He sent out an expedition of discovery from Callao, Peru, under Admiral de Torres, to search for the great Southern Continent. The little fleet, consisting of three vessels, sailed from Callao on the 21st of December, 1605, and, the following year, reached one of the islands of the New Hebrides, which was at once hailed as, indeed, the land for which they were searching. Torres then sailed north towards the Philippines, and may, possibly, have caught sight of the northern coast of Australia on his way. He did not, however, reach the continent. The next few years were fruitful in discovery. In the same year that de Torres sailed from Callao, the little Dutch vessel, the Duyfken or Dove, sailed from Bantam, in Java, on a voyage of discovery. The voyagers succeeded in reaching the north shores of the continent, and explored a considerable stretch of the Gulf of Carpentaria. This was followed by several other enterprises undertaken by Dutchmen, and by 1665 the Dutch possessed rough charts of almost the whole of the western coast; whilst to the mainland itself they had given the name of New Holland.

The first English navigator to sight the Australian Continent was William Dampier. This was in 1688, and, on his return to England, the account he gave of his voyage resulted in his being sent out in the Roebuck, in 1699, to prosecute his discoveries further. Dampier carried out his commission to good purpose, explored some 900 miles of the western coast, landed at several points, and made due record of his experiences. He was not favorably impressed with the country as far as be could see it. He described it as barren and sterile and almost devoid of animals. The only animal, indeed, of any importance was a "strange creature which in walking used only its hind legs and covering twelve or fifteen feet at a time." In this description there is not much difficulty in recognizing the kangaroo.

It was, however, after the famous voyage of Captain Cook, in 1769-70, that Australia began to take its place as one of the great facts of the world. Cook's immediate object was to observe the transit of Venus; but be was also commissioned to ascertain whether the unexplored part of the Southern Hemisphere be only an immense mass of water, or contain another continent. The transit was observed from the Island of Tahiti, and then Cook commenced beating about the Pacific on his great quest. On the 6th of October, 1769, the coast of New Zealand was sighted, and two days later the great navigator cast anchor in Poverty Bay, so called because of the hostility of the natives and the general inhospitality of the reception accorded to the voyagers. From New Zealand Cook sailed westward for nearly three weeks; finally sighted the eastern coast of Australia, and casting anchor in a bay, which he called Botany Bay, because of the number of flowers found there, took possession of the country in the name of Great Britain, and called it New South Wales. That was the beginning of the British occupation. In 1787 a British colony was dispatched to Botany Bay, and reached its destination the following year. From this time onward settlements were made along the coast. In 1829 the Swan river settlement was made in what is now Western Australia. Victoria was first colonized in 1835, South Australia in 1836, and Queensland in 1842.

Didn't Look Like a Madame.

Madame Bernhardt—the Divine Sarah—tells a story of a Canadian tour.

One night, while she and her company were playing "L'Aiglon" in Montreal, a very angry man left the auditorium and clamored at the box office for the return of his money.

The manager naturally wanted to know why.

"I paid to see Madame Bernhardt act," the man stormed, "and she's not acting."

"Madame Bernhardt is acting," replied the astonished manager.

"No, she is not," retorted the man. "She does not take the part of the empress, and the only other characters are a man and the slip of a boy who plays the young duke."

It took ever so long to convince him that the "slip of a boy" was Bernhardt herself.—All Around Magazine.

GEN. SIR WILLIAM R. ROBERTSON

CONTROLS DESTINIES OF WHOLE BRITISH ARMY.

"Bill," that's what they call him in the War Office, do grizzled staff officer and pretty, new, stenographer alike. "Bill," the silent, square-jawed man who controls this mighty clearing-house for the British army. Such is the nickname for General Sir William R. Robertson, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

Suggestive of some mammoth insurance head office rather than a temple of Mars is this big pile of buildings in Whitehall, within whose depths the most stupendous business in the Empire is managed. Tinkle of telephone bells, ceaseless click of typewriters floats through its opened windows. 'Tis a changed place since the war, what with its army of girls where never had woman been seen aforetime.

Somewhere among those labyrinthine passageways is the office of the Chief of Staff, guarded and unapproachable as the sanctum of the King himself. Even Lloyd George, the War Secretary, is more accessible than Sir William Robertson.

Barring an occasional game of golf, Sir William sticks close to business. Unlike even Lord Kitchener, who, with all his strenuosity, yet loved to collect china and lacquer, and had started to build up a fine estate, Robertson has but one real hobby—his profession.

Dressed quite often in mufti to avoid publicity, the chief goes down to his office in various ways. At times he motors, again, he walks when exercise seems needful. Sir William has been seen more than once lunching at a certain large, unpretentious restaurant, a popular resort for Canadian soldiers on leave, English officers employed in London and for the hundreds of girls engaged at war work in the numerous Government offices hard by.

SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON.

Write-ups of Robertson—the contents mostly culled from "Who's Who," it would seem—give but little personal information. These chronicles are mostly a list of the various offices he has held on his way to the top. No intimate sketch of him has ever been written. And what a unique career he has had! Never before in the history of the British army has a private achieved such a rise. Not even that other former ranker, Sir Hector Macdonald, who became a full general. Born in the small Lincolnshire village of Welbourne in 1860, young Robertson, eldest of a poor man's family, acquired his preliminary education at the village school, and at once started out to earn his living. He became a page boy in the big house of one of the county families. In spare moments he devoured his books. At nineteen he almost broke his mother's heart by doffing livery for the King's uniform.

Joining the cavalry at a shilling a day, he threw himself heart and soul into his work, became an adept at drill, kept his uniform and accoutrements spotless, and, more than that, studied both school books and the text books of his profession. After nine years in the ranks he passed stiff examinations in which boys with every advantage often fail, and at the mature age of 28 years was granted a second-lieutenant's commission in the 3rd Dragoon Guards.

Out in India he went early in the game—to India, the Mecca of all poor and ambitious officers. Linguistic ability, knowledge of French and German, and a speedy acquisition of the native dialect helped him to posts on the Intelligence Staff, which carried good pay. After that his advance was rapid.

'Tis a small world. Just the other day the writer was talking to an English friend whose landlady, a Mrs. Thompson, knew Robertson as a lad. Success in life had not allowed him to forget his old friends. Even when a major-general he found time to write her occ[illegible]

KITCHENER'S MEMORIAL

TO PROVIDE SCHOLARSHIPS AS WELL AS RELIEF FOR SOLDIERS.

In a notice to the press, Sir C. C. Wakefield, Lord Mayor of London, announces that the council of the Lord Kitchener National Memorial Fund have resolved to found a number of scholarships which will enable young Britons destined for a commercial career to travel, study, and gain business experience in the countries of the allied nations, viz., France, Russia, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Roumania, Portugal, and Serbia. The original purposes of the fund will remain unchanged. They are these: (1) To equip and endow for all time a home for disabled officers. (2) To establish a permanent fund for the purpose of relieving disabled officers and men in their own homes.

The scholarship scheme, however, the lord mayor explains, will supplement these personal benefits by a national service of the first order. The scholarships will be continued from year to year for all time and will be of the annual value of about £150 each. They will be reserved for the sons of fallen and disabled officers and men of the navy and army and young men from 18 to 25 years who have served with the forces.

After the war, the lord mayor considers there will inevitably be a great increase of British trade with Russia, France, Italy, and the other allied nations; and many firms in the large industrial centers will find themselves in need of clerks, travellers, and technical experts familiar with the languages and the business methods of these countries. This need the scholarship scheme will help to meet.

The intention is that those elected to hold scholarships should begin their studies almost immediately (a) in Russian, French, Italian, and other languages; (b) in economics; (c) in business and business methods in offices or factories, as circumstances may determine; and that immediately at the close of the war they should be sent for a year to travel in one or other of the allied countries, and to continue their studies in that country with the view of gaining (1) a close familiarity with its language; and (2) an intimate knowledge of its commercial methods, needs, and opportunities.

In developing this scheme the council is being advised by business men and educational experts, so that in the end it may be carried through with the highest degree of efficiency. The council appeals to all firms and individuals who desire to help in promoting and developing business relations with the allied countries after the war to give this scholarship fund their cordial and practical support. It is of the utmost importance that the end in view should be speedily attained.

Bars and Bars.

A grimy-looking stranger wandered into a certain seaside cafe the other day. He looked about him in an inquiring way for a second or two and then, turning to the waitress said, rather sharply:

"I say, miss, where's the bar?"

"What kind of a bar?" queried the waitress in return, and as icily as she could.

"Why! A liquor bar, of course!" he drawled. "What sort of a bar did you suppose I meant?"

"Well," she said, and her eyebrows arched slightly, "I didn't know, but I thought perhaps you might mean a bar of soap."

SAMPSON SENT TO PRISON FOR TERM OF THREE YEARS

Court Has Consideration for Prisoner's Wife and Child---Other Charges Pending Outcome of Appeal.

Clarence Sampson, alias Joseph Vardi, was found guilty of stealing two head of cattle from A. E. Carveth and was sentenced to three years in the Kingston penitentiary.

The conclusion of this trial was reached late on Saturday night after Crown Attorney Hatton for the prosecution had summed up the evidence for the prosecution and G. G. Porter for the prisoner had endeavored by every argument and the introduction of technicalities tried his best to accomplish the liberation of his client.

After the addresses of counsel had been completed, County Magistrate Langley adjourned court until after supper in order to weigh up the evidence and the argument for and against the alibi set up for the defence.

When court resumed at 7.30 p.m. the magistrate announced that he had found the prisoner guilty. Mr. Porter at once asked for a reserve case on the question of the admission of evidence in rebuttal, which showed that the prisoner had no moustache on Oct. 17, which had been admitted subject to objection, for the reason that the Crown claimed it was testing the credibility of witnesses. The second question on which a reserve was asked was the admission of evidence showing the identity of the prisoner at Gibson's Hotel, Campbellford, by Mr. Bennett on Oct. 4, which had been admitted subject to objection but which was admitted as proper evidence by the magistrate.

Crown Attorney Hatton made the formal motion for the passing of sentence, which Mr. Porter desired to be held off until after the settlement of the reserved case, but after looking up a number of authorities on the matter the magistrate decided not to grant the reserved case and to allow the appeal to be made to the higher court.

The Sentence

Magistrate Langley in pronouncing sentence stated that he had found the prisoner guilty of stealing two cattle from A. E. Carveth on Oct. 4. In his opinion Sampson had showed a real guilty mind, gave a false name, had guilty intentions, and was beyond any doubt the man Brown who sold the cattle to McKelvie.

The seriousness of the offence was great. The rights of property in cattle must be protected and the magistrate stated that if it had not been for the consideration for the prisoner's wife and young child the sentence imposed would have been a very heavy one. The sentence of three yars' imprisonmnt was then imposed.

Other Charges

It was agreed between the counsel that on the outcome of the decision of the Court of Appeal will hang the question as to whether or not the prisoner will stand trial on the other charges. The defence agreed to stand on the evidence submitted in the Carveth case and the Crown simply introducing the owners of the other cattle for purposes of identification.

These cases will be disposed of by the magistrate on Jan. 20.

MRS. CHAS. H. HUFFMAN DIES SUDDENLY AT HOME

Mrs. Chas. Huffman died suddenly at the family residence, 297 Boswell Ave, Sunday evening. Mrs Huffman had attended the morning service at Trinity Church, of which she was a member.

She was born at Hastings March 11, 1858, but lived most of her life in Peterborough. Her maiden name was Mary Elortha Bishop and she was married in Rochester, N.Y., on June 26, 1882, to Mr. Chas. H. Huffman, who survives her, with two daughters, Mrs. F. Pearson, Edmonton, Alta., and Mrs. T. G. Glover of this city; and two sons, Harry and Sheldon of the city. Three sisters and two brothers live at Rochester, N.Y., and one sister at Syracuse, N.Y.

The funeral will be held from the late residence on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at 2.30.

FINGERS SEVERED.

Workman Met With a Mishap at His Lathe.

Arthur Donald, an employe of the Wm. Hamilton Co., lost several fingers in an accident while at work at a lathe on Saturday afternoon. He was taken to Nicholls Hospital for treatment.

Great Britain has sent an envoy to the Venizelos government at Salonki.

KNOWS SHE HAS DONE HER BEST

TIME IS AGAINST GERMANY AND SCALES WILL TURN.

At All Saints' Church on Sunday evening the congregation held in memory six members of the church who gave up their lives at the battle front in France. The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, preached an appropriate sermon and special music was given by the choir. The soloists were Mr. T. H. Boddy and Mr. Geo. Chandler.

The text of the sermon was from Deuteronomy viii. 2: "And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee."

In the course of his sermon Rev. Mr. Grobb said that Germany is not a whit nearer to her goal than two and one-half years ago; that Germany knows she has done her best, and that time is against her, and that the scales will turn against her.

The dead soldiers held in memory were: Pte. Arthur White, Pte. George Mahood, Pte. William Hall, Lieut. Crawford Rush, Driver Claude Manley, Pte. George Wilkins.

Tenders his thanks to the electors for their renewal of confidence in re-electing him to the Board of Education.

To The Electors

I wish to sincerely thank all those voters in Ashburnham who stood by me in the election of yesterday, even though on the face of the final returns I was defeated by the narrow margin of five votes.

GEORGE EVANS

Electors of North Monaghan

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish to express my appreciation of the support accorded to me yesterday by the electors of North Monaghan.

ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB.

The members of St. Peter's Patriotic Club are reminded that the work room at the T. A. S. rooms will re-open on Thursday, January 4th. On account of the appeal to the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross, of which St. Peter's Club is an auxiliary, the members are asked to turn out in large numbers every Thursday afternoon and evening and do their share to help replenish the supplies which are so badly needed. The work room will be open from 2 to 9 p.m., and there will be something for every one to do, so please be punctual and come prepared to work hard. The tea room on Thursday will be in charge of the young ladies of the Sodality, and tea will be served from 5 to 7. All are invited to tea.

Over one hundred persons rescued from United States ships attacked by German raiders have reached New York.

BRITAIN EATS WAR BREAD

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Britain began eating its war bread yesterday, many bakers having started using the regulation flour last week. Except in color, the war bread shows but slight difference from the ordinary white bread. It is darker, but by no means brown in hue. The taste is much the same.

VINCENT EASTWOOD

Wishes to thank the electors for their mark of appreciation of his services in returning him to the BOARD OF EDUCATION

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to express my appreciation of the magnificent support of my friends in placing me at the head of the poll for the Board of Education. Such an expression of confidence tends to greatly strengthen my determination to give my best service to the affairs of the Board to which you have elected me, and is a source of extreme personal gratification to myself.

My cordial thanks are extended to all who assisted my candidature in any way, to those whose votes gave me such a substantial majority, and to the many who, while obliged to be out of the city, expressed regret at not being able to help me with their votes.

With hearty good wishes for a prosperous year to all my friends and hoping that you will not find your confidence in me misplaced, I am,

Faithfully yours,

A. A. FOWLER.

ELECTORS OF EAST WARD

CARD OF THANKS.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish to thank all those who supported and worked for me in my election for alderman yesterday. Although my majority was small, still the vote all over the city was only about half the normal vote. I also wish to say I have no complaint to make, as both my opponent and myself put up a clean, gentlemanly fight.

Wishing all a prosperous year.

J. H. SMITH.

CARD OF THANKS

I desire to publicly thank the electors in No. 1 ward and my friends generally for the cordial support that resulted in my election yesterday. I shall make it my earnest care by honest and industrious endeavor in promoting the best interest of the ward and of the city generally to justify the confidence reposed in me.

Wishing all the citizens a happy, prosperous New Year.

W. H. TAYLOR.

F. W. DOAN

wishes to thank the electors for their support in the election for Board of Education yesterday.

To the Electors of the SOUTH WARD

I wish to thank all the electors who supported me yesterday in the aldermanic election.

John Edgar

Card of Thanks

I beg to thank the ratepayers for giving me such a substantial vote in my election to the Board of Education. I appreciate very much the time spent by my friends in canvassing for me and their efforts to make my election sure. I was unable to conduct a personal canvass on account of the absence of my partner and another member of my firm, but nevertheless my friends probably did more than I could have done.

Wishing you all a happy New Year, I remain,

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank the electors of North Monaghan for their support in electing me Deputy Reeve in Monday's election. It will be my aim to merit the confidence they have so generously placed in me.

J. H. BELL

N. Monaghan Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Accept my cordial thanks for your splendid vote in my behalf.

As reeve of the township I shall put forth my best efforts in the interests of the whole township.

A Theory.

"Why are meat and eggs so expensive?"

"Possibly," replied the man who thinks it's his duty to answer every question, "because they're among the few articles of food that can't be imitated in a factory."—Washington Star

Most Buoyant Material.

Probably the most buoyant material in the world is the pith from a giant sunflower grown in Siberia, which can support thirty-five times its own weight when on the water. Cork, on the other hand, has a buoyancy of only one to five and reindeer's hair one to ten.

Repartee.

He (during the spat)—Well, if you want to know it, I married you for your money. She—I wish I could tell as easily what I married you for.—Exchange.

Kokomo.

Kokomo, in the language of the Indians who at one time inhabited that section of Indiana, signifies "a young grandmother."

On Her Side.

"I didn't know you had any idea of marrying her."

"I didn't. The idea was hers."

Capital Letters.

The systematic use of capital letters in writing and printing was not common until about the year 1430.

Mexico Has Her Bastile.

The Albondiga de Granaditas (prison) in Guanajuato is one of the most historic buildings in the Mexican republic and will always be remembered not as a storehouse of grain, not as a prison, which it now is, but as the place where the first blow was struck for the liberation of Mexico from Spanish rule. Quadrangular in shape with central patio, a row of small Moorish windows near the top, the lower floor Tuscan, the upper Doric, the building has no architectural beauty. At each corner is a large hook, from which in the days of the struggle for independence were hung four iron cages containing the heads of the great liberators —the patriot priest, Hidalgo; h military chief, Allende, and his comrades, Aldama and Jimenez. Here they hung for years until removed by a worshipping nation to the Altar of Kings in the cathedral of the city of Mexico. After the Grito de Dolores and the first ringing of the bell of independence Hidalgo and his followers moved on to Guanajuato, stormed the improvised fort of Albondiga, and killed all the Spanish troops that had taken refuge there. This, says the National Geographic Magazine, was the beginning of the eleven years' war of independence.

A Sermon on "Worry."

Here's a philosopher's sermon on "Worry," from an exchange:

"Never worry today; put it off until tomorrow, which never comes. Some people even beat that. They let the other fellow do all of the worrying."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

JEWELS—GOOD TEETH.

ONLY THE RICH can adorn themselves with rare and costly jewels, but the finest, most useful, and most attractive of all jewels—good teeth—are within the reach of everyone. Good teeth are not only a factor of personal adornment, but their value is much greater as a means of protection against disease.

Why does one never see a poor, grouchy dyspeptic with a set of good teeth? Poor, broken-down teeth cannot properly masticate food. If the food is not properly chewed the stomach has too great a burden placed upon it, the digestion is imperfect, the entire system becomes disarranged, and the person becomes nervous, irritable, and dyspeptic.

But this is not all. The ragged roots and the cavities in teeth harbor putrefying food and germs which slowly but surely poison the body, causing Tonsillitis, Rheumatism, and Heart Disease.

About 50 per cent. of school children have defective teeth. If a child has an aching tooth, or a painful gumboil do you think it possible that he can learn his lessons or progress in school as he should? Destructive changes in teeth start in early life, long before the child reaches an age where he can realize the value of good teeth.

The responsibility for good teeth is thus placed upon the parent. So the ignorant or careless parent is to blame for this 50 per cent. of children who are hampered physically and mentally because of poor teeth.

Parents must learn the value of good teeth. If they have neglected their own teeth or if their teeth have suffered from their parents neglect, should they not try and do better by their own children? Let the parents realize that a few dollars paid to the dentist early in life will purchase for their children the priceless jewels and ensure their children's health.

Where parents fail in their duty to their children the municipality, the school, the public health authorities, and the state should step in and assume the responsibility! The children are our future citizens, and upon their individual health and efficiency depends the welfare of the nation.

Why are the Greeks degenerated from the intellectual, athletic, and warlike nation of early history, to the miserable people of the present day? Disease such as malaria is said by competent authority to be the cause.

At no former period in the history of the British nation was there greater need of ensuring the mental and physical efficiency of our people. Nothing is of greater importance in this regard than the care of Nature's jewels.

School teachers, school medical inspectors, and school nurses can and do exercise an invaluable good in discovering defects in children's teeth. School dentists can do the rest.

The work of preserving children's teeth should be promoted as follows:

(1) Locate children with defective teeth.
(2) Notify careless and indifferent parents of existing trouble.
(3) Provide dental attention for neglected children.

These lines are not directed so much to the public health departments of well-managed cities, but more particularly to the authorities of towns and rural communities where knowledge of such matters may not be so well disseminated.

Parent and teacher who read this column, will you do your duty?

The early care of the teeth is one of the greatest of public health problems.

Every child should be taught to use a tooth-brush in a proper manner. The brush should not be too stiff nor too large. The teeth should be brushed not across their surfaces but up and down, so as to remove substances between the teeth. Any food particle that sticks between the teeth and cannot be reached by the fibres of the brush, may be removed by a thread of silk run between the teeth. The brush should be used at least twice a day: on rising in the morning and on retiring at night. The retention of bits of food between the teeth during the night is most injurious to the teeth. The kind of tooth paste used does not matter. The chief fault with pastes of all kinds is that they are altogether too expensive. A little powdered borax is a cheap and simple substance to use for cleansing the teeth. Do not allow tartar to accumulate on the teeth. It not only promotes decay but is apt, if neglected, to cause destruction of the teeth from pyorrhoea. By all means see a first-class dentist about every six months. It is cheaper and better to prevent decay of the teeth than to cure the results of neglect.

To Drop Medicine.

When you have no medicine dropper try this method: Shake the bottle so as to moisten the cork. With the wet end of the cork moisten the edges of the mouth of the bottle, then, holding the cork under the mouth, let the fluid pass over the cork in dropping.

PRESIDENT UP FIVE SHOTS IN ANNUAL COMPETITION

Scores for Morning and Afternoon Play 121 to 116.

New Year's Day is always the formal opening of the season for the Peterborough Curling Club and the first real contest is between selected rinks of the President and Vice-President for the honor of holding the Kenner-Fitzgerald Cup for the season. Yesterday President J. H. Ferguson's choice won by a score of 121 to 116. There were some remarkable shots made and quite a few very close ends.

The fact that it was election day did not seem to have any effect on the attendance and the curlers all enjoyed a fine day's fun as the ice was in splendid shape for the opening game.

The rinks and scores were as follows:—

BRING YOUR COPPER

Then They Knew.

George and Ethel were married a few weeks ago and returned from their honeymoon to a ducky little villa garnished throughout with the usual valuable but useless silverware and jewelry which kind friends shower upon the newly married.

The day after their arrival two tickets for a west end theater reached them, accompanied by a little scented note bearing the simple message, "Guess who sent them?" They found it impossible to identify the donor, but nevertheless decided to use them.

At the end of a pleasant evening they returned home to find the place stripped of everything. On the dining room table lay another little scented note bearing the legend, "Now you know!"—Pearson's.

He Understood.

As the automobile that had hit him vanished in the distance the victim sat up and slowly rubbed his head.

"The city should build crossings below grade for pedestrians," he said. "These streets really aren't safe for automobile drivers any more. Every time they drive fast they hit some one, and lots of foolish people cross the street diagonally, as I did, instead of at the crossings."

Then he sank back and let the ambulance take him away. He was an automobile owner himself.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

H. MARTIN MADE RECORDS; J. THIRNBECK WON TITLE

Y.M.C.A. Boys Show Good Form in Events At the Gym.

The athletic meet at the Y.M.C.A yesterday afternoon between the Junior Collegiate Class and the Senior Employed Boys was a splendid success both from the standpoint of interest and performances. Three records were broken by Hubert Martin and the new marks are very close to the Hexathlon (100 point) standard. The new records are: 60 yards, 15 secs. 100 points; 160 yards, 44 2-5 secs., 97 points; fence vault, 6 feet, 92 points.

J. Thirnbeck won the all-round title for the contest with a margin of 25 points over H. Martin. By making a great put in the shot-putting event he overcame Martin's lead, scoring 512 points out of a possible 600, a fine performance.

G. Thorndyke again sprung a surprise by clearing 5 ft. 10 in. in the fence vault and by jumping 4 ft. 7 in., the highest mark cleared yesterday.

The Junior Collegiate Class won the highest number of points, scoring 2148 against 1978 made by the Employed Boys.

The following boys qualified on the Junior Collegiate team: J. Thirnbeck, H. Martin, F. Rutherford, K. Kirn, R. Meserve, R. Pogue, R. Cowan and G. Yeaman.

The Summary

60 yd. Potato Race—H. Martin, 15 secs, 100 points; J Thirnbeck, 15 1-5 secs., 95 points; F. Rutherford, 15 3-5 secs, 85 points. H. Copp, 15 4-5 secs., 80 points.

160 yd. Potato Race— H. Martin 44 2-5 secs., 97 points; J. Thirnbeck, 45 4-5 secs., 91 points; F. Rutherford 46 secs., 90 points; N. Foote, 46 3-5 secs., 87 points.

High Jump—G. Thorndyke, 4 ft 7 in., 82 points; H. Tudhope, 4 ft. 7 in., 82 points; F. Green, 4 ft. 7 in., 82 points; J. Thirnbeck, 4 ft. 6 in., 78 points.

Broad Jump—J. Thirnbeck 8 ft 4 1-2 in., 80 points; H. Martin, 8 ft. 1 in., 66 points; R. Cavanagh, 7 ft. 11 in., 58 points; F. Rutherford, 7 ft. 10 1-2 in., 56 points.

Fence Vault—H. Martin, 6 ft, 92 points; G. Thorndyke, 6 ft 10 in., 84 points, J. Thirnbeck, 5 ft. 10 in., 84 points; F. Rutherford, 5 ft. 6 in., 68 points.

Shot Put—J. Thirnbeck, 38 ft. 6 in., 86 points; F. Green, 33 ft., 64 points; R. Cavanagh, 33 feet, 64 points; H. Martin, 31 ft. 6 in., 63 points.

LINDSAY WILL SEND FAST TEAM AGAINST SOLDIERS

Well Known Players Appear With Midgets.

Lindsay Intermediates will trot out a tidy team against the 247th at Brock Street rink tonight. The game should be an eye-opener for the fans. After the victory over Cobourg by the tune of 20 to 4, the Scugogville lads are inclined to the opinion that the district is theirs. List' to the Lindsay Warder:—

The team is exceptionally well balanced and, as demonstrated last night, with Moose Carew on the defence the team has been strengthened. The latter was the star of the ice and was able to relieve the forward line when they ran short of wind and needed rest. John Haugh, on left wing, was also in good form and played a fine game. He can also be counted on to play defence. Chuck Carew and Lefty McElroy form the usual fast centre pair and played together well. If anything Carew is faster this year, while McElroy is watching the nets closely. Billy Griffis is bound to make a good man this year and his lightning-wing shots will help the team through the season. Norton's bulk will help the Midgets on the defence. He got away with a number of good rushes. C. O'Loughlin in goal had nothing more than a poor practice game, but he handled the few that came near him in first-class style.

The line-up will be:—

Lindsay Goal, O'Loughlin, defence, A. Carew and E. Norton; rover, C. Carew (capt.); centre McElroy; wings, Griffis and Haugh.

Peterborough.—Goal LeGros; r. defence, Thornton; l. defence, Halpin; rover, Armstrong, centre, Flanagan; l. wing, Evans; r. wing, Adams.

Stanley Burgoyne of Toronto, referee.

Three Kinds of Secondhand Books.

"How much is this book?" a prospective customer asked the second hand book dealer. It was a volume of essays.

"That is a 'reading book' and sells for 50 cents," the dealer answered.

The prospective customer looked puzzled, so the secondhand book man went on to explain:

"I have been in this business a good many years, both here and in other cities, and I have found that everywhere the general secondhand book buying public divides books into three classes and asks for them accordingly.

"A paper backed book is a 'novel.'

"A cloth bound novel, however, is a 'fiction book.'

"Everything else is bound literature comes under the classification of 'reading books.'"—Kansas City Star.

Overcrowded Switzerland.

The much-prized privilege of visiting prisoners of war in Switzerland has naturally been much sought after by the relatives of the prisoners. The accommodation available has, however, proved to be limited and the Secretary of the British War Office has issued an announcement to this effect. Information, he says, has been received from Switzerland that the accommodation for relatives of British noncommissioned officers and men interned in that country is very limited, and that only 50 persons can be accommodated at Chateau d'Oex and 10 at Leysin, while no accommodation is available at present at Murren. It is also intimated that children under the age of 16 cannot be permitted to proceed to Switzerland. In these circumstances the number of relatives proceeding to Chateau d'Oex and Leysin at any one time must be strictly limited, and none can be permitted to go to Murren until arrangements can be made for their accommodation there. It has accordingly been arranged that (1) Only two relatives per prisoner can be allowed to go to Switzerland. (2) Children can in no circumstances be permitted to go. (3) The prisoner of war shall himself select the relatives whom he wishes to visit him and shall furnish their names and addresses to the British military attache in Switzerland, who will forward the names of those selected to the prisoners of war committee, under the joint war committee of the British Red Cross Society and Order of St. John of Jerusalem. (4) No individual will be allowed to occupy the rooms reserved for relatives of prisoners of war for more than 14 days. On receipt of intimation from Switzerland the above-named committee will make all arrangements for the visit of the relative, whether able to pay expenses or not.

The children of the man who made a specialty of sowing wild oats before his marriage will be sure to harvest an abundant crop of advice.

Bandsman Albert Corrin of the 182nd Bn. and Howard Corrin of Port Perry were visiting relatives in the city over the holiday.

P.C.I. RUGBY CLUB DANCE

Success of a high order attended the 17th annual dance of the Collegiate Institute Rugby Club, held in the Conservatory of Music Hall last night. So well were the details of the dance carried out by the committee that not the semblance of a hitch occurred and the young people to the number of 75 couples, spent a most delightful time. The hall was decorated with pennants, streamers and flags and the presence of a number of young officers with overseas units gave a military touch to the gay scene.

The dance music was acceptably supplied by Messrs. W. Moher and F. Lynch, and Hooper's catered.

The patronesses were Mesdames W. H. Bradburn, G. N. Gordon, C. S. McClelland, R. Gliddon, W. C. Austin, (Dr.) D. N. Carmichael, C. E. Jamieson, B. Hall, and V. Eastwood.

The committee was: Messrs. D. Canniff, H. Skuce, O. Gliddon, G. McClelland and H. Austin.

TEUTONS ADVANCE IN ROUMANIA RUSSIANS RETREAT IN DOBRUDJA

Strong Attacks Made Against the Armies of Archduke Joseph Reported by Berlin as Failures.

JAPAN ARMS MERCHANTMEN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Army headquarters announces that on the Roumanian front strong attacks directed by the Russians against Archduke Joseph's armies failed with heavy losses. Barsesci and Topesci were occupied.

On Mackensen's front the enemy was pushed back further toward the northeast.

Troops of the ninth army are now standing before fortified positions of the Russians. Pintecesti and Mera were taken by storm and 400 prisoners brought in.

In Dobrudja Russians have been pushed back further, despite a tenacious resistance.

PASSAGE THROUGH CANAL PERMITTED.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3. — Japan has notified the State Department that she is arming her merchant vessels for defensive purposes, and asks if this affects their passage through the Panama Canal. The reply will be that there are no resrictions on vessels so armed.

GERMANS ANCHOR MORE MINES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Passengers by the Holland-American steamer Nieuwe Amsterdam say German submarines are anchoring mines of particularly destructive force off the entrances to British harbors. Submarines are fitted with divers' compartments to facilitate such work.

FOUR VESSELS GO DOWN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Lloyds' shipping agency announces the British steamer Holly-Dranch, 3,500 tons, and the Norwegian steamer Erica have been sunk. The Swedish steamer Goosebridge and the French sailing ship Aconcaguay are also reported sunk.

FRENCH PATROLS GET PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 3. — Artillery was rather active north and south of the Somme, in the regions of Rouvroya and Verdun, around Dead Man Hill and Bezonvaux, and also in the Champagne, says today's communication from the war office.

Our patrols wer very active and brought in prisoners.

STOP EXPORT OF COAL TO NORWAY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 3. — Norwegian papers quoted in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen say the British Government has prohibited the exportation of coal to Norway because of the unsatisfactory manner in which certain obligations were fulfilled by Norway.

NOTHING IMPORTANT.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Jan. 3. — (Official Statement.) — "There was the usual reciprocal artillery activity along the whole front. There was nothing of importance to report."

168 FOR GREER WATERMAN 84

SOUTH MONAGHAN REEVE OUT AFTER LONG SERVICE.

Figures to hand on the vote in South Monaghan show that John Greer, who was defeated by Reeve Waterman three years ago, turned the tables with a majority of 84, the count standing Waterman 84, Greer 168 From all accounts, the electors had no complaint to make of Reeve Waterman's work, but simply decided to give Mr. Greer the reeveship. Both men are very popular. Previous to being elected reeve six years ago, Mr. Waterman served as councillor for five years.

The vote for council stood:— H. Barnard 151, S. Robinson 149, J. McRoberts 127, M. Willan 112, N. Breckenridge 101, T. Perrin 95, the first four named being elected. The latter two candidates were councillors.

BODY OF GEO. VOSBOURG IS RECOVERED

FARMER LOADING GRAIN FOUND REMAINS.

23RD VICTIM.

The body of George Vosbourg was recovered from the ruins of the Quaker Oats plant shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. A farmer was busy loading his sleigh with grain when his shovel uncovered the remains partly covered with grain and the lower limbs buried in the ice and snow.

The remains disclosed no external marks of burning and the position in which the body was found just north and west of the boiler room goes to show that the unfortunate man was stunned by the first explosion and later buried in the grain from the elevator. This is the twenty-third known fatality of the fire.

Was Car Checker.

George Wellington Vosbourg lived with his wife at Simcoe and Downie street and was employed as car checker for some time. He was born in Castleton, Ont., 31 years ago. He is survived by his widow, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. S. Vosbourg, 691 Stewart street, and a sister, Mrs. W. H. Sabins, 596 Donegal street.

The remains will be taken to Castleton on Friday morning for interment.

SERGT. A. GILLESPIE ILL; LT. DUNSMORE DECORATED; PTE. ARMSTRONG WOUNDED

Sergt. Gillespie Was Admitted to Station New Year's Day.

Mr. Jas. Gillespie, 138 Hunter St. East, was officially notified today that his son, Sergt. C. Gillespie, is seriously ill at No. 23 Casualty Clearing Station, having been admitted on Jan. 1. Sergt. Gillespie's numerous friends will hope to hear of a speedy recovery. His mother had a letter from him yesterday and at the time of writing he was well. He enlisted from the north country.

Pte. Frank Armstrong of Lakefield is officially reported wounded by gunshot on Jan. 1.

Wins Military Cross

Lieut. Lionel Dunsmore, of St. Thomas, son-in-law of F. J. Voaden, principal of the Queen Mary School, city, has been awarded the Military Cross.

Lieut. Dunsmore enlisted with the Royal Canadian Engineers while a resident at Queen's University. He won his commission after enlisting, and has been at the front for a considerable time. His name has appeared on the casualty list—once as having been wounded and once as suffering from typhoid fever.

Canvass Proceeding

The canvass of the city for new men to fill the ranks of the 247th Batt. started in earnest this morning, the work being in charge of Capt. Belton.

Two new men have been attested—Pte. Herbert Wires, R. R. No. 1, Peterborough, and Pte. James A. Freeman, of Havelock.

The Industrial Night Classes

The industrial classes which have been operated at night by the Board of Education have been very successful, according to Mr. V. Eastwood, who verbally reported to the Board of Education last night.

The workings of the system, which will be enlarged on after the war, will prepare the board for an extention of industrial training when the educational department is ready to assist.

PTE. HUNTER GODFREY
Prisoner of war in Germany. He enlisted at Ottawa in the 8th C. M. R. Pte. Godfrey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Godfrey, 217 Mark street, Ashburnham.

MAYOR NATIVE OF S. MONAGHAN

OTTAWA'S CHIEF MAGISTRATE WELL KNOWN IN THIS VICINITY.

Harold Fisher, just elected mayor of Ottawa by a large majority, was born in South Monaghan 38 years ago. Mr. Walter Fisher, of 493 Water street, is a nephew. Ottawa's new chief magistrate was educated in the public schools of his native township, which he visits regularly every year, and completed his training for the bar in Toronto. Fifteen years ago he went to Ottawa and formed a partnership with Hon. Charles Murphy, secretary of state in the Laurier cabinet. For the past two years he has been a member of the Board of Control in his adopted city. Mr. Fisher is a bachelor.

Big News in Brief

Richard Rutley, proprietor of the Country Club Hotel, Sandwich West, was fined $211.25 for having liquor on his premises.

An inquest was opened at Fergus into the death of Malcolm Campbell, who died from injuries received at the Monkland Mills.

National Service meetings will be held this week in Halifax and St. John, N.Z., addressed by Hon. Mr. Hazen and R. Bß Bennett.

CHANGES IN COUNTY COUNCIL PERSONNEL

Brown of Asphodel and Squire of Norwood in Running for Wardenship Coben Steps Out.

The personnel of the County Council for 1917 shows six changes over the board of 1916. The old stand-by of the Council, Chas. Coben of Galway, will be missing as he decided that he would not make another contest for the honor. There are two names mentioned for the wardenship, M. Brown of Asphodel and B. Squire of Norwood. Both men were nominated for the honor last January. The members of the new council are:—

B. Squire, Norwood.

Chas. Curtis, City Editor, residence ... 373

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1917

HONOR FOR MR. ACKERMAN.

MR. B. F. ACKERMAN'S colleagues on the School Board, men who have sat in council with him for the past twelve years, understand and appreciate his devotion to the cause of education, even if the voters were indifferent in this regard. They will render him fitting honor by placing his portrait on the walls of the room in which the sessions of the Board are held.

But Mr. Ackerman as a public official leaves other mementos of his business ability and his fidelity to the trust reposed in him so long by the people. Four of the school buildings that are a credit to the city will stand as monuments to his memory. He might have been returned to office again had he chosen to exert himself to any extent in the campaign. Even a slight personal canvass would have secured him the few additional votes required to send him back to the place he held for over a decade with so much credit to himself and advantage to the citizens, to the rising generation especially.

A CHANCE FOR STANDARD HOTELS.

HOTEL ACCOMMODATION is one of the problems created by the adoption of prohibition in Ontario, and the Government has done everything possible to give these public places a fair chance for existence under the new conditions. The license fee is merely nominal, and in certain districts special privileges may be conferred upon them by the municipal authorities. The travelling public must be cared for, and the hotel is the only place where such accommodation is available.

So far as Peterborough is concerned, there has never yet arisen a suspicion that the hotels are not faithfully living up to the new law. But business, even aside from the bar trade, has fallen off with them. The restaurants have suddenly sprung up as rivals. Farmers coming to town patronize the dining-rooms of the restaurants rather than those of the hotels, the question of cost being their reason.

The restaurant can certainly afford to furnish meals cheaper than can the hotels. Their expenses for rent and all incidentals are lighter. No such capacious building is required, and no appurtenances such as sleeping accommodation must be maintained as in the case of the licensed hotels. The restaurant proprietor is not obliged to keep up sheds and stables in which to shelter the farmers' teams.

No fair-minded person will deny that the hotels are entitled to some consideration so long as they are conducted according to law. The aldermen can render them assistance to which they are entitled. One method would be to raise the license fee of the restaurants so as to put them on somewhat the same footing as the standard hotels. Both are a necessity, but the hotels are certainly entitled to first chance in the distribution of patronage.

This is a matter which will be dealt with by the new Council for the current year.

WHERE CREED DOESN'T COUNT.

THERE ARE STILL LEFT in Peterborough a few people of narrow vision who rate a candidate for public office according to the religious creed which he professes, but year by year the number of these grows steadily less. In the townships, too, the same improvement in public sentiment is noted. Mr. Clayton Telford was elected to the municipal council in Ennismore at the head of the polls, a fact that speaks volumes on behalf of the toleration of the voters in that section. It is, besides, a circumstance that pleases no one better than Father McGuire, the parish priest himself.

WHERE THE RESPONSIBILITY RESTS.

A MAN WHO IS daily engaged in driving on the streets complains of the number of children who play on the public thoroughfares, hanging on to the rear of sleighs, and the like. He says one cannot determine in advance to which side of the street such children will move when they leave any sleigh in advance of him and that it is next to impossible to keep from injuring them sometimes.

The courts have held almost from the time since courts were first established that the streets and other public highways are for the use of the people; that the burden of care rests upon the individual who is riding or driving, and not upon the pedestrian. This ruling is for the very good reason that the man on foot cannot, by walking on the street, inflict injury upon the one either riding in a vehicle or upon an animal, but the one riding can do injury to a pedestrian.

Children certainly use the streets for playgrounds, and it is dangerous for them to do so. The fact that they so use them is sufficient notice to the one operating a vehicle or riding upon an animal to be careful and reduce speed or even come to a standstill in order to avoid the risk of injuring a child or any other person. Even if the bylaws of the city forbid using the streets as playgrounds, drivers must not run over people nor put life or limb in jeopardy.

Riding or driving gives no superior or prior right to the use of the street, but the pedestrian has the legal advantage for the reason referred to.

Courts not so very long ago have held that under certain conditions and circumstances of carelessness, negligence or recklessness, a vehicle may become a deadly weapon and the operator be held for committing a crime. The pedestrian, according to the law, does not have to run and dodge and jump to avoid being run over, especially at street intersections. The sidewalks are for the exclusive use of pedestrians. The streets are not for the exclusive use of teams and autos, as some twilight minds seem to have it.

Human life is more valuable even than modern time and must be preserved.

COMING INTO HER OWN.

WOMAN IS surely, if slowly, coming into her own. Her logical place in public life is as a member of the School Board. In Monday's election her progress was marked. At the Soo two women were candidates for positions as school trustees, and were not only elected, but headed the polls.

Miss Powell of Whitby, elected some time ago a member of the school board in that town after a hard fight, was returned by acclamation as a recognition of her faithful service. Dr. Carolina Brown, whose election in Toronto two years ago was regarded as a provincial sensation, and who from the start met with the official cold shoulder from her colleagues, has been elected again practically by acclamation, as her majority was nearly 2,500 over the mere man who ventured to oppose her with all the masculine assurance of the politician who has an organization and who knows the ropes.

Mrs. Courlice, a practical instructor herself, has also been elected in Toronto. The movement in favor of having women with a voice in educational affairs is spreading. Those who care for children in their infancy, who lay the foundation of their character, and to whom is entrusted the child in the early stages of his education, are certainly entitled to have a voice in the affairs which shape his environments while at school.

There are 700,000 women in Ontario of voting age. The franchise is limited to the spinsters and widows among them, and even that right is confined to municipal elections. Premier Hearst, it is understood, believes in the spirit of progress noted in the Western Provinces, and favors the extension of the franchise to women.

This is a matter which, with other reforms, is likely to be taken up at the approaching session of the Legislature.

THE HUN'S EVIL EXAMPLE.

A NUMBER of strenuous small boys laid siege to a disused church building, and, regarding it as a stronghold of the enemies of the Empire, shattered several windows and wrought such other damage to it as lay in their power. For this they were arrested and in the police court were fined a sufficient sum to repair the damage and defray the cost of litigation. As it almost invariably is the children of the impecunious who get into such expensive forms of mischief, the parents of the embryo warriors in this case complain that they are unable to raise the money and beg for judicial clemency.

Some of the boys are the sons of soldiers now at the front, and therefore come honestly by their belligerent qualities. The evil example of the German hordes who lay ancient cathedrals in ruins was also before them. The fines imposed upon them may be regarded as so much war indemnity, which their parents are expected to pay. If an exception can possibly be made and favor shown to anyone, it should be the little fellows who show themselves possessed of the qualities of which the modern soldier is made.

A Rumor.

(Christian Guardian.)

There is a rumor afloat in Ontario political circles that the Government proposes to extend the full rights of the franchise to the 700,000 women in the Province. The rumor is not authenticated, and it may only be a rumor, but it seems to be very much in keeping with what is happening around about us. The war has changed woman's status, and her right to vote has fewer opponents than ever, and with the opposition of the organized liquor traffic weakened it really looks as though Ontario's women may secure the franchise.

LLOYD GEORGE CLIMBED FROM POVERTY TO VICE REGAL PLACE

The career of England's new Prime Minister, David Lloyd George, reads like domance. His parents were poor. His father, a Welsh schoolmaster, died before the boy was 2 years old, and his widowed mother then took her family to live with her brother, who was a humble cobbler.

There seems to be a tradition in England that a cobbler knows more politics than most men in Parliament because his trade becomes so automatic that that he can work and carry on conversation at the same time. When Lloyd George was a youth a cobbler shop was naturally the political headquarters for a certain class of men.

His uncle, Richard Lloyd, was a rural Gamaliel, and his shop was a political storm centre a sort of political forum; and there Lloyd George got his first schooling in politics.

The "Little Welshman," as the new Premier is often called, was a born revolutionist.

As a boy Lloyd George was always rebelling against the established order of things, established institutions and especially the established church. He early became a leader among his boy friends and his class mates. His uncle was so impressed with his ability that he helped him to an apprenticeship with a solicitor; and so apt was the youth in grasping the principles of law that at 21 years of age he began to practice his profession in Clroleth, Wales.

Long before he was admitted to the bar he visited the House of Commons and made up his mind that that was to be his future domain. Then and there he resolved to go to Parliament. In the meantime he made a reputation by preaching the doctrine of a free religion, of a free people in a free land; and in his first legal conflict with the established church he won such a succes that at the age of 27 he was elected to Parliament.

He once made a terrific attack upon Joseph Chamberlain, who was then looked upon as a consummate master in Parliamentary procedure and in statecraft generally. He was laughed at, ridiculed and criticized severely for this onslaught on a man who at the time was England's idol, but Mr. Chamberlain finally went down under his fire.

Lloyd George is today the greatest power in Parliament since Gladstone, and his power is due largely to his courage to do right, to dare to take his stand on what he considers right, regardless of the powers that oppose him. He has ever been a great believer in the ultimate triumph of right. The English people have come to believe that Lloyd George is the soul of England incarnate, that he is a man of vision, a man who is capable of seeing far beyond the ken of most of his compeers.

The climb of this poor schoolmaster's son, without lineage, without fortune, without pull or influence of any kind, to a place next to the King of England, ought to be a wonderful stimulus and encouragement to poor boys in every democratic country.

"Who breaks his birth's invidious bar,
And grasps the skirt of happy chance,
And breasts the blows of circumstance,
And grapples with his evil star.

"Who makes by force his merit known,
And lives to clutch the golden keys,
To mold a mighty state's decrees,
And shape the whisper of a throne?"

Who except determined souls like Lloyd George, who spurn obstacles and never falter until they reach their goal? The question answers itself.

A DAILY NOVELETTE

"Go on, have a cigar!" urged Percy Vere, the impractical practical joker.

"Thanks, old man," said Spillits, "but I'd rather not. I know what an incurable practical joker you are, and if you don't mind——"

"Nonsense! This is a perfectly good cigar, I want you to sample the brand, that's all," insisted Percy Vere.

So Spillits, being naturally a very polite chap, took the cigar and lit it.

"Ah," he observed with pleasure, as he blew out a cloud of fragrant mauve smoke, "that's what I call a smoke!"

"Good! Good!" chuckled Percy Vere, as he rubbed his hands fiendishly and waited for Spillits to take his tenth puff. The tenth puff generally set off the nitro vaseline.

He leaned back in his leather chair and puffed out great aromatic clouds, now mauve, now purple, now lilac.

At the twenty-seventh puff Percy Vere clapped his hand to his vest pocket and pulled out a cigar with a terrible groan.

"I have-" he cried in agony. "I've given you my 25-cent Flore de Rhubarb-'

And in his remorse and fury, he squeezed the trick cigar so hard the nitro-vaseline exploded and blew his hat behind the bookcase.

In 1915 the total numbe of building permits issued were 167 for a value of $98,610, while in 1916 there were 128 issued for a value of $128,040, an increase in favor of 1916 of $29 430.

WHAT FOREIGN PAPERS SAY

Example of the U.S.

(The Outlook.)

It has been claimed by some English newspaper writers that Germany should be punished for her crime against humanity. It is not the business of other nations to judge and punish a sovereign nation. Judgment and punishment may be left to God. The example of the United States may be pointed to as one which worked well and is worth following. The North made no attempt to punish the South, or even the leaders of the Southern revolt. But it is the duty of the nations to take such measures as will forever make it impossible—or at least improbable—that the spirit of Frederick the Great or Napoleon will ever inflict another such tragedy on Europe as the war of 1914. Justice and mercy unite in demanding that the war, terrible as it is, go on until that protection for future generations is assured. Peace without that assurance would be more terrible than war.

Language of Sympathy

(London Chronicle.)

"The wearing of the——khaki" has brought about many changes in our social system. A few days ago an English "Tommy" on leave, lost his way among the Welsh hills where he had gone to visit some relatives. He arrived at a lonely mountain cottage at about ten o'clock on a wet night. On applying for shelter he found the only occupant to be an old lady who "had no English." Noticing his badge, she drew him eagerly into the cottage, and showed him the photograph of a young man, presumably her son, who wore a like badge on his khaki-clad shoulder. She then took him into a bedroom, which she gave him to understand was his for the night. Next morning after a good breakfast, the visitor departed, his hostess refusing any payment. Neither had understood a word the other spoke, but the language of kindness and sympathy is common to all peoples.

Proud of Irish Admiral

(Westminster Gazette.)

An Irish member tells me that Admiral Beatty and Mr. Redmond are close neighbors when at home, and that as boys they were playmates, and had many a ramble together over the hills of Wexford. The friendship has always been maintained—a personal friendship, in which there is no question of politics—and Mr. Redmond was one of the first to send Sir David Beatty congratulations after the battle of Jutland. Naturally the Irish Party and all shades of Irish opinion in the House are very pleased that an Irishman should be given the command of "the King's navee." They will remind you that Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener were also Irishmen, and will claim that Lord Nelson ought to have been, if he wasn't.

Mercier the Fearless

(New York World.)

If it were only on the ears of Belgians in his own country that Cardinal Mercier's words of protest had fallen, it might profit Germany to take harsh measures against him. But in his appeals for justice to Belgium the fearless Primate has had the whole civilized world for an audience. No German military censor or Governor-General at Brussels can undo the harm he has caused to Germany. His voice has carried far beyond reach of any control they can exercise, and aroused sympathy for Belgium and indignation against Germany which the German authorities can find no means to suppress. To impose upon him the rule of silence, to immure him in his palace or to deny him freedom of intercourse with his people as their spiritual leader will only be to proclaim to the outside world the force of his accusations.

Moral Principles at Stake

(London Times.)

The country will not hear of peace except upon the terms which she laid down when she entered the war, and from which she has never even thought of departing. She is as determined to smash Prussian militarism as America was in the sixties to preserve the Union and to smash negro slavery. She believes that moral principles of the same order are at stake and that the abandonment of these principles would be as fatal to her as a like abandonment would have been to the Union in 1862.

A Time for Protest

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

America cannot shut her ears to Belgian cries for deliverance and redress and be the America for which our fathers fought. If we continue to look on with mere words of compassion, if we palter and hesitate in the face of a moral wrong almost beyond example, we shall not only do a grievous wrong to humanity, we shall lose our own souls. Speak out, Mr. President; and if speaking out is of no effect, act.

EDDY'S MATCHES

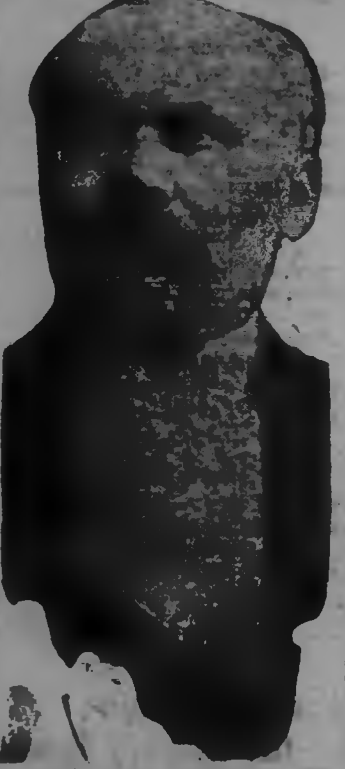
ALL NATIONS DO HONOR TO THE CITY OF VERDUN FOR ITS HEROIC DEFENCE

PRESIDENT POINCARE recently distributed at Verdun the decorations awarded to the town by the Allies and France. Those present at a very simple, but impressive ceremony included Generals Joffre, Petain, Nivelle, and Dubois, representatives of the town and the department and the military missions of the Allies.

The President first mentioned that the idea of honoring the defenders of Verdun by decorating the town upon which they had shed such lustre, had come spontaneously from the Czar at the very time when the government of the Republic was considering a similar proposal. Representatives of the allied countries had agreed to meet in the inviolate citadel to offer in common a tribute of recognition to the brave men who had saved the world and the proud city which had warded off so many blows against liberty.

The supreme hopes of imperial Germany had been shattered against the walls of Verdun, where the Germans had tried to secure an astounding spectacular success. With tranquil firmness France has replied, "You do not pass."

President Poincare then spoke of the double objective which the Germans had had in view, on Feb. 21, namely to forestall the general offensive of the Allies and to strike at the same time a resounding blow and rapidly seize the fortress whose historic name would enhance in the eyes of the German people its military importance. The debris of these Germanic dreams now lies at our feet, continued the President. The staffs of the armies of the Allies did, in fact, adopt at the beginning of December a plan of action for a campaign in the following year in which on one indivisible front the troops of the coalition would take concerted offensives in order not to leave the Central empires free to utilise successively their reserves in the various fields of operations. Instead of submitting to our law, President Poincare added, Germany tried to impose hers on us, choosing the place and date of attack. The admirable troops of Generals Petain and Nivelle permitted all the Allies to work with growing activity on the manufacture of war material, foiled the enemy's designs, and spread confidence throughout the universe. Confidence in our final victory permitted the preparation and initiation of triumphant offensives, Italy's brilliant attack on Gorizia and the undertaking by the British and French troops of a series of methodical operations on the Somme.



PRESIDENT POINCARE.

All honor to the soldiers of Verdun. The name of Verdun represents henceforth what is finest and purest and best in the French army. It has become, as it were, a synthetic synonym for patriotism, bravery, and generosity. The pride inspired by universal respect does not pass without great sadness before the melancholy spectacle of the savage devastation imposed on the towns of the region, but Verdun will be reborn from the ashes, the destroyed villages will rise again, and for centuries the name of Verdun will continue to resound as a clamor of victory and a cry of joy uttered by delivered humanity.

President Poincare then handed to the town of Verdun the crosses awarded by the sovereigns of the Allies as follows: On behalf of the Czar, the Cross of St. George, for the King of Great Britain the Military Cross, in the name of the King of Italy the Gold Medal for Military Valor, on behalf of King Albert the Cross of Leopold First, on behalf of the King of Serbia and the Prince Regent the gold medal for military bravery, on behalf of the King of Montenegro the Obilitch gold medal, and for the government of the French Republic the Cross of the Legion of Honor and the French war cross. The President pinned each cross upon a cushion, which he presented to the mayor of Verdun.

New Task for the Duke.

Now that Canada's new Governor-General has been formally installed in office, it remains to be determined what useful employment can be found for his illustrious predecessor. It has been rumored that he is to be sent to Ireland, but whether this report is founded merely upon a suggestion lately made by the Earl of Dunraven it is difficult to say. This proposal, which was offered tentatively, was intended to meet the present difficulty in Ireland, which, broadly speaking, is twofold, involving, first, the necessity of furnishing sufficient men to support the Allies, and, secondly, the desirability of finding them in Ireland, for if Ireland does not play her part Lord Dunraven apprehends that "she is disgraced and politically damned for generations."

Mr. Redmond has talked of Ireland playing her part provided she gets Home Rule, but since he himself agrees that the coercion of a considerable part of the North is out of the question and that part shows no inclination to yield; since, moreover, partition of the country has been condemned by himself as unthinkable, it is idle to discuss Home Rule on any of the plans hitherto proposed. A further conference on the subject is indeed a possibility, but it is a possibility in which neither Lord Dunraven nor Mr. Redmond has much faith.

Lord Dunraven, therefore, proposes to appeal to his countrymen in another way. "The Irish," he argues, "are an aristocratic people. In the eyes of all Irishmen, except a very small handful of crazy republicans, the King is the King of Ireland. An appeal by the King to his people would be viewed very differently from an act emanating from the War Office." Accordingly, he believes that if the question of Home Rule were to be placed in the hands of a few representative Irishmen and the Duke of Connaught put at the head of a great recruiting campaign it is possible that the mistakes of the past might be forgotten and Ireland "saved, if even against her will."

Why They Are Called "Tanks."

The origin of the word tank is itself interesting enough. When the construction of these armored cars was first undertaken the utmost secrecy was enjoined on the officers constructing them. It was, however, found necessary to give a name to the new department, and this, for purposes of putting everybody off the scent, was described as the "tanks department." As a consequence, when the new armored cars went out, they went out as tanks, and the name took the fancy of the "Tommies" and of everybody connected with them.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

PREVENTION OF DISEASE.

EXPERIENCE in the control of infectious diseases brings very forcibly to one's mind that the present methods of preventing the spread of these diseases are of doubtful value. What is the ordinary procedure say in a town of 2,000 or 5,000 population? Scarlet fever for example is discovered, the physician in attendance notifies the health officer, and a placard is placed on the house for six weeks, notifying the public that none are allowed to enter the home but members of the family during that time. These directions, if followed, limit this focus of infection.

Down the street a few doors Mrs. Brown's little girl, eight years old, is a little under the weather, vomits once or twice and has a slight scarlet rash on her body with a little fever, but is not very sick. It may be that the young doctor, who is called in, regards the case as one of indigestion, prescribes a laxative and sees the case no more; or perhaps suspecting scarlet fever, he covertly or at the instance of the child's mother, who doesn't want her house placarded, fails to notify the case to the Medical Officer of Health. Consequently after a few days Mary goes back to school and no more is thought of it. Mary, however, fails to pick up as she should. She is pale, flabby looking, and complains of headache. Her mother finds she does not eat her meals, and on Saturday night while superintending her bath she notices that Mary's feet are a little swollen and her eyes look puffy. The mother is alarmed, and finding the family doctor out of town another one is called. He finds on examination of the urine that the child has nephritis or inflammation of the kidneys, and Mary is sent to bed. She is seriously ill for several weeks. She gets well for the time but her kidneys are maimed for life.

By this time there is a general outbreak of scarlet fever all over the town. Everyone is alarmed. The public schools are closed. The local board of health and the medical officer of health take stringent measures, but despite their efforts the number of cases grow. The outbreak lasts most of the winter, spreading to the adjacent townships and villages. It seems to wear itself out towards spring, returning again after the lapse of a year or two to carry on in the same way. Several fine children have died of the disease during the winter, and several mothers of families are left with aching hearts and the outer semblance of mourning for their little ones. Others have had somewhat the experience of Mary's mother.

But let us follow Mary a little further. Ten or twelve years have passed, and she has grown to be a fine young woman. She is courted and married by one of the best young men in an adjacent town. She is loved and happy. Her husband has provided a pretty home, and her mother and father are rejoiced to see that she has bright prospects before her. After a few months she writes her mother that she is not feeling well, that she is sick in the mornings, vomits a good deal and has headaches. To the mother this is not unusual. Her daughter is pregnant. Most of women have these little troubles when in this condition. But she is not improving and the mother is shocked when she visits her to find Mary with puffy swollen face and legs. The doctor must be called at once. He promises to call in the morning, but during the night Mary has some sort of a fit and becomes unconscious. The doctor comes hurriedly. He finds the patient has eclampsia. There is a consultation. A necessary operation is decided upon, but in spite of the efforts of two or three of the best doctors of the neighborhood and of a specialist from a nearby city, the poor young woman dies. What a tragedy! It is not an uncommon occurrence. It dates back to the neglected case of scarlet fever in the little school girl. The neglect has had far-reaching consequences. Every neighborhood has had such cases. Every physician is familiar with them.

Mild cases of scarlet fever are often more dangerous than severe ones. The mild cases fail to receive the careful attention which would prevent the disastrous consequences just outlined. These mild cases, because they are not controlled, spread the contagion far and wide. The same is true to some extent of all other contagious diseases. It is playing with public health and with human life, health, and happiness to deal with the most important asset of the people, good health, in such a fashion. How can it be remedied? By education; people must learn that the best and most satisfactory way to deal with these contagious diseases is to be frank about them. The slightest suspicion of scarlet fever in a family should suffice to have the Medical Officer of Health notified and the case prevented from doing any harm to others. If Mary's case had been regarded with due weight and received proper treatment she would now have been a happy wife and mother, but alas! her foolish mother and reckless doctor sealed her fate.

MAKING FILMS OF SOMME FIGHT

"HOW I filmed the Somme battle" is the story told by J. B. McDowell, the operator who faced death to obtain pictures of the greatest fight in the history of the world. Writing in a London paper, he says:

It was on June 26th last that I left London to commence my duties as one of the two official British kinematographers at the western front, and I began almost at once.

Up to June 30th I was out every day with my camera in front of the British lines, recording the British shells bursting over the German trenches. I was concealed in a shell-crater, a post of some peril, for more than once I became the object of attentions on the part of some confounded sniper.

The noise as the British shells passed over my head and those of the enemy burst in the neighborhood was simply diabolical, and during the whole sixty-two days I have been at the front headaches and myself have been intimately acquainted.

While filming near Mametz a piece of shell hit the bonnet of my motor-car.

I might explain that both Mr. Malins—the other official kinematographer—and myself rank as officers. Our uniforms are the same as a lieutenant's, with the exception of the distinguishing badges. Of course, we have carte-blanche to go everywhere. Our cameras are not screened by thin plates of steel, as most people seem to think. We use ordinary kinematograph cameras, but I usually put a sack over it.

On July 1st, when our fellows went over the top, I was between Mametz and Carnoy, and was right in the thick of the advance, where I got caught in a tear-shell attack. This is not particularly dangerous, but it's extremely unpleasant, and for a time it completely disables the sufferer. For an hour or two you feel as if you had a bad influenza cold.

I was up with the Irish when they took Ginchy, and several men were killed quite near me. I was turning my handle in the midst of the inferno, when up came a general.

"Hello!" What the devil are you doing here?" he asked. I think he took my camera for a kind of surveying instrument, as several officers have done at first.

"If you please, sir, I'm the official kinematographer," I replied.

"Oh, are you? Well, do you know you are in a very dangerous place?"

"Yes, sir," I answered; "but that's the only way I can get good results for the people at home."

"Well," he cried, "you've got a dashed risky job! I'd rather be in my shoes than yours any day!"

The British Tommies welcomed me everywhere. When they discovered why I was out there they said: "Good old movies! It's about time the people at home saw what we have to go through!"

And here let me pay my tribute to the wonderful spirit of our men. It's the old British tenacity, and it simply can't be beaten. The British soldier is the most splendid man on earth.

And, let me tell you, the Germans know it. I've seen trench after trench filled with German dead. You must have noticed in the "Somme" film how thickly the ground was strewn with fallen Huns. I came on one machine-gun emplacement where a British shell had caught the gun fair and square, and had not only killed all its crew, but had also spread death and destruction in the trench behind.

I also took the scenes where hundreds of Germans are coming in with their hands up—you know, the part where the wounded Tommy angrily shoves a German who clumsily brushes up against his wounded arm. I realised when I got these pictures of wholesale German surrender that I had secured a "scoop" which would alone be sufficient to make the success of the film. Do you know, some of the prisoners were such bags of nerves that they thought I had a kind of machine-gun training on them, and several of them came right up with uplifted hands, crying "Kamerad!"

When I got back to France again, after bringing over the negative of the film to London, I brought with me a print of it to show the boys at our camp kinemas, behind the firing line, and I can tell you they were delighted with it.

This trip I've brought back with me several thousand feet of film, which, I venture to say, will be more startling than "The Battle of the Somme." Will the "tanks" appear in this series? Ah, you never can tell, can you? I mustn't say anything about these monsters.

I've had some narrow escapes on this last trip. Last Saturday fortnight, while turning the handle, several shells burst within thirty feet of me. A few minutes later the waterproof cover of my cap was split by a small piece of shell which left the cap itself uninjured.

Long before these lines are in print I shall be at the front again, and it will not be my fault if I do not secure further remarkable evidence of the achievements of our amazing men.

Rev. Oliver C. Horsman, M.A., B.D., newly-arrived minister of the First Baptist Church, Edmonton, Alta., who comes from Williamsport, Penn., where he was pastor for several years, replying to addresses of welcome, said: "I am glad to be in Canada because I have been a bit ashamed in the last two years that my own country has not taken a firmer stand, a more pronounced stand, at the critical moments in this tremendous war. I feel that the Allies are fighting my battle, the battle of my country."

ONTARIO IS GENEROUS

SPLENDID WORK DONE IN CONNECTION WITH MILITARY HOSPITALS.

One of the most outstanding tributes to the efficiency of the work being done by the Province of Ontario in the present war is the appreciation shown of the hospital organization and the use made of it by the military authorities. This was first seen in the erection and equipment of the Ontario Military Hospital at Orpington, Kent, England, with accommodation for 1,040 patients. So satisfactory has this hospital proven that it is now used as a model for similar institutions, and the Government has been requested to add to its capacity.

It will be remembered that the Orpington Hospital was one of many gifts made by the Province during 1914 and 1915 to assist in the conduct of the war. It cost about $450,000, and is maintained by the Province through the Canadian Government at an annual charge of $150,000. The proposal now comes to Premier Hearst from the Acting High Commissioner for Canada in London to enlarge substantially the hospital so that 2,014 patients can be treated. The moment the request came the Premier consulted his colleagues, who agreed to the enlargement, and plans and estimates are now being prepared and the work will be hastened to completion.

The second hospital to be provided by Ontario is at Cobourg. This is for the treatment of soldiers suffering from mental diseases from shock or other causes. The Cobourg Hospital has been equipped and is maintained by the Province under an arrangement with the Dominion Hospitals Commission. The staff, which is specially trained for the work, has been drawn from other provincial institutions, and the equipment represents the latest word in apparatus designed for mental treatment.

The third hospital to be used is the new institution at Whitby, which will shortly be opened as a convalescent home for returned soldiers. In its appointments and facilities Whitby is specially adapted for this work. Here it is proposed to carry on the re-education of those men who require training to equip them for civil life again. Certainly there is no nobler use to which the Whitby hospital can be put than the nursing and training of these men who have sacrificed so willingly not for freedom alone but for Canada.

The people of Ontario can manifest a justifiable pride in what they have accomplished. From the moment war was declared, not only in the gift of 250,000 bags of flour and 500 machine guns and the hospital work mentioned herein, but in domestic affairs, the promotion of economy and thrift, in helping recruiting, and in leading the campaign for the British Red Cross Society, the Province has measured up to its great responsibilities.

"The Fool of the Family."

The appointment of Prince Henry of Prussia, "the fool of the family," as Grand Admiral of the German and Austrian fleets, has caused dismay among the commanders of the latter, says Reynold's newspaper. Though identified with the navy from his boyhood, Prince Henry knows as much about seamanship as he does about shooting. Of his skill as a marksman all that is necessary to say is that he has already wounded three of his friends in mistake for birds.

SUN NOT A BALL OF FIRE

SCIENTIST PRESENTS MODIFIED CONCEPTION OF ITS HEAT.

In a paper on "The Utilization of Solar Energy," in the Smithsonian Annual Report, A. S. E. Ackerman of England says that the sun is no longer regarded as a monstrous ball of fire, at a temperature of several hundred thousand degrees centigrade, for, great as is its mass, it would be comparatively rapidly consumed if such combustion were taking place. The temperature of the surface of the sun has been determined as about 6,000 C., far too high to permit the formation of most chemical compounds, without which the production of heat by combustion is impossible. Such a temperature decomposes nearly all compounds into their elements and prevents their reuniting and the consequent production of heat.

Mr. Ackerman says that scientists are by no means certain how the sun's heat is produced; one theory being that it is due to radio-activity, and another that the energy to keep up the radiation could be supplied by a relatively microscopic contraption of its volume, but this theory is not a complete success, as it implies that the sun is only about 17,000,000 years old, or less than the age of the earth.

As to the structure of the sun there is also doubt, but the inner portion may be spoken of popularly as the nucleus and the outer portion as the atmosphere. When the outer layers of the atmosphere get relatively cooler they sink to a lower level, their place being taken by hotter layers, thus actuating a continual circulation of the sun's atmosphere. The author states that the weight of an average cubic foot of the sun is only one-quarter of that of an average cubic foot of the earth. The density of the sun being so small, it has been concluded that it can still continue to contract, getting hotter all the time instead of cooler, as is popularly supposed, making it a hopeful future for utilizers of solar energy.

The great glowing surface which the sun presents to us, even considered as a flat disk, has the enormous area of 585,750,000,000 square miles, each square foot of which emits the tremendous amount of about 12,500 horse-power, and the radiant energy received on the surface of the earth at noon on a clear day is about 5,000 horse-power per acre.

Church Music.

One cannot read the Psalms without the conviction, which grows with every repetition, that here is the poetic voicing of the deepest, highest and most intense experiences possible to the soul of man. They were intended for singing, and from the day of their use in the Jewish temple until now they have been the foundation of very many of our sublimest musical productions.

It must not be overlooked that only the highest intelligence, the most vivid imagination and the deepest inspiration can bring forth works of the first order. If there is the commonplace to be found in church music its cause is to be discovered in the human agent and not in the lack of inspiring force in religious feeling.—George Whitfield Andrews in Musical Quarterly.

"This is about the worst dinner I ever sat down to," he said as he surveyed the table, "but I s'pose I ought to make certain allowances."

"Yes, John," replied his wife. "If you would make certain allowances you would have no occasion to find fault with your food."—London Tit-Bits.

Progressive New Brunswick.

Hon. James Murray, Minister of Agriculture for New Brunswick, is conferring with people in various quarters in England with regard to an immigration scheme on behalf of his province. Mr. Murray asserts that recent legislation in New Brunswick in this respect is the most advanced step of the kind taken in Canada. The scheme provides for the establishment of community settlements, made up of returned or any soldiers desiring to settle on the land. Each community is to radiate from a central farm, and to be thoroughly equipped with implements necessary for the emigrants to get a good start. Hon. Mr. Murray is organizing a London agency for the work immediately the war is over.

STARTLING FACTS --READ THEM

United States Government Statistics Reveal:

That Only 358,000 out of their 100,000,000 population report incomes in excess of $2,500 per year.
That Nineteen out of every twenty fail to provide either for their families or old age.
That Every second man of the population at age twenty-five will be dependent upon someone else at sixty-five. Which class will you be in?
That Nine out of ten men leave no estate.
That Life Insurance Companies are distributing more than $2,000,000 per day.
That Life Insurance has decreased pauperism more than thirty-three and one-third per cent. in thirty-five years.
That Less than seven per cent. of the value of American lives is covered by Life Insurance.
That Life Insurance saves the nation more than $30,000,000 per year in maintaining the poor.

Under such conditions, what is your plain duty, eye, and privilege? Clearly to insure your life while you can. You say where and how can this best be done?

MR. ACKERMAN EULOGIZED BY MEMBERS OF BOARD

Framed Photo of Him for Walls of the Board Room.

The Board of Education will have an enlarged framed photograph of retiring chairman B. F. Ackerman hung on the wals of the board room. This was the unanimous decision of the members at last night's meeting.

Mr. Hill, who fathered the motion, regretted that the worthy chairman was about to leave after giving the city the best of satisfaction. The Queen Mary, the King Edward, the King George and the Queen Alexandra schools were monuments to his work. Few if any men in public had given such service and at all times it had been a pleasure to work with him.

Mr. Eastwood regretted exceedingly Mr. Ackerman's retirement. It was a distinct loss to the board. The ballot box was a very queer thing and he felt like other local gentlemen, that to the chairman's extraordinary success could be attributed his defeat. There was always a feeling of jealousy for a man who had been publicly and personally successful. There was one marked feature of the retiring chairman and it was being always sincere in his ideas, working for the city's interest all the time.

Will be Missed

Col. Miller felt sure that the defeat of the chairman had been brought about by little thought of the people. It had been a great pleasure to work with Mr. Ackerman and he would be greatly missed by those who knew him best. The people did not know the worth of the man whom they had defeated. His good work would never be forgotten by the board.

Mr. Crane in expresing regret over the retirement of the chairman, pointed out that Mr. Ackerman had the satisfaction of knowing that he had done his best for the city.

Had Done His Best

Chairman Ackerman briefly replied. It was the first time that he found out he was so popular. He regretted severing his association with the board, where the metings had ben harmonious all through. He had served the city to the best of his ability and if the property of the board had improvd by his work, it was willingly done and he did not begrudge the time spent on it. It was his intention to retire before nomination day but he had been urged to stand, much against his will. He was confident that the new man was quite capable of filling his place and he wished all the members God speed.

REPORTS TO SCHOOL BOARD

At the meeting of the Board of Education last evening the following committee reports were presented to the members for their consideration, and all the recommendations were approved of:

Your committee also recommend that the treasurer be paid the sum of $15 for petty cash.

Property Committee

Mr. Denne presented the report of the property committee, which was adopted.

Your property committee beg to report that tenders were asked for the extra plumbing required for Queen Mary School and have awarded the contract for the same to Messrs. R. G. Sturgeon & Co., theirs being the lowest tender.

The price was $112.

Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Hill presented the report of the committee on appointments, which was adopted.

Your committee on appointments beg to report and recommend that Miss Ruth Bristol of Madoc be appointed to the Public School staff, salary to be according to schedule and duties to commence Jan. 3rd.

WOMAN TEACHERS ASK THAT MINIMUM SALARY BE INCREASED TO $900

Say Salaries in Peterboro Not as High as in Other Cities -Remuneration to Unskilled Woman Workers Equal to That to Teachers.

The Woman's Teachers Guild wrote the Board of Education last night asking that the maximum salary be raised from $700 to $900 and that the yearly increase as per schedule be raised to $50. They pointed out that Peterborough salaries were not as high as teachers received in other places, and also that unskilled women workers were receiving remuneration equal to the salary of school teachers They asked the increase to take effect Jan. 1.

Mr. Gordon moved that the matter be referred to the committee on appointments for immediate attention.

Contracts Till June 30

Mr. Hill, chairman of the appointments committee, pointed out that the Board could not possibly deal with the request until next May, when the salaries would be revised prior to making appointments for the year beginning Sept 1. 1917. All of the present teachers were under contract until June 30. All of the salaries for all schools would be revised in May and the teachers would have ample time to decide whether they would sign new contracts or not. It was absolutely necessary to pay good salaries in order to get good teachers and he was surprised to learn that Peterborough was lower than other cities on the salary question. He moved that the matter be referred to the committee on appointments and that the schedule of other provincial cities be secured.

Mr. Gordon pointed out that if the salaries were increased in May to take effect Sept. - provision would have to be made in the estimates to take care of it. The appropriation could not be exceeded.

Mr. Eastwood was quite confident that the conditions at present pointed to a general increase of salaries. At any rate something will have to be done. The increase would amount to about $2.700 for public schools alone.

Mr. Gordon thought the investigation should be held as early as possible.

Mr. Eastwood in seconding Mr. Hill's motion, pointed out that all corporations were giving salary increases.

The motion carried.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Six Months for Mr. W. H. Walkey.

The Board of Education met last night to finish the business of the year 1916. It was the last meeting of the old Board and all the members were present.

The following communications were received and dealt with as follows:

Miss Sage, teacher at the King Edward School, was given leave of absence in order to undergo an operation.

Miss Mina Ross requested and was given an additional three months' leave of absence owing to ill health.

Mr. W. H. Walkey, of the Queen Alexandra School, was given six months' leave of absence as per his request. Mr. Walkey has been in the service of the Board for twenty-nine years.

Board Has no Objection.

H. M. Bishop asked the Board to issue a permit to allow his daughter to attend the convent school. The Board replied that they had no objection to Miss Bishop attending the convent school.

HOUSEKEEPERS' OPPORTUNITY

This annual Sale of Linens is an event brimful of interest to housekeepers. Anticipate your wants for months ahead, and you will save money. For a number of years it has been our custom to conduct a linen sale. This year we're better prepared than most people would imagine—we bought linens in large quantities before the advance in prices.

SEE FRONT WINDOW TO-NIGHT

This sale is not of the insignificant sort. It covers a wide range of linen necessities, and if the reductions on each line were totalled, a considerable amount would be reached. There will be real enthusiastic buying from the opening to the final day, for the prices are such that any woman knowing to-day's values and continual advances will not fail to be present.

MASSED CANADIAN BANDS ENTERTAINED IN PARIS

Bandmaster Wm. Peryer and Other Peterboro Musicians With Canadian Bands For Trip to Paris.

The clipping from a Paris (France) newspaper given below, tells of the visit to Paris of the massed Canadian bands, Bandmaster Wm. Peryer of the 39th O.S. band and other Peterborough musicians being among the visitors. Mrs. Peryer has received several newspaper clippings, all descriptive of the Canadians and the entertainment accorded to them.

The report says:—

Groups of Parisians yesterday stood stock-still in the muddy streets when, on that dour day, the cheerful, irrepressible cries of the Far West—the quaint catch-calls of the Canadian Army—rang out. Two hundred bands, big and brawny, in the highest of spirits, which not even a wintry crossing of the Channel, an early morning arrival at the Gare du Nord, and the unceasing drizzle of a December day could damp, were out "sight-seeing." Wherever they went they brought a burst of lusty life.

Already Paris has been visited by such famous bands as the Scots Guards and the Coldstreamers; while London in its turn has listened to the Garde Republicaine and the Belgian Band. Between five and six o'clock yesterday morning there was a little assembly on the platform of the Gare du Nord, to receive the late visitors to Paris. The director of "L'Intransigeant," M. Leon Bailby, who had organised the arrangements was there; the military authorities of Paris were represented by four officers specially delegated to receive the musicians; M. Balay, the conductor of the Gare Republicaine, which made such a triumphal tour in London, with members of his famous band, welcomed their confreres.

Early Morning Performance

Capt. Edmund Burke was the officer in comand of the Canadians, while Lieut. E. Goosens is the bandmaster and Lieut. H. J. Dickinson the devisional bandmaster and adjutant.

In spite of the all-night journey after the sea voyage from England, the men looked fresh and well in their smart khaki uniform. There were motor-cars in attendance—provided by the French military authorities—and they were driven, gay under the cheerless skies of the morning, to the Pepiniere Barracks, where they are staying.

When they arrived they grouped themselves around their bandmaster, and to the huge satisfaction of the crowd, which had quickly been attracted, they played God Save the King, The Maple Leaf and the Marseillaise.

In the afternoon they visited the offices of L'Intransigeant, where they were toasted. The rain did not deter them from making a preliminary survey of Paris, and they made the ways noisy with their merriment.

Among the places visited yesterday by the bandsmen (accompanied by several men of the Garde Republicaine) were the Hotel des Invalides, the tomb of Napoleon, and the Musee de l'Armee.

Their Program

This morning at 9 o'clock they proceed to the Trocadero for a rehearsal of the program they are to give tomorrow afternoon. They will play as they march through the streets of Paris, both on their way to the Trocadero and on their return.

This afternoon they will spend in seeing Paris, and in the evening at 8.15 they will give a public rehearsal at the Trocadero, in conjunction with the Garde Republicaine and the various artistes who will take part. Owing to the fact that all the cheaper seats have long ago been sold for the Sunday afternoon concert, the organizers decided to throw open this rehearsal to the general public at the uniform price of admission of one franc.

Tomorrow afternoon at the Trocadero the big concert will take place, for the benefit of the orphans of the war. The best artistes in Paris, the Garde Republicaine, the Association of Choral Singing, directed by Mr. Francis Casadeaus, and the massed Canadian bands will draw all Paris.

Tomorrow evening they will be at the Opera, and will play during an interval. "Thais" is to be given, with Mme. Marguerite Carre in the name-part and M. Lestelly as Athanael.

TRENCH DIGGING BY NIGHT

Five Successful Hours Spent in "No Man's Land."

A British officer writes as follows: "It was dark soon after five, and by a quarter to six we were moving out into the open. We had drilled the whole business very carefully into the men themselves, as well as the section commanders and sergeants. We got out on our line without a sound; and then the O. C. (Officer Commanding) made his way back to 'Stinking Sap' to report to Captain —, of the R.E., that we had taken on the duty of protection and were all ready for his men to go ahead. He marched his carriers out then, stringing them out along the whole line, and the whole of his company set to work putting up the screen of wire entanglements behind our line.

"No machine gun spoke on that sector, not once, while the wire was going up. Before half-past seven the O. C. came along to me with orders to lead my men off to 'Stinking Sap.' The wiring was finished. There had been a hundred and fifty men at it, you know; and at that moment the last of 'em was entering 'Stinking Sap.'

"At a quarter to nine a Boche machine gun dead opposite the centre of my half-company began to traverse our line—his real objective, of course, being, not our line, but the old fire-trench in our rear. I know now that at that moment the slowest of 'C' diggers was underground. That burst of fire did not get a single man. At half-past two the O. C. came along and whispered to me to take my men in 'Finished for to-night.' Not one of our men had a scratch, nor yet a single man of 'C' Company. One man of No. 3 Platoon had a bullet through his shoulder; a 'Blighty,' and no more. And that was our record."

SHORT CASUALTY LISTS

Despairing Germans Cannot Find Names of Own Relatives

A neutral after visiting Berlin, wrote: One can get a good idea of the temper of the German people by standing outside such a place as the Kriegsakademie, where the lists of wounded are displayed in small type. There are people around them all day anxiously watching the walls. I spent an hour one afternoon pretending to look through the lists and hearing what was said. On no occasion did any person discover the particular friend or relative for whom they were looking. The people were, of course, poor folks, because the official alleged casualty lists can be bought in sections, the proceeds going to the German Red Cross. The attitude of the poor in these places is that of utter hopelessness and discontent.

DEAF, BUT A HERO

Man Too Deaf For Trench Work, Became Stretcher-bearer

There is a man so deaf that he was unfit for work in the trenches. He was a cheerful sort and the men liked the queer things that happened when he failed to hear an order. Every one but the deaf man stood to. He took no notice. "Stand to!" shouted the colonel. The deaf man turned pathetic eyes on him. "Is it true, sir," he asked anxiously, "that the Government have stopped the rum ration?"

During a big battle he was ordered to the clearing station just behind the lines, but he spent the whole day under the murderous fire of the machine guns and the artillery between the first line trenches and a shorter trench far advanced to the most exposed part of the ground, picking up the wounded, twisting them on to his broad back, and staggering back with them under fire until he reached a place of comparative safety. Then he went back into the thick of it again. He was the one man in that toiling devoted company who did not hear the awful clamor of the shells, but calmly faced a silent death. The "Pals" whom he has often amused are hoping that he will get the medal he deserves.

SCOUTING PATROLS IN TRENCH WARFARE

"No Man's Land" Becomes a Deadly Playground for the Military Game of "Hide-and-Seek"

"R.W." writes: The Boche is sending up very few star-shells, and the interpretation of this is that he has a working party in front of his parapet. Accordingly a patrol, composed of a sergeant and four men, is sent out to inquire into the matter and harry any Huns who can be discovered. Though clouds obscure the moon there is sufficient light for an object to be dimly made out thirty or forty yards away. The patrol, moving in the shape of a "V," with the sergeant in front forming the apex, proceeds about a hundred yards towards the enemy's trench, when they halt and lie down. Here they remain for some little time staring into the gloom and listening.

They move stealthily forward for another fifty yards, then again lie down. They are now about half-way between the opposing lines and it is no longer wise to proceed in an upright position. They consequently crawl on all fours, stopping to listen every few yards. At last a low murmur of voices comes from the direction of the enemy trench.

Ready With Bombs

Holding their breaths they listen intently. Slight though the sounds are they can all hear them. In a flash they realize that it is an enemy patrol out to protect the working party. A sign from the sergeant causes them to come up facing the direction from which the sounds come. Each one of the patrol carries bombs. They are ready and eager to encounter their on-coming quarry.

Then suddenly the man next the sergeant gives a spasmodic shudder, and his body twists as though in agony. The sergeant lays a hand on the convulsing form. "Stick it, lad!" he implores in a hoarse whisper. "For Heaven's sake stick it." The least sound now may reveal their presence. The man buries his teeth in the loose cloth of his sleeve, and for a moment makes a muffling sound like a terrier with its head far down a rabbit hole. He has not stopped a bullet, but a cough.

Surprised Their Foe

The sounds of the approaching patrol become louder, and at last the little partyl lying in ambush can discern crawling shapes looming larger as they slowly approach. The sergeant springs to his feet, followed on the instant by his men. They hurl their bombs. Guttural shouts of dismay are drowned by the boom of the bursting bombs. The sergeant and his men dash forward with the bayonet. The Boches, taken wholly unawares, turn and run. Excited shouts come from the enemy trench. Flares flash skywards. In a few moments machine guns will be busy. "Now 'op it like 'ell!" shouts the sergeant.

VILE GERMAN CARTOONS

Hate and Bestiality Expressed and Imperial Adulation

A total lack of a sense of humor and sense of proportion among the Germans can be gathered from the fact that Mr. Haselden's famous cartoons of Big and Little Willie, which have a vogue among Americans and other neutrals in Germany and are by no means unkind, are regarded by Germans as a sort of sacrilege. These same people do not hesitate to circulate the most horrible and indecent pictures of President Wilson, King George, President Poincare, and especially of Viscount Grey of Fallodon. The Czar is usually depicted covered with vermin, and the King of Italy as an evil-looking dwarf with a dagger in his hand. Only those who have seen the virulence of the caricatures circulated by picture postcards can have any idea of the horrible material on which the German child is fed. The only protest ever heard came from the Artists' Society of Munich, who objected to these loathsome educational efforts as being injurious to the reputation of artistic Germany and calculated to produce permanent dam[illegible] mind.

EMPOWERED TO ENGAGE SUPPLY TEACHERS.

Inspector Mowat and the chairman of the committee on appointments were empowered by the Board of Education last night to engage teachers temporarily to act as supply for teachers granted leave of absence.

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

The next meeting of the Board of Agriculture for West Peterborough will be held at the Fourth Line, Smith, at 2:30 p.m. next Thursday. There will be an evening session also.

On Friday, January 5th, two meetings will be held at Buckhorn. There will be good speakers at each session to discuss topics of interest to farmers, and musical programs will be furnished besides. All are invited.

Thieves' Insurance.

Recently there has been brought to light in London a widespread form of insurance against police court fines inflicted on thieves. The scheme was discovered by Mr. Cecil Chapman, the Tower Bridge magistrate, who told a London Daily Mail representative that "it all arises from the prosperity which had been apparent on the surface during the last year or so prompting a great many previously honest people to pilfer. Seeing plenty, they have succumbed to the temptation to take some for themselves. At some docks, warehouses, and other places the volume of pilfering has increased threefold. This has led to what can only be described as thieves' insurance societies, in which both honest and dishonest men club together to form a fund from which the fines inflicted on those convicted of thieving are paid. They appoint an official called 'the banker,' who collects the money, and it is his duty to attend the court and pay the fines. In one case a few days ago a youth caught stealing had on him a card showing subscriptions to the amount of £2 for use in paying the fines of friends found guilty of thieving. An even stranger case was that of a person charged with stealing 7s 6d. He had been entrusted with 15s, subscribed by friends to pay the fine of a pilferer. The fine was only 7s 6d, and the 'banker' had kept the balance."

Woman's Age.

Indelicacy of mentioning the age of women is not a modern notion. Women are referred to in large numbers in the Old Testament, yet there was only one Sarah, Abraham's wife—whose age is recorded.

Peruvian Potatoes.

Peru is the natural home of the potato, which grows [illegible] varieties. Of these the most famous is the Peruvian yellow potato. It is of exquisite taste, highly nutritious, with a golden color and a thin skin.

A Paradox.

"Will you please insert this obituary notice?" writes a correspondent to the editor of a paper. "I make bold to ask it, because I know the deceased had many friends who'd be glad to hear of his death."

Depends.

SOLDIERS USE MUCH CHEESE

HIGH PRICE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS IS EXPLAINED.

Reasons for the high cost of dairy products were explained by J. A. Ruddick, dairy and cold storage commissioner, at a meeting of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association held recently in that city. He said prices of butter and cheese were not fixed by local conditions. Butter and milk sold in Ottawa at a price settled by what cheese sold for in Great Britain. Cheese was higher now than it ever was before. If butter were to be sold relatively to what cheese is being sold for it would be 47 cents per pound at the factory and 52 cents retail. Butter, taking into consideration the price of cheese, was cheap, said Mr. Ruddick. The old country market was the deciding factor in the prices of dairy products. Great Britain imported more dairy products than any other country in the world. Figures were given to illustrate.

In the last eight months of 1914 imports of butter to Great Britain from Canada amounted to 318,000,000 pounds; in the same period for 1915 there was a reduction; in 1916 even less, only 162,000,00 pounds. The reason of Great Britain's heavy dairy imports from Canada was due to the fact that Denmark, Sweden, and Holland, sources of supply, were exporting to Germany and Russia could not get her's out. Australia was short. France, though, was still exporting as much butter to Great Britain as she ever did. The imports of cheese had increased, Mr. Ruddick said, because it was in great demand for the soldiers. The huge quantity consumed was the reason for the high prices.

"We have increased our shipments of butter enormously since war began," said Mr. Ruddick. "From May to October, 1914, we exported 450,000 pounds; in the same period of this year, the quantity is 9,352,000 pounds. Our surplus makes no difference in the price. If we made 10,000,000 more pounds of butter it would be more to export."

Cheese exports from Canada had increased greatly. From May to October, 1914, 101,000,000 pounds went out of the country, in the same period 1916, 139,000,000 pounds, an increase of 38,000,000 pounds. The increase for the whole year would be large in proportion. These conditions, Mr. Ruddick said, contradicted the prediction of a leading exporter in Montreal that in four years Canada's cheese export business would be gone. The estimated cheese exportation this year was 185,000,000 pounds. The value of the exports were far ahead of previous records.

Mr. Ruddick said the total value of dairy produce of Canada this year would be $200,000,000. He alluded to the small consumption of cheese in Canada. Here the per capita consumption was 2½ pounds per annum; in Great Britain it was 13½ pounds. The reason was because the best cheese was exported. Canada had to be content with the next best brand.

Both Male and Female.

A Welsh vicar, who has recently been advertising for an organist, was very much bewildered on receiving the following amongst his replies: "Dear Sir,—I notice you have a vacancy for an [illegible] and music-teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I beg to offer you my services."

In the Kitchen.

"This preserving business keeps one in hot water, doesn't it?" said the pear to the peach.

"Yes," assented the latter. "It does jar one."—Exchange.

HUMOR FROM THE TRENCHES

Brimful with wit and humor is the Camp Magazine, published at the Canadian Base Depot at Rouelles, France. Copies of this magazine have recently come across to friends of the boys at the front.

News items sometimes get into this publication, by accident, as it were, but its general contents are worthy of a place in Punch.

This is how the Rouelles camp reporter describes the visit of Sir George and Lady Perley to the Canadian lines.

"Yes, they have come. Sir George and Lady Perley. About one hundred of the boys with a long rope were waiting down the hill for the motor. The car is stopped, the rope attached, and headed by the pipers and drums, the triumphal march begins. They went all around the camp, spending some two hours, and when good-bye was said we wished them 'God speed and come again.'"

Open letters are a feature of the publication.

'Arry 'Awkins addresses the following open letter to Lord Derby:

"I takes my pen in 'and and 'open this reaches you, as it leaves me in the pink. I writes just to let you know as 'ow your recruiting sergeant 'ave been after me, but as I ain't no good walking I can't join the infantry, while noise makes my 'ead ache and I don't know nothing about 'orses, so cavalry and artillery are out of the question, and as I ain't no doctor, the Medical Corps ain't no go, and as my brother in the A. S. C. says 'is job is rotten, I don't want to join that, but I am very fond of boating, 'aving been to Margate twice. I may join the Royal navy when the weather gets warm. Will you tell your recruiting sergeants this so as they will let off a worrying me."

The battalion orders issued by Lieut.-Col. U. Tinhat, commanding the 24th Canadian Underground Artillery, make interesting reading.

Standing orders are quoted to the effect that "any man found on the march with more than one pack will be severely dealt with."

Part two of the orders announce that Bombardier Blank File was sentenced to six months C.B. for refusing to parade for pay when ordered to do so, while "Gunner Smartman was sentenced by a F.G.C.M. to three days physical jerks for neglecting to whitewash the Last Post.

Actor Composes March.

James K. Hackett, the actor, who has a summer home on the St. Lawrence River among the Thousand Islands, was present at the banquet tendered Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, at the Canadian Club New York, and contributed to the entertainment a new march of his own composition entitled "La Belle Canada." The selection was played at the banquet by an orchestra engaged and drilled by Mr. Hackett, and the tribute to the guest of honor was greatly appreciated. Mr. Hackett made a speech in which he said that he loved Canada, and while sitting on the porch of his summer home on the St. Lawrence watching supply ship steam by he had been inspired to compose "La Belle Canada."

Soldiers Led All the Route in Opener With Lindsay Midgets

Local Intermediates Ran up Score of 14 to 2 on Poor Ice.

FANS PLEASED

Lindsay's fine looking team— on paper—deteriorated like a pail of milk in a rainfall, when the Hughestown lads tried conclusions with the 247th Battalion team at the ice works here last night. It was 6 to 1 at the end of the first period, 10 to 2 for the next twenty minutes' play and 14 to 2 when hostilities ceased for the night. In the sixty minutes of play there was plenty of fun for the spectators, many bumps for the players, and an occasional flash of high class hockey—all these being interspersed with promenades to the penalty box.

The ice was in wretched condition and neither team was seen to the best advantage. Lindsay brought a weakened team, due to the absence of Chuck Carew, the hero of many a junior contest, and Norton, both of whom had a lot to do with the 20 to 4 defeat handed to Cobourg at Lindsay last Friday night. And the game last night had not been under way long before Clarence Read, a Bobcaygeon boy with the Midgets, took a pain in the slats and was advised by doctors to quit.—Towards the close of the period Art Carew was injured in the foot and he left the fray, never to return. The second period opened with five men on each team. McElroy, Griffis and Haugh survived on the Lindsay forward line and against them were arrayed Jack Adams on right wing, Armstrong at centre and Halpin or Thornton protecting the other wing. The Scugogville trio were flying distress signals for the remainder of the game, but be it said to their credit, they dug in and each did his best to keep down the score. But it was an unequal struggle. The local soldiers, having the superiority in weight and speed, had but little trouble in running their total counters up to 14. The Lindsay lads with their full team will put up a much harder argument in the return game.

Soldiers Look Good

The crowd of thirteen hundred took keen enjoyment out of the game and local fans seemed to be pleased with the work of the soldiers, who, having demonstrated their worth on poor ice, should be big favorites on hard ice. Armstrong at centre is a likely looking gent, being cool, aggressive and a nifty stick handler. Adams at right wing is a husky player, willing and with a knowledge of play along the boards. He is always on top of the puck. Flannagan at rover went off the ice when Reade was hurt and he did not have a real opportunity to display himself. Thornton, a new face, who works on the defence, is another husky chap who plays hockey with a smile on his face—something unusual. He is a good stick handler and a plugger from Plugville. Halpin and Evans and LeGros are well known to the fans and need no introduction.

The teams:—

Lindsay—Goal, O'Loughlin; defence, Richman and Carew; rover, Reade; centre, McElroy; wings, Griffis and Haugh.

Peterborough—Goal, LeGros; defence, Thornton and Halpin; rover, Armstrong, centre, Flannagan; wings, Evans and Adams.

Stan. Burgoyne's little movement in centre ice was very entertaining to the crowd but hard on the frigid surface.

The Midgets can find some comfort in the fact that the locals stopped at 14 instead of proceeding further. Seems to us Mr. Armstrong might have notched a few more had he so desired.

W. M. LANG, SKIP FOR TANKARD

At a meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club skips last Thursday, J. E. A. Fitzgerald was selected one of the Tankard skips, but he declined the duty, and at a meeting of the skips last night W. M. Lang was chosen to lead a rink to victory.

The fool takes things as they come, but the wise guy always goes after what he wants.

B.B. CHATTER

A person purporting to be a brother of Rube Waddell, a southpaw, has made application for a berth on the Cubs' hurling staff. Manager Mitchell will investigate the credentials of this applicant, say Cub officials.

George Tebeau, owner of the Kansas City Blues of the American Association, peeved over reports to the effect that he would be forced out of that circuit, comes to bat with the information he won't sell his holdings. The Kansas City magnate denied he was negotiating with John Ganzel for the sale of his team.

Sherwood Magee of the Boston Braves will be traded or sold at the meeting of moguls in Cincinnati, according to a report. A three-cornered deal involving the Braves, Cubs and Cardinals is a possibility

President Frazee of the Boston Red Sox is making overtures to Bill Carrigan to induce him to sign a contract to manage the world's champions in 1917. Carrigan is said to be in a receptive mood.

Buck Weaver of the White Sox led the American league in sacrifice hits with a total of 44. This makes Buck a logical candidate for second place in the Sox batting order of 1917.

Confirmation of the reappointment of Kid Gleason as coach and assistant manager of the White Sox is expected to emanate from headquarters of the south side club. Manager Rowland wanted Gleason to help coach the pitchers and keep the ball club in a happy frame of mind.

Here's a bit of news of interest to Canadian fandom.

Frankie Fuller, former Ottawa shortfielder, and second baseman, will not be with Detroit this season. Reports from the City of Fords say he is to be sent to some minor league club

Archie Yelle, another former Canadian leaguer, will go to Detroit to replace Del Baker as second string catcher. Yelle was with London two years ago, and later with Providence.

It has leaked out that Bill Carrigan's earnings last year totalled $23,300. He received $10,00 as salary; $3,800 for his share of the world's series coin; $2,500 as a bonus for winning the American league, and $7,000 as his share of earnings of the Boston club.

Why should he quit the business, eh?

Its Change.

The Famous Mme. Sevigne.

Marie de Rabutin Chantal, known to the world as Mme. Sevigne, is supposed to have been born in Burgundy, at the chateau of Boubilly, in 1626, though both date and place are somewhat obscure. In 1644 she married the Marquis de Sevigne. Her unhappy marriage was terminated by the death of the marquis seven years afterward in a duel. The young widow then devoted herself entirely to her children. When her daughter was married to the Marquis de Grignan, the consequent separation caused the correspondence, which although not intended for publication, made her name celebrated, for she associated with the principal actors in the civil war of the Fronde.

Letters in "Broken" Arm.

A nurse entering Holland from Germany had a "broken" arm that was encased in plaster of paris. Arriving at the frontier, where every one has to submit to search, the military guard demanded that the casing be ripped open. When the cast was broken some 80 letters lay exposed. The arm was perfectly whole and healthy.

"THE USED CAR"

(By Jean Havez.)

Some pessimistic writer said: "Your troubles start when first you wed you drift beneath a most unlucky star,' but if you want to know the worst, to be with direct trouble cursed, go buy a second-handed motor car. They eye you with a greedy face when you step in the auto place, they figure you and money must be sundered. Your'e buttonholed by some young shrimp, but if you show you're not a simp he'll drop down from a thousand to a hundred. They're full of all the cutest tricks, a car that ran in nineteen-six is tickled up in manner most adroit. They paint it in some striking hue, like eighteen-fifty f.o.b. Detroit. Four cylinders there used to be, just raise the hood and you can see but three of them are only just a prop. Then crank her up and start your car, and hear the rattle and the jar; it sounds exactly like a boiler shop. The man in confidential burst says all cars sound that way at first, he blames it on the fact that its not dusted. You pay three hundred for the boat, and then with heart up in your throat, you run three blocks; it stops, you know it's busted. You push and pull and jump and dodge until you reach a near garage, profanity and irritation mixing, and then the man that keeps the place, says eight-seven different things need fixing. You ask him what the wreck is worth, he figures out its date of birth, he gives you eighty dollars and you shiver. You take the money, beat it out, and resolution loudly shout, you're through with every second-handed flivver.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Lady fingers are the prevailing thing in engagement rings.

An awkward man may not be slow yet he always wants a day of grace.

Nothing succeeds like the financial success some men make of a failure.

Many a man's good reputation is due to what isn't found out about him.

But if a man is inclined to be foolish a silk hat won't save him.

But for the occasional happening of the unexpected it would soon cease to be.

Gold brick buyers are born often enough to keep the manufacturers from going out of business.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

PATTERSON—EVANS.

At high noon today in George Street Methodist Church Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., united in marriage Rev. Richard Moore Patterson of Murray township, Brighton, and Miss Margaret Evans, of Manvers township.

A number of the friends of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony. The bride is a former member of George Street Methodist Church and the groom is a promising young minister of the Bay of Quinte Conference. He was received into full connection of the church in June last.

FREEMAN—THOMPSON

WARSAW, Jan. 3.—The marriage of Florence Helen Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Thompson, to John Freeman, of Bobcaygeon, was solemnized on Wednesday, Dec. 27, at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. R. D. Clare officiating. The bride, who was unattended, looked very pretty in a gown of blue crepe. After the signing of the register supper was served.

The good wishes of many friends in the community followed the happy couple when they left later in the evening for their home in Bobcaygeon, the bride travelling in a grey tailored suit with hat to match.

Dr. MacNaughton of Hamilton and Mrs. MacNaughton spent the New Year's holidays with the doctor's sister, Mrs. Learmonth, Stewart street.

GRAPEFRUIT MARMALADE

One orange, one lemon, one grapefruit. Shave the orange, the lemon and the grapefruit very thin, rejecting nothing but the seeds and cores. Measure the fruit, and add to it three times the quantity of water. Let it stand in an earthenware dish overnight, and on the second morning add pint for pint of sugar, and boil steadily until it jellies. The product should have a lumpy appearance quite different from most marmalades, the strips of fruit being well defined in a clear pale jelly. To bring this about, stir as little as possible during the two hours or more of cooking which is required.

Cake Like Mother's

Sponge Cake—Beat two eggs until light, and add gradually, while beating constantly, one and one-third teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one cupful of sugar; then add one-half cupful of scalded milk in which one tablespoonful of butter is melted, and one and one-eighth cupfuls of bread flour mixed and sifted with one-half teaspoonful of soda. Bake in a buttered and floured round cake tin 45 minutes.

Creamed Heart

Cut the beef in small pieces and boil one minute in a cup and a half of milk. Thicken with a tablespoon of dissolved flour, add a large piece of butter, season and boil one minute longer.

SONG-STORY OF MESSIAH IS RETOLD AT ST. PAUL'S

Famous Oratorio Admirably Presented by Peterborough Choral Society to Large Audience---Visiting Soloists and Miss Dorothy Allan Win New Musical Laurels.

Handel's imortal song-story of the Messiah was presented by the Peterborough Choral Society in St. Paul's Church last night and the large audience that heard it is the best evidence that the popularity of the oratorio is as firmly established as the inspired version of the original. The presentation last night was the best ever yet heard in this city. Besides the four soloists there was a chorus of sixty-five voices, whose rendiion of the various parts showed the care that had been devoted to their training. It was not a mere mechanical recital. Every member of the chorus sang with feeling, and the audience received the impression that the adoration of the singers was sincere. The spirit of the conductor, Mr. John Allan, inspired his pupils.

The spectacle of the chorus was itself imposing, seated as they were in four tiers of seats in front of the pulpit. Mr. T. J. Palmer, A.R.C.O., the distinguished organist of the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, presided at the organ. Miss Pearl Steinhoff, contralto, of Toronto, charmed her hearers with her rendition of the various parts assigned her on the program, from the Annunciation of the birth of the Messiah of the world to the prophet's tribute, "He was despised and rejected of men."

Peterborough's musical reputation was ably sustained by Miss Dorothy Allan in the soprano solos. Mr. Albert Downing, Canada's famous tenor, was enthusiastically applauded, especially after his rendering of 'Thy rebuke has broken His heart."

Mr. Marley A. Sherris was the bass soloist and in his selections he fully justified the high reputation as a vocalist that preceded him to this city. Miss Flowers rendered the piano accompaniment.

Music lovers from Belleville, Oshawa, and other outside points who attended last night voted it the best presentation of the famous oratorio that they had ever witnessed. There was not a false note in the entire performance and words are inadequate to describe the effects of the grand chorus, "Hallelujah, for the Lord Omnipotent Reigneth," when the entire audience rose as a mark of reverence. Months have been spent in arduous preparation and Mr. John Allan, the conductor, spared neither time nor effort in training his class. One of the most distinguished organists and three of the best soloists in Canada were brought to the city to take part. Any music lover who failed to attend missed one of the greatest musical festivals ever held in this city.

The following was the program in full:—

Soloists.—Miss Dorothy Allan, soprano; Miss Pearl Steinhoff, contralto; Miss Flowers, pianiste; Mr. Albert Downing, tenor; Mr. Marley R. Sherris, bass; Mr. T. J. Palmer, A.R.C.O., organist; Mr. John Allan, conductor.

Application to Parliament

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Corporation of the City of Peterborough will apply to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act for the following purposes:—

1.—To authorize the Council of the City of Peterborough to purchase Motor Driven Fire Apparatus, with the necessary equipment, and to issue Debentures to pay for the same, to an amount not exceeding $10,000.

2.—To amend Section 9 of Chapter 82 of the Statutes of 1907, so as to provide for the more expeditious collection of the special rates therein referred to.

3.—To authorize the Council or the Peterborough Utilities Commission to instal sanitary conveniences in any building, the owner of which is unable to pay the expense of same at once, or who has neglected to instal same and to make the necessary connections therefrom to the sewage and water works system and to pay the cost therof and collect the same, including interest, in equal quarterly instalments from the owner of such building, and to provide that such cost shall be a charge on the said building and the land on which the same is situated until fully paid and that if any of said instalments are not paid they may be collected by action against the owner or added to the Colector's roll and collected in like manner as Municipal taxes, with authority to the said Council to issue Debentures to meet the cost of said work.

4.—In the event of the City acquiring the plant, property and business of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, that the Peterborough Utilities Commission shall have the control and management thereof, with power to maintain, operate, extend and renew the same and that the said Peterborough Radial Railway shall when acquired be a public utility within the meaning of The Public Utilities Act and the provisions of the said Act, and of section 3 of Chapter 65 of the Acts passed in the year 1915 shall apply to said Railway and to the said Peterborough Utilities Commission, and their duties, authorities and powers in connection with the same, and that the said Peterborough Utilities Commision, with the consent of the Council shall have authority to borrow money for the purposes of the railway and shall have such other powers in connection with the management and maintenance of the Railway as the Council may by By-Laws confer.

5.—To authorize the Council, without the assent of the Electors, to borrow such sums not exceeding $10,000.00 in addition to such amounts already provided or authorized, which may be required or needed to satisfy the amount of the award, costs, expenses and disbursements created or incurred by reason of the arbitration between the City of Peterborough and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, and the litigation resulting therefrom, and also the costs of the purchase of such property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, as was a part of the plant of the said Company, outside of the City of Peterborough and adjacent thereto, and to author'ze the issue of Debentures of the Corporation therefor.

6.—The amount of the rateable property of the Municipality is the sum of $11,564,330.00 and the existing Debenture debt exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates is the sum of $1,928,350.59 of which the following are the particulars: Waterworks $600,000.00, Electric Lighting and Power Plant $120,000.00, Local Improvements $344,375.28, Public Schools $253,650.00 Collegiate Institute $73,225.31, Protestant Home $10,000.00, General City Debentures $527,100.00.

COMPRESSED WRITING

Wonderful Feats in the Art of Penmanship

In competition for a prise offered by a paper for the best examples of microscopic writing, a reader sent in a fairly readable and exhaustive account of the first voyage of Christopher Columbus and the discovery of America, written on a hen's egg. Another competitor's series of efforts included the Lord's Prayer written on a grain of wheat split lengthwise, and the first chapter of Genesis inscribed within a circle no bigger than a shilling. A French-Canadian sent in Francois Coppee's novel of "Henriette," containing over 19,000 words, written on the back of a cabinet photograph. On the inside of a silver watch case a girl of sixteen had engraved 2,107 words, using a tiny platinum needle dipped in powerful acid. A committee of six examined the various efforts through powerful microscope, and eventually the prize was awarded to a man who sent in the first two sheets of a great newspaper written on a post card.

Chimney Fires

For a chimney fire a few pounds of salt thrown in at the top is probably the best handy extinguisher; but a pail of sand, earth, ashes, or even coal, will be very helpful. If a fireplace connects with the chimney, the latter materials are not desirable to use, since they are liable to scatter the burning soot into the room where the fireplace is located.

Cleanliness must be exercised while making automobile repairs. A small particle of dirt on the surface of a gasket will cause it to leak when screwed up.

RUSSIANS TAKE 600 PRISONERS

PRISONERS AND GUNS TAKEN BY RUSSIANS

Success in an Attack on Enemy Positions in Wooded Carpathians.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4.—The capture by the Russians on the Roumanian front of six hundred prisoners, three cannon and sixteen machine guns, together with some mine-throwers and bomb-mortars, is announced in today's war office statement.

This success resulted from an attack on hostile positions on heights to the south of Botchu Mountain in the wooded Carpathians.

DESERTER FROM 93rd BATTALION IN LAW'S HANDS

ON TRAIN FROM TORONTO HE DECLINED TO PAY HIS FARE.

ASKED ANOTHER CHANCE.

"Guilty, sir," pleaded a young married man in police court this morning when Magistrate Dumble charged him with having deserted from the ranks of His Majesty's forces. Prisoner deserted from the 93rd Battalion last July and went to Toronto.

"I suppose he doesn't want to enlist," remarked the chief when the magistrate seemed perplexed as to the disposition of the case.

"Yes I do," broke in the prisoner.

When the chief answered that he had had plenty of opportunity to enlist at Toronto but had failed to do so, defendant explained that he was working on munitions.

"The trouble is these young fellows draw their money from the battalion and when the battalion is ready to go overseas they desert. That is what this man did," said the chief. "We had twenty or thirty names from the battalion on our list."

The prisoner was remanded for a week. The chief will communicate with the military authorities.

The young man was arrested last night at the C.P.R. station, word having been sent ahead that he refused to pay for his transportation. Other charges are pending.

Declined to Enlist

Another occupant of the prisoners' pen was fined $10 for having been found drunk last night. He denied the charge but P.C. Blade, who made the arrest, supplied the necessary details.

Prisoner had been unruly in a cafe and when overtaken on George Street numerous wine glasses were found on his person.

He declined the magistrate's invitation to enlist.

Autoist Fined $5

A driver of an automobile who erred was fined $5. The charge was "when not passing vehicles ahead he did not keep as near to the right hand curb or side of the street as possible, contrary to by-law No. 1635 of the city.

TRENTON LOSES AN INDUSTRY

BYLAW GRANTING BONUS IS QUASHED.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—Mr. Justice Hodgins yesterday quashed the bylaw of the town of Trenton, granting an $11,000 bonus to the Benedict Manufacturing Co. This judgment was given on the application of the town of Alliston, Ont., which claimed that its industry of Benedict, Proctor & Co. was threatened with removal to Trenton by reason of Trenton's $11,000 bait. Justice Hodgins found that both were branches of the same Syracuse firm and killed the Trenton bylaw.

GEORGE WHITE A WANDERER GOES TO FARM

FARMERS IN OTONABEE FEARED STRANGER WOULD START A FIRE.

FOUR MONTHS AT GUELPH.

George White, a tinker, appeared before County Magistrate Langley this morning on a charge of vagrancy. He pleaded not guilty.

Constable A. Moore, in company with P.C. Wigg, had arrested prisoner on Dec. 28 on the complaint of Reeve Anderson of Otonabee. The defendant was found lying on a pile of cedar shavings in a wood near Keene. He was in a very destitute condition, poorly clothed and footed and was in a very filthy condition.

Farmers Frightened

A small lot of soldering tools and about 56c in money was found on the prisoner when arrested. The farmers were frightened that the defendant would start a fire and damage their property. The farmers' wives also complained of the prisoner being a nuisance. The defendant had led a wandering life for about nine years, travelling in the north-west and in various parts of the provice. He had no home or relatives in this country.

Sent to Farm

Evidence was given by Joseph Taylor, Hugh McFee and the constables.

The magistrate found the prisoner guilty and sent him to the Ontario prison farm for four months.

ADJUST LOSS AT COURT HOUSE

The members of the special committee of the County Council to whom was given the power to adjust the loss on the Court House with the fire insurance companies interested in the loss, met with Mr. C. D. Corey, the underwriters' adjuster, yesterday, and they looked over the report of Appraisers Graham and Finney, which in the main details was satisfactory to both parties.

The county has carried the insurance for over 75 years and the property was considered a good risk by the insurance world.

This afternoon a detailed statement is being prepared for the signatures of the officials. When this is completed the work of rebuilding the court room and the other offices will be started.

DAMAGE TO LAW LIBRARY

The Peterborough Law Association have come to a satisfactory adjustment with the insurance companies on the damage done to the law library at the court house fire.

Messrs. R. R. Hall, F. D. Kerr, E. L. Goolwill and Joe Wearing, members of the committee, were at the court house this morning looking over the changes to be made

CALM NIGHT.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Jan. 4. — The night was calm over the whole front, says today's official announcement.

LONDON, Jan. 4.--- (C.P) While peace talk is flying back and forth over the wires both belligerents are girding themselves for the greatest fighting yet. Talk from Berlin of war to the knife will be met by an allied counterstroke which will make even the unparralleled effort of the last thirty months seem feeble by comparsion.

AUTOISTS MUST BE PROVIDED WITH LICENSES

WHEN CHARGE IS MADE FOR CARRYING PASSENGERS IN OR OUT THE CITY.

Chief Thompson intends rigidly enforcing the city by-law regarding automobiles. Many owners of cars have been taking passengers to and from the city without taking out the necessary license, contrary to the provisions of the act, which says:—"Every person owning a livery stable or store containing three or a less number of automobiles, shall pay the sum of $10 and an addition sum of $2 for each additional automobile. It is absolutely necessary to take out a license before accepting a fee from a passenger.

All licenses date from Jan. 1, 1917.

Work at Trenton On Trent Canal Near an End

EASTERN SECTION WILL BE FINISHED THIS WINTER.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The eastern section of the Trent Valley Canal between Lake Simcoe and Lake Ontario at Trenton will be finished this winter, and it is expected will be opened for navigation early next summer. All that remains to be done is the building of a Grand Trunk railway bridge at Campbellford and a few lock gates at various points.

The western section between Lake Simcoe and the Georgian Bay is in progress of construction, but no serious effort will be made to finish it until after the war, in fact, one contract on this section has yet to be let.

BELGIANS ARE CROWDED INTO CATTLE TRUCK

RELEASED FROM CAMP IN DYING CONDITION.

HAVE TUBERCULOSIS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

THE HAGUE, Jan. 4. — The first report received directly from the Belgians deported to Germany who have been invalided from a camp at Soltau, Prussia, has been given to the Associated Press. These persons were returned from Germany because they were in almost a dying condition. Seventy of the Belgians were sent home in a crowded cattle truck attached to a freight train, the journey taking three days and nights, although usually made by an express in six hours. They arrived home in an emaciated condition, the greater number bearing evidences of having contracted tuberculosis.

WEALTHY GERMANS CONCEAL MONEY FEARING DEFEAT

Patriotic Germans Are Urged to Ferret Them Out.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A communication from the minister of the interior at Berlin, printed in all German newspapers, makes the surprising admission that many wealthy Germans are concealing their money, presumably against the eventuality of a German defeat.

"The dangers of such continued action are so great," says the minister, "that every patriotic person must now be asked to ferret out this evil procedure from house to house in the circle of his friends and acquaintances."

French Steamer of 600 Tons Sunk

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 4. — The French steamer Leon, of six hundred tons, has been torpedoed. The crew was saved.

SCHOOL BOARD INAUGURAL

TRUSTEES EASTWOOD AND MILLER MENTIONED FOR THE CHAIRMANSHIP.

The Board of Education for 1917 will hold its inaugural meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Board room.

The principal business will be the election of a chairman and the appointment of the standing committees for the year.

Colonel Miller and Vincent Eastwood are mentioned as probable nominees for the chairmanship.

HIS HONOR JUDGE RUDDY
As he appeared in the robes of an English barrister as counsel before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council at Whitehall, London, in a leading Canadian case on a real estate law.

Is Appointed County Judge

The congratulations of his professional associates and friends in Peterborough and throughout the Midland Counties will be extended to Mr. R. Ruddy, K.C., who has been appointed a County Court Judge. It is understood that he will be assigned to the bench of the County of Ontario, his native county. Judge Ruddy will probably reside at Whitby. His Honor is well known throughout the Midland Counties, having practised law at Millbrook before coming to Peterborough, where he has been a partner of Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P. The appointment will likely be gazetted this week.

RECRUITS FOR 247TH BATT. AND NUMEROUS PROSPECTS

PTE. WM. PALLIN
An Otonabee soldier with the 157th Battalion from Medicine Hat, now in England. He is with a machine gun section. Pte. Pallin is the son of Mr. T. H. Pallin of Jermyn, Otonabee.

Corporal H. L. Stewart of Millbrook is Wounded.

Corporal Hiram L. Stewart, Millbrook, is officially reported wounded on October 8th. His mother is Mrs. Eliza Stewart of Millbrook, who received the first intimation of the casualty on New Year's Day.

Capt. E. D. O'Flynn went to Bowmanville today and will be one of the speakers at a public reception tonight in honor of Sergt. D. M. Douglass and Corporal Alf Kershaw, two returned soldiers.

The canvass for new recruits for the 247th Batt. is progresing very favorably and many additions to the strength are expected as the result of the personal appeals.

The following recruits who were taken on the strength last month have been attested as of Jan. 1 and assigned to A Company:

Pte. James Adams, Fort William.
Pte. Michael Monghan, Coe Hill.
Pte. G. A. Pymer, Havelock.
Pte. Herbert Kelly, Peterborough.

F. H. D. Is "Socked."

Among the gifts of the season which fortunate ones have received, the executive officer of the Patriotic Fund desires to make acknowledgment of the receipt of two pairs of what we call socks—the very best. Beautifully knitted, comely in shape and color. Quite the very nicest. And the gift, so the card attached said, of a soldier's wife. The kind donor withheld the name, or thanks would have been tendered personally. It will be observed that the executive officer is now on the same footing as the boys on the lines. As the fashion of the early days in the town, set by the river drivers, of wearing their socks outside the pantaloons, is not now au fait, the only way to display the excellence of this gift would be to shorten the length of the legs of one's trousers, and that, so far fashion will not permit, likewise the weather. Any way, the socks will be put where they will do the most good. And again, thanks.

A FINE OF $200

WELLAND, Jan. 4.—George Loma, a foreigner, was fined $200 in the police court for keeping liquor in his house. The family had one boarder, which made the keeping of liquor illegal under the Ontario Temperance Act.

COLLECTION OF SERVICE CARDS IS SUCCESSFUI.

ONLY SEVEN CARDS NOT SIGNED ON TIME IN ONE DISTRICT.

REPORT TO OTTAWA

AS REFUSING TO SIGN, IF CARDS ARE NOT RETURNED.

Success is attending the collection of the National Service Cards. Only a very small percentage of men have not returned their cards when called for, and in one district collected the check shows only seven cards not returned.

It should be remembered that persons not returning cards in time will be reported to Ottawa as refusing to sign.

Friday the collection will be made of the west district, composed of Charlotte street, Park street and all west from Wolfe street to Smith street.

Citizens should assist the collectors by having their cards ready.

BATTLESHIP NOT SUNK

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The Ministry of Marine says the report that the French battleship Verite has been torpedoed by a submarine near Malta is absolutely false.

GREEK MINISTER QUITS

HAVRE, Jan. 4.—Spyridon Levidis, the Greek Minister to the Belgian Government, has resigned, the Minister not agreeing with King Constantine's policy.

GERMANY IN DREAD OF COMING STARVATION

Leads to Efforts to Bring About Peace.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A most careful study of the economic conditions in Germany reveals that beyond a doubt the peace offer was prompted chiefly by the reason that Germany is on the verge of starvation. This information is not based on the views of individuals— neutrals or others— whose impressions were gained in a visit to Germany and who were generally biased. In any case their views cannot be compared with actual evidence collected directly from German newspapers.

The information shows conclusively that the end of German endurance is approaching rapidly. Scarcely a day passes without its report of serious food riots by the underfed population. While the press is complaining bitterly of the starvation of the people, the authorities continue to reduce their allowances.

Below Living Standard

Medical experts say the present ration is far below the standard on which human being can live. Milk prices in Berlin generally have increased, with a coincident decrease in all butter fat allowances. How grave the question of the milk supply must be in countless German communities is illustrated by the conditions prevailing in Mayence, which in normal times requires a daily milk supply of 40,000 quarts. By order of the grand ducal government of Hesse the allowance has just been cut from 14,000 to 4,000 quarts a day.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1917

LADY TEACHERS' SALARIES.

ANY LADY TEACHER who begins her professional duties in this city starts with a salary of say $500 a year. If she is successful and is continued on the payroll, she receives an increase of $25 a year, so that after eight years of faithful service she is able to reach the maximum pay of $700 per year.

Is it any wonder, then, that the lady teachers in the city have united in a request for a more liberal schedule of compensation? Long years of preparation are required to fit them for their profession. The work is strenuous and exacting, even though the hours on actual duty are comparatively short and the summer vacation long. Any person who has had experience in teaching knows that this statement exactly describes the conditions. The modern teacher must work outside of school hours in order to keep up with the profession. It is no more just to them to say that they work only a few hours daily than it is to remark the same of the minister or to regard his labors as confined to only two or three hours every Sunday.

Peterborough, if inclined to boast, could lay claim to one of the most highly developed and successful school systems in the country, and this implies that the teaching staff is as nearly perfect as it is possible to secure. No boasting is required, as the official records and the testimony of inspectors establish the standing of both the Collegiate Institute and the Public Schools. This is one of the city's shining honors, but if it is true, as has been claimed, that the teachers are paid less than those in other cities of the same size, then this condition is a reproach which should be removed.

If the cost of living for a year, as the lady teachers are expected to live, is reckoned up, the figures will tend to convince the most skeptical that even the $700 maximum salary arrived at is no exorbitant compensation for the services required of our instructors. Besides this, in all justice, the lady teacher doing the same class of work and showing the same results as a man should receive the same rate of pay.

ALD. TAYLOR'S PLATFORM.

WHEN ALD.-ELECT W. H. TAYLOR of the South Ward asked the voters to support his candidacy for Council he made his appeal on broad grounds, ignoring all the petty issues with which candidates for municipal office usually concern themselves. He declared for cheaper power and a better street car service. The latter plank in his platform will appeal most of all to the masses, and great things are expected of Ald. Taylor in this respect during the next two years, as everyone who knows him is convinced that he will live up to his ante-election promises.

Whether the street car system is taken over by the city or remains longer under the present management, the service must be improved. A large section of Ald. Taylor's constituency is practically shut out from all benefits from this public utility, just as are those in the northwestern portion of the city. The transfer system now in vogue must be improved and the lines extended into sections that are at present not provided for.

Ashburnham has waited patiently for a street car service ever since the days of annexation. The matter cannot much longer be delayed, for everyone knows that the city will never attain its natural growth until the east siders are given their dues in this respct. Mayor Duffus recognises this, and a delegation will go to Ottawa to see what the Government is willing to do in the matter of a high bridge at Hunter street [illegible] some other point so that traffic between the sections of the city divided by the river can be fully developed.

There are matters of importance which are likely to claim the attention of the incoming Council. Something must be done to encourage the standard hotels and render it possible for them to continue in business. These places are necessary for the accommodation of the travelling public, and as such are entitled to every legal consideration that can be extended to them. They should not be required to compete with other places on anything like an unfair basis.

In one city block on a thoroughfare almost as much used as George street, there are four or five garages from which automobiles are constantly darting, to the danger of the pedestrians on the streets. It is understood that something will be done in this regard, that the alleys will be closed, and all autos required to enter and leave the garages from the rear.

THE FATE OF "JIMMIE" SIMPSON.

FOR THE SECOND TIME, "Jimmie" Simpson, the well-known socialist and advocate of co-operation, has been defeated in his ambition to get a seat on the Board of Control in Toronto. We expect to hear Mr. Simpson repeat his assertion that his downfall was accomplished by the votes of the plutocratic classes. No doubt that element of the electorate opposed the candidacy of Mr. Simpson, But what of the voters in his own station of life who probably outnumber the others by at least five to one?

Reforms are brought about slowly today just as at any time in the history of the world. The people appear shy of this principle of co-operation for which Mr. Simpson stands. The difficulty of eliminating the middleman is recognized. There is always a risk in upsetting long-established business conditions.

The co-operationists in this country always cite the case of England, in which country co-operative societies have beyond a doubt been largely successful, just as Mr. Alex. Murray claimed in a letter to The Review a few weeks ago. But in England the growth of these organizations has been slow. There have, too, been the natural percentage of mistakes, and it is a great many years since the time of Robert Owens. It was necessity that first called co-operation into existence, and nothing less will accomplish the same end in Canada.

If the pinch of necessity gets tighter in this country, the people in self-defence may be forced to form combinations. They could in this way save much energy and expense now going to waste and further perfect themselves in the art of efficiency.

Necessity often accomplishes wonders. It was necessity that, according to the fable, induced the rabbit to climb the tree to escape the pursuing dog. The feat was one never designed by nature, but the point is that it was achieved contrary to recognised laws and proved perfectly effective.

THE TROUBLE AT KITCHENER.

AN ATTEMPT to fix responsibility for the trouble at Kitchener upon the Dominion Government is the latest example of freak journalism. A contemporary says that political influence in sympathy with the Government at Ottawa had power to block the object of a loyal deputation visiting the Capital in the interests of the change in name.

The unvarnished facts in the case are that a deputation did visit Ottawa to ask the post office authorities to change the name of Berlin to Kitchener. They were told that they would have to lay their request before the Legislature, as that body alone had power to make the change. There was surely nothing irregular in such a course.

The same newspaper advocates the dangerous policy of governmental control of all trade, thus covertly standing for the kaiserdom which the present war is designed to overthrow. It would forbid the exportation of nickel to the United States, although the British Government has declared that such a course would curtail the supply of munitions for the Allies. It would put an embargo on the exportation of wheat and pulpwood, thus depriving the farmers and the settlers of the advantage of a foreign market and force them to accept the prices that would be offered by a pap-fed monopoly at home.

Governments always have plenty to answer for, but nothing in comparison with that of newspapers that persistently misrepresent their actions.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

National Service Week.

(Calgary Herald.)

It seems impossible, from the complete arrangements that have been made, for anyone throughout the length and breadth of Canada to remain in ignorance of the import of National Service Week. The director of the campaign has laid his plans well, and there should be the heartiest of co-operation in the effort he is making to bring this most important work to a successful completion.

The Perfect Newspaper.

(Vancouver World.)

We do not remember to have seen in church newspapers any marked superiority over the secular press. Their news has not, on the whole, been less biased. Their editorials have not been illumined with more of the clear light of truth than those of the profane writers. In a word, the conductors of these journals appear to be men like the rest of us and subject to the same limtiations. Alas! not until mankind is perfect shall we get the Per- like the rest of us and subject to the same limitations. editors, clerical and lay, must plod along their unconsidered paths, cheered only by the counsel and chastened by the correction of the critics who have their welfare so close at heart.

The Moose Jaw Election.

(Moose Jaw Daily News.)

The people of the province will await with interest the attitude of the government towards the complaint made by Mr. Chisholm's official agent against the irregular practices in the recent campaign. No administration sincerly desirous of enforcing the law can afford to wink at so frequent a violation of the Election Act, as was committed in the collection of the ballot boxes. If candidates are to be permitted to receive them then what assurance have the electors that their recorded votes will not be tampered with? Only through the personal delivery by deputies of the boxes to the returning officer can the identity of the same be assured.

Lynching Record in Southern States Falls off; Negroes and Whites Suffer

In view of the widespread discussion of the causes back of the migration of negroes to the North it is timely to consider the lynchings for the year just closed.

According to records kept by Monroe N. Work, head of the division of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, in 1916 there have been 54 lynchings. Of those lynched 50 were negroes and 4 were whites. This is 4 less negroes and 9 less whites than were put to death in 1915, when the record was 54 negroes and 13 whites. Included in the record are 3 women.

Fourteen, or more than one-fourth of the total lynchings, occurred in the State of Georgia. Of those put to death 42, or 77 per cent. of the total, were charged with offences other than rape. The charges for which whites were lynched were: Murder, 3; suspected of cutting a woman, 1 (this a Mexican).

The charges for which negroes were put to death were: Attempted rape, 9; killing officers of the law, 10; murder, 7; hog stealing and assisting another person to escape, 6; wounding officers of the law, 4; rape, 3; insult, 2.

For each of the following offences one person was put to death: Slapping boy, robbing store, brushing against girl on street, assisting his son, accused of rape, to escape; entering a house for robbery or some other purpose; defending her son, who in defence of mother killed a man; fatally wounding a man with whom he had quarrelled; speaking against a mob in act of putting a man to death; attacking a man and wife with club.

Lynchings occured in the following States: Alabama, 1. Arkansas, 4; Florida, 8; Georgia, 14; Kansas, 1; Kentucky, 2; Louisiana, 2; Mississippi, 1; Missouri, 1; North Carolina, 2; Oklahoma, 4. South Carolina, 2; Tennessee, 3; Texas, 9.

(Rochester Post-Express.)

When peace terms in the concrete are at last proposed, it seems sure that the significance of the loss of her African colonies to Germany will be shown to be one of the most influential motives in her absolute demands. Here the Entente Powers have a tremendous leverage in their insistent requirements of reparation for Germany's inroads upon European territory. There is strong evidence that this advantage is fully appreciated by the Entente.

Sugar and Sweetness.

Granulated sugar tastes sweet. Powder it in a mortar more fine, and it becomes less sweet.

Just owing to this fact it is very hard to convince people that fine sugar is not adulterated.

Put a grain of quinine, mixed, into a pound of granulated sugar, and the sweetness increases. Common salt increases the sweetness of cake and other foods as well. Cooks are aware of this and act accordingly.

Raw sugars, which contain very negligible quantities of the sweeter sirups taste much sweeter than granulated sugar. Yet their sugar contents are, as we have said, much less. This is due to the salts in the raw product.

The refiners' imitation stuff is even preferred to granulated for making apple pies, etc.

The sugar, unextracted, but used when we eat a potato or an apple, is really a sweet compound and in the case of a good apple may be tasted very distinctly as we eat. —[illegible]

They Knew He Couldn't

In a private sitting room at the hotel sat a party of merrymakers. Suddenly there came a knock at the door, and an attendant, entering in a great hurry, announced:

"The compliments of Mr. Blank, the author, who is in the next room and he says you are making so much noise that he cannot write."

"He can't write, eh?" said one of the brightest of the party. 'Why, tell him that everybody who has read his book knows that."

The Truth in Verse

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, at a country charitable fair, was entreated to furnish a letter for the post office. He seized a sheet and paper, and between its folds placed a one-dollar bank note. Then, turning to the first page, the genial doctor wrote the following verse:

Dear Lady, whosoe'er thou art,
Turn this poor page with trembling care;
But hush, oh, hush thy beating heart,
The one thou lovest will be there!

The page turned disclosed the attractive greenback. On the third page opposite the banknote, he wrote:

Fair lady, lift thine eye and tell
If this is not a truthful letter;
This is the one thou lovest well,
And naught (0) would make thee love it better.

To Him (or Her) Who Waits

Arnold Daily, who is perhaps the the best actor that was ever an office boy, once filled in a latter niche in the organization of the late Chas. Frohman. One June afternoon, Louise Closser Hale, whose stories are familiar to many readers, dropped into the office to see Mr. Frohman.

"He's not in," Daily informed her.

"Then I guess I'll wait," said Mrs. Hale.

"Just as you like," Daly replied.

The actress waited; then she waited some more. At five o'clock she said to Daly: "Can you give me any idea when Mr. Frohman is expected back?"

"About the first of September," replied Daly affably. "He's in London."

SOME TRAGIC FIGURES IN THE HISTORY OF TURBULENT MEXICO

THE recent Mexican practise of putting presidents in and out of office with dizzying rapidity has had, of course, its comic side, which appealed to writers of musical shows and short stories; but it has also had another phase, which spells tragedy for four women who once ruled in that turbulent land. When a President went out of office, it usually called for more than a mere change of rank for his wife. Too often it meant exile, or even widowhood.

Mexico has a record for unhappy rulers' wives. As they are named in the account, they include:

First, the mad Carlotta, Empress of Mexico; then Carmen Romero Rubio de Diaz, the widow of the "Iron Man" of Mexico; Mrs. Francisco I. Madero, the widow of the "little dreamer," and widowed by assassination, is the third, and the last of the quartet, Senora Emilia Aguila Huerta, widow of Gen. Victoriano Huerta, the "old Indian" dictator, who died a prisoner in the United States and left his widow an exile there.

Probably it would be difficult to say which of Mexico's four queens of sorrow is the most miserable. In the case of the poor Carlotta, insanity kindly cast a curtain over her mind. She, at least, may not be able to realise just how full is her cup of sorrow.

For more than fifty years now the mad Empress Carlotta has sat upon her throne of make-believe in the Chateau de Bouchard, a remote and forest-hidden palace near Brussels, where she was left unharmed when the Germans swept through Belgium.

The second member of the quartet of the queens of sorrow is Senora Carmen Romero Rubio de Diaz, the widow of Porfirio Diaz, dictator of Mexico for more than thirty years, and who died an exile in Paris last July.

To-day Senora Diaz is without a country. She is the former "Carmelita," beloved of all Mexico, and in whose honor the organization known as the "Daughters of Carmelita" was named.

The aged Diaz, yielding before the forces of Madero, put Victoriano Huerta, his trusted general, in charge of his military escort on the train that took him to Vera Cruz. When this train was attacked the old "Iron Man" and his general fought side by side. Huerta finally saw Diaz safe on board the ship which carried him and his "Carmelita" into exile.

A few years before the Diaz Government was overthrown a very close friend of General Porfirio Diaz, who calls himself "a soldier of the old guard," wrote the biography of the former Mexican dictator, in which he paid the following tribute to Senora Diaz:

"A factor which always has an important bearing upon the life-work and destinies of General Diaz is that of his noble and exemplary wife. Madame Diaz rules in the hearts of the Mexican people, who love and admire her for the noble example she has set and for her many quiet and unostentatious acts of real charity. The remarkable energy and endurance which characterize the life and work of General Diaz are to a great extent attributable to that perfect and harmonious home atmosphere and influence which Madame Diaz has known how to exercise."

Assassination made Senora Sara Percy Madero the third member of the queens of sorrow quartet. She is now an exile in New York.

She is the woman who has been called the Mexican Joan of Arc. She sold her own jewels to pay the soldiers who rose against Porfirio Diaz. She followed her husband tirelessly from camp to camp through the long campaigns, nursing the wounded, solacing the dying, holding up the hope of freedom to the fighters who were left.

Senora Madero is the woman who went to the foreign diplomats in the capital at the time when the Madero rule was threatened. She begged those at the embassies to save her husband, for she feared for his life. They smiled indulgently at her. They could not believe she was prompted by anything more than the baseless fears of an overwrought woman. We learn:

"They will surely kill my husband!" she cried. "You can stop them. Your Governments will not allow this thing to be. Save him!"

"Senora, they would not dare to commit violence," she was told, soothingly.

Then came the tragic ten days in February, 1913, when thousands were slain in the streets of the City of Mexico. Madero gave his defence into Huerta's hands. After frightful bloodshed, Huerta turned traitor, and Madero was imprisoned in the National Palace.

Within a few days Madero, while his frail wife was pleading on her knees for her husband's life, was shot "while trying to escape," all of which was according to the Mexican ley fuga, or law of flight.

Senora Madero is small and slight in stature. She does not look strong, and has a strained, startled look of questioning misery in her eyes.

Upon the death of Madero, Huerta seized the Mexican Presidency, but after a stormy career of less than two years he was forced to flee the country. He and all the members of his family managed to escape from Mexico to Spain, from which country they came to New York in May, 1915.

Huerta then purchased a home at Forest Hills, Long Island, but last July decided to establish his home in El Paso. Last June he was arrested on the Texas border on the charge of being involved in a conspiracy to violate the United States neutrality laws by planning a revolution in Mexico.

Huerta was imprisoned in Fort Bliss, near El Paso, and his wife hastened to his side. It was said that as a result of his arrest, Huerta aged twenty years within a few days and his iron constitution began to break. A fatal malady developed, and after a number of operations, he died last January, a prisoner in an alien country.

General Huerta's wife held his hand to the last. The windows of the death-chamber opened toward Mexico, and in his last moments of consciousness, Senora Huerta held her dying husband's head in her arms and turned his face so he could look off to the Mexican mountains and the land of his birth where he so recently ruled as dictator.

As the end came, the life companion of the "Old Indian" sat quietly. She shed no tears, for long ago her well of tears had gone dry. Like the stoic women of her land, she sat in silence. On that day did she recall, perhaps for the first time, the bitter verse of Dante, another famous exile:

"Thou shalt find out how salt to the taste is the bread of others, and how hard is the path of him who goes up and down others' stairs."

Officer—Is that soup ready, Jones?"

Officer's Servant—"No, sir, the stove went out, sir."

Officer—"Went out! Then why don't you light it again?"

Officer's Servant—"Cos it went out by the roof, sir."—London Opinion.

THE FUTURE OF POLAND

TEUTONIC POWERS MAKE A BID FOR HER SUPPORT.

GERMANY and Austria have united in an announcement that Poland is to be free, that is to say, that part of Poland which is under Russian sovereignty and has been overrun by the Teutonic armies. They propose that the ancient kingdom shall be in part restored, but they fail to promise that the Poles who are under the German heel and the Poles who acknowledge the Austrian yoke shall be joined to their Russian kin. The purpose of this announcement is obvious. The Germans hope that the millions of Russian Poles now temporarily under German authority will spring to arms to win the independence which they have so long struggled for; but the significance of the announcement, in the opinion of The New York Tribune, is that Germany and Austria have abandoned all hope of making a separate peace with Russia. Ever since the beginning of the war the Teuton statesmen have had the idea that diplomacy might rupture the Allies' league, and that one or the other might be detached. In the hope that Russia might be disaffected, no announcement concerning the future of Russian Poland was made for more than a year after it had been conquered. Germany hoped to use this great territory, one-quarter as large almost as the German Empire, as a bait to Russia. Now she has concluded that it is useless to attempt to deal with Russia, and so she burns her bridges behind her.

The German offer is also a belated effort to equal the bid of the Czar for Polish support. Early in the war he announced that the restrictive and even oppressive laws that affected Russian Poland would be abolished, and expressed the conviction that after the struggle all Poles—Russian, German, and Austrian—might be reunited in one kingdom, under Russian protection. This offer went further than the latest bid, for it was a renunciation on the part of Russia of Russian Poland, with a population of 12,000,000. In Austria and Germany there are probably 9,000,000 Poles. If one can imagine Germany victorious, and keeping her word by restoring to nationhood twelve million Poles, is it conceivable that this new kingdom would not draw to itself or attempt to draw to itself the other nine million brothers living under the German and Austrian flags?

In the certain event of a defeat for the Central Powers Russia and the other Allies would have the German precedent for making Poland independent. Germany having offered independence to Russia Poles, Russia can with perfect propriety offer independence to the German Poles. If Russia lost her Polish population it would amount to no more than the lopping off of a finger-joint. If Germany is to lose her Polish population the operation will more closely resemble the excision of a part of her neck. The Poles are extraneous to Russia. They are a loose end. In Germany Poles and Germans are inextricably mixed in East Prussia, West Prussia, and Posen. If these districts are to be incorporated in the Kingdom of Poland a wall will be erected anew between East Prussia and the rest of Germany which Frederick the Great broke down. Bismarck said he would rather lose Westphalia than the Polish provinces.

The German bid for Polish support does not specify, though it implies, that the German Emperor would expect some sort of overlordship of the new kingdom. The inference is that the Poles would prefer the Germans to the Russians as overlords. The Poles have had their experience of both Russia and Germany, and there is little doubt that they would prefer the Russian knout to the Prussian scorpion. Russia has been harsh with her Polish population. But Germany has been calculatingly brutal. She has carried on her cruel programme with Prussian thoroughness. Both Russia and Germany have tried to blot out from the mind of the Poles the memory of former independence, and so a Pole might reasonably hate them both. But in Russia the Poles were prospering before the war, and were developing a middle class, something that Poland needed if its struggle for independence was to succeed.

Germany has made most systematic efforts to crush the national spirit out of German Poland. In addition to copying every repressive act that Russia ever thought of, she has tried to dilute Polish sentiment by settling among the Poles 100,000 Prussians, and by rewarding apostate Poles with high office and emolument. The Poles could only retort with passive resistance. They used the boycott effectively, and by means of countless secret societies have been able to meet every German attack upon their ideal of independence and nationality. Nobody who knows the history of Poland will attempt to represent the Poles as a nation composed of such heroes as Thaddeus of Warsaw. When they had their day of power they were less tolerant than the Russians or even the Germans. No country owes them anything; whatever is granted them will be granted with the sole view of advantage to the benefactor.

CENTURY OLD DISPUTE.

Where Are the Bones of Christopher Columbus?

The discussion has been revived, if, indeed, it has ever subsided within the century, as to the burial place of Christopher Columbus. This is a period of interest in relics, sites, mementoes and memorials having historic significance, and wherever one mentions the grave or the bones of Columbus historians and antiquarians resume the century-old dispute. It is a controversy that has not been settled, and the prospect that it ever will be settled is not encouraging to those who would have the bones of the great adventurer and discoverer remain at rest in one place. Spain claims to possess the remains of the celebrated explorer in the city of Seville. Dominicans are usually sure that the remains of the discoverer of America are in their possession.

Columbus died and was buried at Valladolid, Spain, in 1506. That is a fact which has passed beyond the region of dispute. It is related by adequate authority that seven years after his death his bones were moved to Seville, where the bones of his son Diego were also laid. About thirty years later both bodies were exhumed and taken oversea to Santo Domingo, where they were buried in the cathedral. The bodies reposed there undisturbed until 1588, when the English under Drake sacked the city, and the residents fearing that the tomb might be desecrated, destroyed all evidence of it and hid the bones in some spot in the cathedral that later could not be found. This is the way the narrative, which is accepted as history, runs.

It is further related that in 1795, when Santo Domingo was ceded to France, certain remains found in a vault of the cathedral were taken to Havana, Cuba, and there interred as the bones of Columbus. It was these bones which at the close of the Spanish-American war in 1898 were exhumed by Spanish authorities and removed to Seville, where they now rest. Soon after this certain Dominicans discovered near the altar at the cathedral a leaden casket containing bones, a bullet and a silver plate on which was an inscription to the effect that the bones which, at the close of the Spanish-American war, were taken to Cuba, were those of the son of Columbus. The weight of opinion seems to be that the bones of Columbus rest in the cathedral in Santo Domingo, and that the bones removed by the Spanish to Havana in 1795 were the remains of Columbus' son, Diego.

Value of Education.

"Every day spent in school the children earn $9."

This statement was made by Wisconsin's state superintendent, who bases his estimate on the official records of the bureau of education at Washington. Here is what he offers as proof of the statement:

"Uneducated laborers earn on the average $500 a year for forty years, a total of $20,000.

"High school graduates earn on an average $1,000 a year for forty years, a total of $40,000.

"This education requires twelve years of school of 180 days each, a total of 2,160 days. If 2,160 days at school add $20,000 to the income for life, then each day at school adds $9.02.

"Forceful as this summarization of earnings is," said the superintendent, "it tells but one side of the story—the money side. Back of this can be seen improved standards of living, more intelligent and progressive communities and a stronger national life."—Chicago Herald.

Icy Cold Winters.

In the winter of 1780 New York harbor was frozen over and teams passed from New York to Staten Island. New York bay was frozen over in the latter part of January, 1821, and sleighs passed over the Hudson river from Cortlandt street to Jersey City. On Feb. 3, 1844, Long Island sound was frozen over a few miles above New York. On Jan. 20, 1852, the East river was frozen over, and hundreds passed over both ways between Brooklyn and New York. On Feb. 10 and 11, 1856, the East river was frozen over so that the people passed over freely. On Jan. 23, 1867, the East river was bridged over with ice, and 5,000 persons passed over. On Feb. 12, 1875, the East river was completely bridged over for over three and one-half hours. During the blizzard of March 12, 1888, the East river was frozen over so completely for several hours that hundreds passed over both ways.—Magazine of American History.

CANALS IN THE CZAR'S COUNTRY

DEVELOPMENT OF WATERWAYS IN RUSSIAN EMPIRE.

The extraordinary thing about the waterways of Russia, says Mr. F. A. Douglas, in Chambers' Journal, is that, although it has the largest and longest rivers in Europe, they flow only into the smaller and mostly inland seas, and that therefore the advantage of their great carrying power is very considerably neutralized and reduced. They rise in the great Russian central plain, and flow north, north-west, and south to different seas; and in order that these seas may be connected, canals have to be constructed between the diverging rivers. Canalization, therefore, is a great national work in Russia, and has been developed by the people with no little energy and perseverance.

Peter the Great was the first to perceive the necessity of canals. In 1698 he engaged Captain John Perry, an English hydraulic engineer, to construct a canal between the Don and the Volga. Singularly enough, the canal had already been begun by a German called Breckell, who, before he had proceeded very far, ran away. Unfortunately this canal was not finished. At Peter's death the work was allowed to drop, and there is now no trace of it. What Peter the Great did manage to do was to connect the Neva and the Volga, and this ensures a waterway from the Baltic to the Caspian Sea. At first a small canal between the Isna and Khlina was constructed, but there remained the difficulty of navigating Lake Ladoga. Peter had special lighters with keels made, but transhipment proved troublesome, and he ended in constructing a canal through the swamps. This, also, he did not see completed before his death, but it was completed afterwards, and is commercially useful to this day. Nevertheless, it seems a pity that the enterprising Czar did not manage to sail from Petrograd to Moscow, as he had planned to do. Dreamers are the originators of the world, but they do not always see their dreams come true.

Russian rivers all partake of the same characteristics. They have many tributaries, and they pursue a tortuous, serpentine, and sluggish course. Geologists says that old rivers swing to and fro, and do not flow straight; so the Russian rivers must all be very old. They are sluggish because they rise in the great central plain of Russia, and there is nothing to give them impetus. The Dnieper is the only river that has rapids and waterfalls.

One curious feature of the Russian rivers is that they have annual floods; not spasmodic, unexpected floods, but floods regular as clock work, and beneficial in their operation. They come in the spring when the snows melt. Then the rivers overflow their banks, and even the lesser ones become great sheets of water. These floods stimulate navigation, and irrigate and improve the soil.

The majority of Russian canals were constructed in the earlier part of the nineteenth century, and the most interesting section of canals to us at present is that which connects the rivers in the west. There are three large canals there: the Beresina or Berezinski Canal, sixty-six miles long, which connects the Western Dwina and Dnieper; the Oghinsk, sixty-seven miles long, which connects the Dnieper and the Niemen; and the Dnieper-Boug Canal, one hundred and twenty-seven miles long, which unites the Dnieper with the Vistula. By this last you can sail through Russia right to Danzig; by the Oghinsk you can sail to Konigsberg, and by the Beresina from the Black Sea to Riga.

The worst of the Beresina is that it can only carry small ships. Before the war a great scheme was on hand to construct a new and great canal from the Black Sea to the Baltic, by which inland commerce could have been immensely increased, and which, had it been completed before the war, would have been of very great strategic importance.

The sources of the Western Dwina and the Dnieper do not lie very far apart. Both rivers rise in the lakes and marshes of the Waldai Plateau. Peter the Great and Catherine both perceived how important it would be to connect these rivers, but they had already too many great schemes on hand, and not enough money to carry them out. Belgian and American capitalists later on saw the value of the scheme, and approached the Russian Government with a plan. A Belgian, Gustave Dufosse, published a pamphlet setting forth its advantages. Later on the Russian Admiralty planned a canal for the navigation of its ships, but had not money enough to construct it. It was calculated that it would cost nine hundred million roubles. The Kiel Canal, as completed in 1895, cost first eight millions, and later, when it was deepened, eleven million pounds more.

Trust of a Bird.

A farmer in the neighborhood where I reside was crossing one of his fields one day when he was suddenly arrested by a skylark fluttering down upon him and adhering to his person in the most affectionate way. While he was wondering at its intentions a sparrow hawk, which had evidently been in close pursuit, swooped past. Instantly taking in the situation, he stood perfectly still for nearly five minutes, while the lark nestled contentedly between his feet. Then, seeming to recognize that all danger was over, it left him, rose into the air and began to sing in its loudest and most jubilant tones. A bird whose love of freedom and aloofness from human contact are proverbial, it seemed to have known with unerring instinct where to find a protector in its extremity.—London Standard.

NEW BRITISH PREMIER MAN OF COURAGE AND LOVER OF ACTION

FROM the first announcement of the British Cabinet crisis the figure which has stood most illuminated by it was that of Mr. Lloyd George, who has just formed his unique war cabinet. He has been the centre of an Empire-wide attention. Mr. Lloyd George, at fifty-three, exercises to-day in the wider arena of international politics the same compelling magnetism as he has so long had over his own Welsh nation. For he is the embodiment and the product of the newer Welsh movement of a nationalism which shall recognize in Europe the inalienable right of the smaller nations to live and to fulfill their own destiny unmolested so long as they are loyal to the community and the spirit of civilization.

Lloyd George was first heard of in Parliament for his irrepressible delight in being a pro-Boer when that was the blackest sin that could be ascribed to a British patriot. It would be overdrawing the picture to paint him as foreseeing the present fine stand of those South African Boers. If there is one thing in which Lloyd George erred it was in a flat inability to foresee that war in Europe had been inevitable for ten years past. Yet when it came, that overwhelming avalanche of August, 1914, he was among the quickest to realise its fearful vastness, and, recovering from the recoil with an imagination and a projection into the future which only a Celt could accomplish, he set about the concentration of British strength. He is credited with having been the one to suggest that Kitchener be called back from his Egyptian voyage. All know that was the first right thing in the maze of mistakes and confusion.

DAIVID LLOYD GEORGE.

The period of his Cabinet work before the war was one stroke of luck after another. He was in Parliament at twenty-seven, almost as early as Pitt. That had come about in a combination of events which can never be repeated in Wales. A Bethesda quarryman had died. He was a Nonconformist, and the tactless little vicar of the parish had refused him burial in the consecrated part of the Church of England graveyard, the only one available. Lloyd George headed the Bethesda quarrymen, strong-limbed men, whose pastime was to fight with the naked knuckle on the Saturday and worship God with improved fervor for it on the Sunday. They rose in revolt, and taking the law and the canons into their own hands removed the coffin and buried it again in consecrated ground by the side of the dead man's daughter. The exhumation caused a great stir in Wales. The little-minded Vicar brought an action for trespass. Lloyd George fought the legal battle and won; he fought it with still more gusto on appeal, and secured at last the right of Welsh Nonconformists to be buried, with their own ritual, in what is public property. And Lloyd George became M.P. for Carnarvon Boroughs, a constituency which literally worships him.

The next outstanding incident in a meteoric career was the settlement of the threatened railway strike of 1906 when he was President of the Board of Trade. Mr. George—for he is not a "hyphenated" — was the first Welshman to enter the British Cabinet, his ingress being a striking tribute to the then consolidating Welsh party, numbering thirty Liberals out of thirty-four Welsh M. P.'s.

In turn came the old-age pension scheme, which brought the blessing of thousands on his head. The Chancellorship of the Exchequer, with a deficit of over £15,000,000 to meet, was a test. Mr. Lloyd George rose to meet it worthily.

The present war brought out again the strong and virile in Mr. Lloyd George. He alone has had the courage to tell the people fully what the sacrifices must be. He it was who first shocked us by saying that more "ammunition was used at the one battle of Neuve Chapelle than was consumed in the whole Boer war." He told first of all the demand of conscription in Britain.

Where Blacking Gets Its Odor.

Shoeblacking, says the Scientific American, owes its peculiar aromatic odor, faintly suggestive of the deep woods, where spruce or hemlock needles pad the ground, to an oil which is manufactured from these same kinds of needles. The greater part of this oil is distilled by small farmers in New England during the winter.

Getting On.

"How did you come to buy that second-hand table?" exclaimed Mrs. Climber's husband. "We don't need it."

"That shows how much you know," replied his wife. "In one of the drawers I found a bunch of the most select visiting cards in the city. They will look lovely in our hall."

Drink Water to Avoid Sickness Says Authority

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Daily Keeps the Doctor Away.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone whether ailing, sick or well should each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels, the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

A REVIEW OF 1916 WEATHER

YEAR WAS NOTED FOR THE GREAT RAINFALL OF EARLY SPRING.

As the year 1916 has now passed into history, we give a few facts and figures regarding the weather conditions of the year, compiled from the register of the local weather observer.

The year was chiefly noted for the great rainfall of the early spring months, and more particularly in May and June, which had the effect of seriously interfering with the seeding of crops in this section at least. We give in this table the total amount for each month of the year, as recorded for Peterborough:

January	2.98
February	1.97
March	2.76
April	2.70
May	3.78
June	3.95
July	2.09
August	1.29
September	2.21
October	3.63
November	2.91
December	1.70
Total for year 1916	31.97

This total is almost exactly the yearly average for this city. The month of June had 17 days' rain, with a total for the month of almost four inches.

There were no very low readings of the thermometer during the year, the lowest being 18 degrees below zero on February 14 and 21.

High temperatures were unusually large in number, July alone providing ten days with 90 degrees and over in the shade. The last half of July was unusually hot. The highest temperature during the whole summer, however, was on August 21 and 22, 99 degrees being officially registered on both of these days.

The first robins were heard (and seen) on March 28. This date also saw the finish of the sleighing. The grass began to take on its greenish hue on April 29. The maples were in full leaf by May 25—a few days later than usual. The last freezing temperature in spring was April 19; the first in the fall Sept. 30. —W. P.

EGYPT'S PAPER SUPPLY

Can Land of Pharaohs Revive Once Flourishing Art?

Egypt once kept the greater part of Europe supplied with paper. At first, it was made of the cellular pith of the papyrus laid in stripe side by side and a further layer laid above the first crosswise; the whole was then damped with Nile water and pressed. Later the Arabs made paper from rags, and among other names given to it was "charta cuttunea," because it had a cottony appearance, which gave rise to the idea that at one time paper pulp was made here from cotton wool. So much paper was made and exported from Alexandria at one time that the Emperor Hadrian was particularly impressed when he visited the city with the great and flourishing trade in this article. It is strange to reflect that after having been, as it were, the home of paper, Egypt is to-day absolutely depedent on her imports of this material. The question naturally arises, Is it possible for Egypt once more to make herself at least partially independent in this direction?

MAN TAUGHT BY BIRDS

Origin of Basket-making Explained by Early Pottery

There has recently been unearthed near Thebes, in Egypt, what is probably the earliest specimen of pottery extant. It is a small round bowl, in shape, size and exterior markings, an exact replica of a thrush's nest, with the outer network removed. This discovery sets at rest the vexed question as to whence man learned the art of basket-making. He learned it from a bird's nest. The clay lined home of the mother thrush and her family suggested the clay lined basket which held water and also served for cooking.

The basket work, when burned off left a baked clay pot, the outside of which was decorated with an incised basket pattern. Gradually this pattern gave place to painted representations of the original. All archaeologists know how predominant this basket decoration is in early pottery in Egypt, Chaldea, Crete and elsewhere. And now we know the source whence it came.

DR. THOMPSON IS PROGRESSING

OMEMEE FRIENDS HOPING FOR HIS SPEEDY RECOVERY.

(Special Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Jan. 4.— Mr. Ross Wilde, of the Bank of Toronto staff here, spent New Year's at Havelock.

Miss Blanch Elliott of Toronto, who has been recuperating in Omemee after a severe illness, has returned to her duties at the Dead Letter Office, Toronto.

Mrs. Hodgetts and son Birnie are visiting in Collingwood.

Mr. Wm. Ivory, Toronto, who at one time lived here, renewed old acquaintances on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. McNeely were in Omemee on Friday attending the funeral of the late Samuel English.

The funeral of the late Clifford Shaw, aged ten years, was held from the Junction on Saturday to Emily cemetery, Omemee. The citizens sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Shaw in their great loss.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Peters returned home after a very pleasant visit at Colborne.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Skuce, Toronto, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. Skuce.

Sir John and Lady Eaton and son, John David, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McCrea and baby, spent the New Year's holidays with Lady Eaton's mother, Mrs. McCrea.

We are pleased to report Dr. Thompson as progressing favorably, though in a very weakened condition. The doctor has now been confined to his bed for a month, and under the skilful treatment of Dr. Cameron, assisted by Nurses Coulter and Mitchell, we trust will soon have gained a complete recovery.

Mrs. Jennie Rehill and Miss Lulu Balfour of Lindsay are the guests of Miss Ola Earle.

Miss Davidson of Montreal is visiting her aunt, Miss M. Davidson.

George Burnside, husband of the late Mabel McCaffrey, died in Wellesley Hospital, Toronto, after a lingering illness. Mr. Burnside was well known in the village and his death came as a great shock to his many friends.

The funeral of the late Samuel English was held from Christ Church on Friday and was largely attended. L. O. L. No. 114 had charge of the funeral.

Lance-Corp. Godfrey of the 248th Bn., Toronto, and Mrs. Godfrey spent New Year's with Mr. and Mrs. W. Evans.

Inspector Elliott of Toronto visited his parents the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. English and son of Peterborough visited Omemee on New Year's Day.

Mr. Chas. McCaffrey, assistant manager of the hydro-electric at Cobalt, visited Omemee friends during the past week.

Mr. Archie English of Peterborough, visited his grandmother, Mrs. Geo. English, over New Year's.

Mrs. McCrea accompanied her daughter, Lady Eaton, to Toronto on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Wm. Shaw of Millbrook came to Omemee on Monday to vote for the hydro bylaw.

Mrs. Hugh Murray visited her mother, Mrs. Lamb, in Peterborough, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Sheppard and daughter visited Mrs. Clarke during the New Year holiday.

Great excitement prevailed in our little village on New Year's Day, when the Hydro bylaw was voted on, the result being: for 111, against 15. Not long ago at a public meeting in the village one of the speakers predicted that in a few years Omemee would be an important city with Lindsay, Peterborough, Millbrook and Downeyville as suburbs. The vote on Hydro is the first chance our citizens have had to really boost the village. Now watch us grow.

The election for reeve and councillors in the village of Omemee was as follows: Reeve, T. J. Parsons, by acclamation. Councillors: Messrs. H. Lamb, R. Boyd, Dr. Howden and D. Graham.

The election for reeve and councillors in Emily resulted as follows: Robt. Wilson, reeve. Councillors: S. Carew, W. Lowes, W. Herlihy and M. Carrol.

IS YOUR CELLAR WELL?

Many Pertinent Questions For The Modern Housewife

A woman asks: Many laundries are in the cellar. How are your tubs? clean and dry after the work is done, or is there a faucet which continually leaks, or perhaps a small leak under one tub that keeps the floor wet? This sometimes goes on for months before the laundress thinks to speak about it. Possibly you do not see this very important person for months at a time! Is your wringer in good order, the baskets clean, the stove and irons free from rust? It seems simple enough to keep a small laundry clean, because the washing is done there and things could hardly help being clean. But I want to tell you that the laundry is very often inexcusably dirty.

Recently I went through several houses with a friend who was moving into a suburb. They were most attractive houses to look at from outside; the upper parts were clean and in good order. The mistress and maids usually stayed upstairs complacently while the real estate agent showed us through.

I did not wonder the mistress stayed upstairs; I think she would have blushed to have us see what we saw —to see it herself, for that matter!

One laundry was so dirty that I could not imagine really clean clothes ever coming out of it. The stove and irons were rusty, the wringer and clothes basket broken, the small closet, for ironing board, starch, soap, etc., just as dirty as the rest, and the expensive electric iron, provided to lighten labor, had been left in the open window, and was so rusty that it was useless. I thought this laundry and cells must be an exception, but when I saw several others in the same condition, I thought it time for me to write something to make housewives think.

Mr. Fred Cunningham spent the holiday with his parents.

Miss Olive McQuade, of Toronto public school staff, is visiting her mother here.

Miss Myrtle Clement of Lindsay is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Fred Clement, in Omemee.

Mr. Jack Deyell, editor of the Lindsay Warder, visited his parents on New Year's.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

FOWLER
INDIVDUALITY

The exceptional care Dr. Fowler takes in making his "PEBLO" Glasses fit the contour of the face, centering the lenses over the pupil of the eyes, setting them out sufficiently far to clear the eyelashes, and otherwise making them exactly suit the face on which they are to be worn, is the reason why Fowler's "PEBLO" Glasses have that distinctly individual appearance. Every pair is made for the wearer, and the wearer only.

The Late Cecil Clifford Shaw.

The death of C. C. Shaw, son of Mr. Wm. Shaw, took place Thursday after an illness of over two years. He was a bright boy of ten years and had made many warm friends since coming to Millbrook. He was a member of the Methodist Sunday school. The funeral to Emily cemetery on Saturday was largely attended. Services at the house were conducted by the Rev. W. H. Higgs and at Omemee by Rev. J. W. Down. The bearers were six of his playmates, R. Doak, S. Fisher, M. Gray, L. Byam, W. McIvor and A. Lord. Besides his parents, three brothers, Milton, Arthur and Stanley, and four sisters, Eva, Pearl, Reta and Helen, are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate son and brother.

Mr. W. D. Lee will preach from the following subjects next Sunday —Morning, The Mosaic Benediction; Evening, Pay What Thou Owest. At Garden Hill: The Orders of the Day. Anniversary services of Grace Church wil be held on the 14th inst. morning and evening, conducted by Rev. Prof. Law, D.D., Knox College, Toronto.

St. Thomas' Church S. S. entertainment held in the school room on Dec. 29, was well attended. The story of Robinson Crusoe illustrated by limelight views was ably given by Rev. A. E. E. Westmacott. Recitations by Frances Turner and James Dean and songs by Henry Gray were wel rendered. The song "Eight Little Mothers" by eight little girls was also greatly appreciated as were the dialogues, "The Making of Canada's Flag" and "The Key of Jack Canuck's Treasure House." After the program the prizes were distributed. A Christmas tree was also an interesting feature of the entertainment.

The entertainment given by the Red Cross in the town hall here on Tuesday, Dec. 19, was well attended and the program was very interesting. Mr. Hall's lecture "The World of the Telephone," illustrated by limelight views, proved a delightful treat. Miss Ella Elson sang a solo in good voice, and the violin selections by Mr. Hall were much enjoyed. The net receipts of the entertainment were $13.90. The ladies are to be congratulated on furnishing such a pleasing program.

The Millbrook Methodist Sunday school held its anniversary services on Sunday last and the annual concert on New Year's night. Rev. Chas. E. Cragg, B.D., of Grace Church, Napanee, conducted the services morning and evening and his eloquent discourses were listened to with close attention by very large congregations. During the afternoon sesion, Mr. Cragg addressed the Sunday School, as also did Rev. W. H. Higgs. Prizes were given to those who were regular attendants throughout the year and for memorizing Scripture verses. Special music by the choir and a solo by Miss Colwell aded interest to the specially attractive services. The S. S. orchestra, unler the leadership of Mr. G. E. Burnham, rendered appropriate music for the afternoon service. The concert on Monday evening was a grand success, both as to program and financially. The little tots were well trained and their motion songs were well given. Great credit is due Masters Jack Bryan, Alfred Higgs, Lawrence Winslow, Ernest Burnham and Miss Jean Burnham for their splendidly rendered songs, recitations and dialogues. Prof. J. Staples and Mr. Williams sang several solos and also a duet, and their singing was a real treat. Miss Tuite, elocutionist, gave several selections, which were greatly enjoyed by the audience. Mr. F. Fallis was chairman. The proceeds amounted to $100.

On Monday evening next Rev. Joseph Wilks will tell the story of his experiences in mission work in Africa. The league has been looking forward to hearing Mr. Wilks on this subject for some time, and extends a hearty invitation to all who are interested to be present next Monday evening at 7.45.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 545 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

A rich, hot cup of INSTANT POSTUM with sugar and cream is a most delicious beverage.

Try it!—particularly if you are one of those with whom tea or coffee disagrees.

A dozen years ago POSTUM drinkers were comparatively few. Today, this table drink is served on railway trains, on ocean steamers, at leading hotels and restaurants, and millions use POSTUM instead of tea or coffee at home.

POSTUM has become popular because it is popular to be healthy.

Huns' Modest Ambition.

At a recent sitting of the German Reichstag the Conservative member, Count Westarp, said:

"From the beginning of May my friends and I have represented that the conquest of England must be the main aim of the war.

"We also agree with what the Imperial chancellor said about this—that all available weapons must be employed against England.

"We think of our navy and our zeppelins with deep admiration and gratitude.

"We rejoice at the attacks by our airships because they show the English that war is no sport, but will be felt on their own body."

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

Hay was plentiful on the market all week and the demand was equally good. The ruling price for good timothy was $11, while the mixed hay sold at $10.

There were many enquiries for straw, and what few loads were in sold at $5.00.

Quite a few loads of wood were sold at what the buyers thought were very high prices.

A few loads of cattle were shipped to Toronto and Montreal, and the drovers were lucky in striking good markets, as prices were high on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Hogs are selling at $12 for selects.

The egg and butter market is easier. The outside market reports show an increase in receipts of eggs from country points. The local market price is 50c to 55c.

The fowl market is very weak on all classes after the holiday.

The Peterborough Poultry Association will hold their annual show next Wednesday and Thursday. Many good exhibits of fowl are promised for the occasion.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, June 3.—The horse trade in Toronto has been very quiet for the last two weeks, and during Christmas week the inactivity was particularly marked. Dealers state that they expected a period of lifelessness around Christmas. There were several French government inspections at the Repository last week, but only about 50 remounts were secured. The inspections will continue this week, and better results are expected when the trade livens up. The carlot trade has also been quiet, but there are a number of Westerners in Toronto, so that indications are that the trade with the West will boom within a very short time. Local trade is inactive.

It is the men who resolutely puts his hand to the grindstone that keeps the other fellow's nose to it.

DUMMER LOSES TWO RESIDENTS

LATE JAMES HANNON HAD LIVED IN TOWNSHIP FOR 80 YEARS.

(Special Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, Jan. 3.—A sad death occurred in Dummer on Thursday of last week, when Mr. R. S. Ivey succumbed to Bright's disease. Mr. Ivey, who moved from Norwood last March to the farm at Stoney Lake which he purchased from Mr. W. Robb, had ben ill for some time and was for a few weeks under the doctor's care at Mr. W. Spence's home here. Being somewhat recovered, he was removed to his home about two weeks ago and was apparently progressing favorably. The evening of his death he showed no signs of an alarming nature, but feeling sleepy he lay down and sank into a sleep which proved to be his last. Deceased was in his 51st year and was highly respected by all who knew him. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow and two sons and one daughter.

The funeral took place on Sunday, and the Norwood Lodge of Odd Fellows took charge, Mr. Ivey being a member of Campbellford Lodge. The remains were taken to the Methodist Church, where a funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. M. Irwin, B.A., pastor, after which they were interred in Norwood Cemetery.

On Wednesday last death entered the home of Mr. Jas Hannon, Dummer, and removed one who for over eighty years made the township of Dummer his home. The late Michael Hannon, well known and highly respected, passed to his reward after a lengthly illness from apoplexy. The funeral on Saturday to the Norwood Cemetery was largely attended.

On Thursday morning of last week the home of Mrs. F. B. Garlick was saddened by the death to her father, Mr. H. S. Brimfield, in his 74th year. Deceased was a native of England and came to Canada about twelve years ago and has since resided with his son-in-law, Mr. Garlick. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon to Norwood Cemetery. The sympathy of the entire neighborhood is extended to Mrs. Brimfield and also to Mrs. Garlick, whose husband has gone overseas to do his bit for the Empire.

Prof. and Mrs. H. E. Ford and children of Toronto spent the holiday at the home of the former's father, Dr. S. P. Ford.

Rev. and Mrs. G. E. Glover of Toronto spent the holidays at the home of Mrs. Glover's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Andrews.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Raddon of Peterborough have been visiting at the home of Mr. Raddon's father, Peterborough Street.

Mr. E. Leigh of the Bank of Toronto, Havelock, spent Sunday and Monday with his sister, Mrs. (Rev.) B. Eyre, Freelton, Ont.

Rev. A. M. Irwin, B.A., B.D., attended the Methodist Young Men's Conference in Lindsay last week. Mr. Irwin was one of the speakers.

Miss H. McLachlan of the Toronto Public School staff, has returned after spending the holiday with her sister, Peterborough Street.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Dancey of Toronto returned to their home after spending Christmas with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Dancey.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. C. Johnson on Thursday, Jan. 4, at 2.30.

Miss L. Turner visited Campbellford during the past week.

Famous Oarsmen Killed.

The roll of honor of the winners of the Diamond Sculls at Henley, the proudest trophy of amateur single-sculling, grows with the progress of the war. Last week's casualty lists included the name of Capt. Frederick Septimus Kelly, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, killed in action. Within the last few weeks the names of the wiry A. T. Blackstaffe, of the Vesta, and Giuseppe Singaglia, the giant Italian sculler, were also reported. Kelly was an Australian, but had done practically all his rowing in England for Oxford and the Leanders. He won the Diamonds in 1903 and 1905, but was beaten in 1904 by Lieut. Lou Scholes, of the 180th Sportsmen's Battalion, then representing the Toronto Rowing Club. They met in the semi-finals, and Kelly was so badly done up in the struggle that he had to give up about 50 yards from the finish, and did not complete the course. Lieut. Scholes had beaten D. C. Stuart, of Cambridge, and Wells of Balliol, earlier in the week, and in the final he won from A. H. Cloutte, of the Thames Rowing Club, though he had to beat the Henley course record before he disposed of Cloutte. Kelly, who also won the Wingfield Sculls over the full Thames course, was a fine sweep oarsman, as well as a sculler, and was in the winning Grand crew of the Leanders on several occasions. He and Scholes were of exactly the same weight the day they met—170 pounds. In civil life Kelly's profession was one that would hardly be associated with the idea of an oarsman, as he was a piano virtuoso.

Ontario Has First Place.

A despatch from Ottawa states that three hundred men have been secured throughout Canada for the Royal Navy since recruiting for the senior service began a few weeks ago. Figures obtained at the Toronto headquarters of the Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve show that half of that number have been secured in Ontario and a fourth of them from the city of Toronto itself. Up to date one hundred and fifty-two men have been attested for service in the navy at the recruiting office on Bay street, Toronto, under the new scheme. One hundred and twenty-three of them have been sent forward to Halifax to join their ships, and twenty-five are now on leave of absence before proceeding to the port of embarkation. Only seven of the men examined and sworn in here have failed to pass the final examination at Halifax, and the total number of rejections in Toronto number but eighty-four, though one hundred and fifty-two recruits were obtained.

Seven recruiting stations have been established throughout the Dominion, at Halifax, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Esquimalt, B.C. Aemilius Jarvis directs operations for Ontario. He was appointed to forward British naval reservists to their ships on the outbreak of war, enlisted three hundred and eighty men for the Niobe and Rainbow, and secured one hundred and thirty of the three hundred and seventy men accepted from Canada for the Royal Naval Motor Boat Patrol.

182ND SOLDIERS TEAM FAILED TO GET TALLY

OSHAWA, Jan. 4.—The first local O.H.A. intermediate game was played last night between the 182nd Battalion and Oshawa. Soft ice made the game one of individual effort, and McNally in goal and Ryerson at centre for the khaki boys were the best. Although the soldiers did not score, they will require watching on hard ice. Oshawa scored three in the first period, two in the second and seven in the last, making the total score 12 to 0. The line-up:—

Referee—Gorrie, Toronto.

STRENGTHENED TEAM FROM COBOURG HERE ON MONDAY

Word has reached the city that Cobourg will send a greatly strengthened team to Peterborough for the game with the 247th team here next Monday night. The Lakeshore lads have had an opportunity to practice this week, something that was denied them before their game with Lindsay last Friday night.

Peterborough's intermediates have caused some excitement. Their work on Tuesday night placed them high in the estimation of the fans. Trainer Sergt. Billy Lane sees nothing less than a championship, a feeling of confidence that is shared throughout the whole local camp.

WHEN SOMETHING WENT WRONG IN SUBMARINE

Ingenuity and Courage of Man Immersed in Submarine Under Sixty Feet of Water.

From a London paper: Something had gone wrong with the submarine, and, losing her stability, she sank swiftly to the bottom, a broken and helpless thing. Her steel nerved crew had quickly been aware of disaster. The conning tower hatch was forced open, the commanding officer stationed himself at the foot of it, one by one the crew sprang up the ladder and shot safely to the surface. They were driven through the water like bolts from a catapult by the force of air in the boat.

Of the crew all escaped save one. He was shut up in the engine room astern.

Under Sixty Feet

He tried to open the hatch overhead. It would not move. There was sixty feet of water above it, and against the pressure of this dead weight the puny strength of one man was as naught.

With a coolness and self-possession that was marvellous, he calmly thought the situation over. Then opening the valves he let the sea pour into the compartment. Then, standing upright beneath the hatch, he quietly awaited the result of his intelligently bold action. The inleaping water circled about his feet, then climbed to his knee and so higher and higher about his body. As the water rose it lifted the air with it until the man began to suffer acutely from the heavy air pressure around him.

Superhuman Effort

Picture yourself standing in a room with water up to your chin and the ceiling just above your head with the water continually lifting until it seems about to touch the ceiling. Into the narrowing space between water and the ceiling he resolutely kept his head thrust, despite the stifling air pressure, until at last it seemed that the disastrous end so gallantly fought against had come. The man reeled and insensibility came upon him, but in the last moment of fading consciousness he made one superhuman effort and won the life for which he had struggled heroically. Raising both arms he gave a desperate push to the hatch overhead. Helped by the air pressure beneath it, the hatch had swung up when he pushed against it, and the outrush of air carried the man through the opening. A few seconds later the crew of a patrol vessel saw what they at first thought to be a dead body rise alongside their boat. This was our hero, living but unconscious. He is living still and has gone back to submarining. Of such stuff is the British bluejacket made.

BOWMANVILLE WON 4-2

BOWMANVILLE, Jan. 4.—In the O.H.A. intermediate series last night the game between Bowmanville and Port Hope was won by Bowmanville by 4 to 2. Line-up:—

Port Hope—Goal, Mirks; left defence, Jex; right defence, Henry; rover, Hills; centre, Chalk; right wing, Krug; left wing, Sculthorpe.

Bowmanville—Goal, Edgar, left defence, Christie; right defence, F. Williams; rover, R. Williams; centre, Hendry; right wing, Thompson; left wing, Hooper.

First period, Port Hope 0, Bowmanville 2.

Second period, Port Hope 2, Bowmanville 2.

Third period, Port Hope 0, Bowmanville 0.

Referee—J. Moxon, Toronto.

CURLING DRAW FOR TO-NIGHT

The inter-rink curling matches scheduled for tonight are:—

Denham vs. Sturgeon.
Archibald vs. Morrow
Foote vs. W. G. Ferguson
Kay vs. Campbell
McDermid vs. Davidson

PUCKERINGS

It would be hard inded to select any one in particular of the soldiers as the best man, as each one played grand hockey and at no time were they in any danger as far as the game was concerned, the result never being in doubt.—Lindsay Post.

The 247th will send Tuesday night's victors against Lindsay intermediates in the return game on Friday night. Lindsay fans are confident that the score will be reversed

It is understood that Jerry Coughlin will confine his efforts to training the junior team and will not figure on the intermediate line-up.

The juniors entertain the Bowmanville youngsters here next Tuesday night. The visitors are said to have a dandy team.

Up at Lindsay they say Chuck Carew has quit the winter pastime. The odds are that the same Chuck will work against the soldiers tomorrow night.

ADVICE ABOUT HORSES

Keep a little oxide of zinc ointment on hand. It is good for scratches and sores.

Do not allow the horses too much water after feeding. A little water and often, is a good rule while at the fall plowing.

When the ground gets soft in the fall is a very good time to start the colt; the plow being a very suitable implement for a beginning.

Do not sell all the good horses and keep the "plugs" for the boy to work. This is a poor way to encourage him to look after his team well.

Don't expect the hired men to keep his team fat without oats, and don't allow him to feed more than four or five quarts at a feed.

GERMANY PREPARED

Even Schools Were Made For Conversion Into Hospitals

It is significant that all the schools built between 1911 and 1914 were so arranged, not only in Germany but throughout Austria, that they could be turned into hospitals with hardly any alterations. For this purpose temporary partitions divided portions of the buildings and an unusually large supply of water was laid on. Special entrances for ambulances were already in existence, baths had already been fitted in the wounded reception rooms, and in many cases sterilizing sheds were already installed. The walls were made of a material that could be quickly whitewashed for the extermination of germs. If this obvious preparation for war is named to the average German his reply is, "The growing jealousy of German culture and commerce throughout the world rendered necessary protective measures."

No Need to Buy Weather Glass—Make Use of Leech

A leech confined in a glass jar of water will prove an excellent weather prophet. If the weather is to continue fine the leech lies motionless at the bottom of the vial and rolled up together in a spiral form. If it is to rain, either before or after noon, it is f[illegible] have crept up to the top of its [illegible]ging, and there remains till the weather is settled. If we are to have wind the poor prisoner gallops through his limpid habitation with amazing swiftness, and seldom rests till it begins to blow hard. If a remarkable storm of thunder and lightning is to succeed, for some days before the leech lodges almost continually without water, and gives itself up to violent throes and convulsive-like motions. In frost, as in clear summer weather, it lies constantly at the bottom; and in snow as in rainy weather, it pitches its dwelling on the very month of the vial.

TO HOLD THE BOYS

TASK IS BEING TAKEN UP SYSTEMATICALLY IN DOMINION.

To enlist 5[illegible],000 Canadian boys between the ages of 13 and 19 years in class groups which will provide for symmetrical development on intellectual, religious, and social lines, and to enroll leaders or mentors for those groups, is the object of a national movement now going on in the Dominion.

The Canadian National Advisory Committee for co-operation in boys' work, which was organized on July 10, 1914, has charge of the work. That committee has acted along two lines. In the first place, it has organized a conference of leadership for each of the nine provinces of Canada. Five of those gatherings have already taken place, and the other four will be held at Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, and Vancouver, before December 10. In the second place, it appointed a commission to draft a plan for carrying on the work among boys and for securing and training efficient leaders. That commission's report was presented recently.

It reached the decision that to supplement the work of the Sunday schools and secular schools, no new organization was required. The churches, Young Men's Christian Association, and Sunday School Association, it held, provided all the necessary machinery. It felt that as men had been found willing to serve their king and country and take training to fit them for that service, so men would be found to undertake the task of winning and holding the rising generation of Canadian boys for those ideas of liberty and morality for which Canadian soldiers were now fighting. The commission proposed that in each church congregation a superintendent of boys' work be appointed and gather around him a committee of at least four other men, one capable of directing the development of the physical standard among the boys, another to develop the intellectual standard, a third the religious standard, and the fourth the service and missionary or social standard.

In their work these superintendents of boys' work and their colleagues would have to assist them the "Canadian Standard Efficiency Tests," prepared by the national council of the Young Men's Christian Association in 1912 as a course of training for older boys, adopted by the Canadian National Advisory Committee for Co-operation in Boys' Work.

These efficiency tests provide for the "charting" of the boys, for their progressive instruction in subjects under the four headings—of rewards for advancements and for the development of the boy into a leader or mentor of a group of his fellows. They take into account the "gang" spirit, as it has been called, among boys, and the instinct for hero-worship, and, moreover, throw upon the members of the class organisation the responsibility for its management and for the conduct of its meeting under the supervision of the leader.

The commission also proposes an organisation for each locality or community in which the various churches, the Sunday School Association, and the Young Men's Christian Association should be represented. This co-operative committee would organise the community's summer athletics, promote summer camp conferences of leaders and older boys, and provide training classes for leaders. Provincial and national organizations, the commission also recommended. It proposed that a campaign for enlisting and registering workers and prospective workers be inaugurated, that leaders in boys' work be sought among the students in high schools and colleges, and that a plan for a federation of boys' Sunday school classes and clubs be outlined.

HAIR ON THE UPPER LIP GRADUALLY DISAPPEARING FROM THE BRITISH ARMY

THE British army is strong for tradition. There is a regiment, for instance, that was once attacked simultaneously front and rear. It fought back to back, and ever since has worn its facings and its numerals fore and aft. Now when you see that regiment you don't know whether it is coming or going.

Then there is the tradition about the salute. One of the first things a British private soldier is told is that it is not the man he salutes, but the uniform.

But the Great Tradition is the moustache. It has come down from time immemorial. It started in the days before safety razors. It has been handed down from father to son. It has been groomed and petted and pampered and twirled, and it has been the source of great pride. About the time of Bonnie Prince Charlie it became official. The army regulations recognized it. Ever since then every officer has had to wear a decoration on his upper lip. It has become a sort of frank in the service, much like the "On His Majesty's Service" printed in the top left-hand corner of the War Office envelopes.

But the moustache is no more. At least its official standing has gone. It is only semi-official now. Paragraph 1696 of the King's Regulations, just amended, makes it optional with an officer whether he shall shave his upper lip.

The Compulsory Moustache has been a source of great contention in the present war. Tommies have shuddered at the thought of promotion because of it. The Red Hats, as the staff officers are called, debated it at mess when the French ordered their soldiers to be clean shaved because some one of the French High Command had figured out that the French army was carrying, all told, about five tons on its back, or rather its face, because of hirsute adornment.

Now, the wording of unamended paragraph 1696 deserves mention. It is particularly adroit. It does not say that officers in His Majesty's service must grow moustaches. That would be difficult for some of the young subalterns. It reads that officers in His Majesty's service must not shave their upper lips. In that, there's all the difference in the world, as Robinson could have told you. Robinson, who was only seventeen, but a Somebody, received a commission when the General Staff was writing "want ads" for officers. His colonel was a stickler for the regulations, and at least once a week Robinson would blush for shame when his commanding officer would bellow: "I say, Robinson, when are you going to grow that moustache?" There are many Robinsons in the new army.

In the old army moustaches ran into styles quite their own. There was the drooping walrus effect, for example, which gave one a particularly silly-ass appearance. It was affected by those of the seniors who had a failing for monocles. The moustache matched the monocle and vice versa. Then there was the moustache that was drawn out into a long, thin, straight line at each end. The length of the ends depended upon the amount of moustache pomade the officer could afford. In the Guards the length was great because the officers of the Guards were rich. In the Engineers the ends were comparatively short because brains were considered more than money at Woolwich.

Because pomade is not included in the emergency ration served out when an officer goes on active service, the twirled ends disappeared in the trenches. Gradually the moustache took on a Charlie Chaplin architecture. The Red Hats looked at it and at once ordered all the pomade in the world, only to find out that the pomade was made in France and that the foreman of the factory and all the hands were at the front. Of course, there was nothing else to do but abolish the moustache after that, or at least to make it optional, which would amount to pretty nearly the same thing. It was too much to inspect regiment after regiment of Charlie Chaplins, especially as the men began imitating their officers.

In the army clubs now there is some talk as to whether the navy also will come under the safety-razor regulation. In the navy one must be either clean shaved or "'fully furnished,' 'as the paragraph reads. As a result most naval officers elect to wield the razor, let their hairs fall where they may.—The Post.

Joseph Conrad Doing His Bit.

His intimate friends used to declare that it was almost impossible to persuade Joseph Conrad, who is regarded by many critics as the greatest living English author, out of his seclusion. But the London correspondent of The Manchester Guardian hears that he also is, and has been for some time, "doing his bit." He has an official appointment of some responsibility, which he is discharging with such zest that it is said he has been making flights in aeroplanes. That the sea writer, who preferred to remain in the days of the clippers, and who when he referred occasionally to steamers did so in a way which showed he could never think of them as he did of the old hookers of "Youth," should now be flying in war planes is one of the miracles of this new era. Mr. St. John Ervine, the well known author and playwright, the correspondent adds, is now a trooper in the Household Battalion of the 2d Life Guards.

HEARNE—DUDMAN.

Miss Margaret Ann Dudman, of Burnt River, and Mr. James E. Hearne, of Verulam, were united in marriage at George Street Methodist Church parsonage last evening. Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., officiated, and the young couple were unattended.

EAKINS—DONNELLY.

On the evening of January 3rd, at George Street Methodist Church parsonage, Mr. Wm. T. Eakins, of Lindsay, and Miss Pearl Donnelly, Peterborough, were united in marriage by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. There were no attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Eakins will reside in this city.

The Royal Cross of the first class has been awarded to Matron A. J. Hartley of Brantford, who is in the 4th Canadian General Hospital at Saloniki.

At the regular meeting of the Belmont Women's Institute, it was decided to send $50 to the Canadian Red Cross. Miss E. S. Meikle, the winner of the autograph quilt, has donated the quilt to the institute, on condition that it be given to some hospital or sold again and the money therefrom given for Red Cross purposes, or in any other way that the institute ladies decide it would do the most good.

Miss M. Boyd of Cobden, who spent the holiday with Capt. and Mrs. Thomson, left yesterday to resume her studies at Whitby Ladies' College.

The recital to be given in St. Paul's Church on Friday evening by Mrs. Davies Sherry, assisted by Miss Lora Logan and Mr. John Allan, under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., promises to be one of the most enjoyable musical events of this season. As Mrs. Davies Sherry is leaving for the West shortly, everyone should take advantage of this opportunity of hearing her.

The following critique from the Mail and Empire speaks for itself: "After an absence of several years Mrs. Helen Davies Sherry reappeared at the Conservatory of Music Hall on Wednesday evening and was given a most gratifying reception. As Helen Davies, this artist was held in high repute in local musical circles when a member of the National Chorus. She sang 'Hear Ye, Israel,' from Mendelssohn's 'Elijah,' with a deep appreciation of its dramatic values. Her other numbers were also sung with fine artistic effect."

The proceeds from this recital will go towards Red Cross and patriotic work.

Mrs. R. J. Devey will be pleased if the ladies who still have Geisha dresses will at once forward them to 285 Park Street, as all the dresses are to be properly packed and stored this week, before the new work is commenced.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey have returned to the city after spending the New Year's holiday in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Brackenridge and children were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. E. Gillott at Millbrook over New Year's.

SCORES OF LADIES TOIL FOR CANADA'S WOUNDED

Nearly Two Hundred Red Cross Workers Take Part in Campaign---Mrs. T. F. Matthews, President, Gives Interesting Account of Trip to England.

The six weeks' work campaign of the ed Cross was inaugurated in the assembly room of the Public Library yesterday afternoon under most favorable auspices which portent the hiyhest measure of success for the movement. The large room was filled to capacity, there being nearly two hundred ladies present from all sections of the city.

It was a busy scene. Twelve sewing machines hummed constantly and the work tablen were covered with materials out of which were fashioned comforts for Canadian soldiers in the hospitals in England.

Mrs. John Allan, first vice-president of the society, on behalf of the members, extended a cordial welcome to Mrs T. F. Matthews, recently returned from a trip to England and who, during her absence, had been elected president of the organization. The new president, in acknowleding the compliment, expressed the pleasure she felt in seeing so many present and so deeply interested in the work that had been undertaken.

At 4 o'clock after the members had worked for two hours, Mrs. Matthews delivered an address, giving an interesting account of her trip across the ocean in company with Mrs. A. H. Stratton. The travellers were especially interested in the hospital work in England and made a tour of these places, meeting with many Peterborough people at each institution. One thing that struck Mrs. Matthews was the provision made for the care of tubercular or suspected tubercular patients. Small houses are placed on wheels so that they can easil be turned around to avoid the wind blowing into the side that is open. Every care is taken of the wounded men and all these appreciate the attention which they receive and are cheerful and hopeful for recovery. Every patient had a personal property bag, some of them containing bullets or pieces of shells recovered from their wounds. Some of these bags had been made in Peterborough and are so highly prised by the wounded men that Mrs. Matthews says this should be an incentive to all workers to provide additional comforts.

The 93rd Band

The Peterborough ladies witnessed that pageant, the Lord Mayor's procession which had an additional interest for them from the fact that the 93rd Batt. band took part. After the procession they met Victor Dalline, one of the bandsmen whose home in this city. They also met Mrs. Belle, formerly Miss Eva Denne, who was on [illegible] the nurses at Lemnos, where she had a hard time of it. She is now head of the Canadian Convalescent Hospital at Busby Park.

More Peterborough People

At Folkestone the travellers met Col. and Mrs. E. B. Clegg. The former is in charge of a reserve camp and has no idle time. At West Sandling they met Col. Johnston, Capt. Burnham, Capt. Rollins, Majors Watt and Lech, Capt. Mowat and other officers of the 93rd Batt., and were entertained at luncheon by them. Others were in the trenches. A letter had just come in from Romaine Stevenson, the youngest officer in the battalion. He had been in the trenches only one day when he led his men in a successful raid.

Major (Dr.) McPherson is in charge of the Bromley Hospital for convalescents and is the happy father of a boy just one year old at the time of the visit of Mrs. Matthews and her party. While they were at Bromley they met Major (Canon) Davidson and Dr. Kelly. The former had just received his orders to leave for France and was delighted with the opportunity to do his bit where the real men are. The major is in the best of health and sent his kindest regards to all friends at home. Dr. Kelly had been wounded while on duty, but made light of it.

At the Canadian Red Cross headquarters Mrs. Matthews twice met Lady Drummond, of whom Major McPherson speaks in terms of the highest praise, especially with reference to her work in the hospitals. Lady Drummond is especially pleased with the way the money is coming in for the prisoners' fund. She is is assisted by a staff of young ladies who come from comfortable homes and who work much harder than do the servants to whose services they have always been accustomed.

An interesting account was given of war conditions in England and of the part women are taking by doing the work of men wherever possible, as street car conductors, munitions makers and the like. Women in Canada, too, must do their part to help in the accomplishing of the task which now confronts the Empire.

At the session this afternoon Mrs. Alice Rogers Collins gave an interesting talk on woman suffrage.

SUCCESSFUL HOLIDAY SEASON FOR SALVATION ARMY CORPS; CITIZENS' HELP APPRECIATED

The holiday season was a very busy one indeed in Salvation Army circles and was exceedingly successful in every particular. Not only getting was indulged in, but giving was the spirit manifested very much indeed.

The concerts and presentation of gifts at the Temple and at the outposts were splendid manifestations of the true spirit. About 600 scholars were served.

Poor families were not forgotten by any means.

The Temple band in their serenading were well received by the citizens at large, for which they are very thankful.

Brig. Southall's visit for the New Year week-end was especially enjoyed.

The statement of the condition of affairs as far as finance is concerned on New Year's night by Adj. McElhiney showed the healthiest condition the corps, both senior and junior, has been in its history.

The gathering of funds for the reseating of the Temple is under way having been halted by the holiday season, and the seats will be on hand shortly. Other plans for further extentions are under way and will be made known in the near future.

Adjt. and Mrs. McElhiney and the local officers of the corps are thankful to the public in general for their hearty support of the work of the Salvation Army in Peterborough in 1916.

There is no man in the French Parliament who enjoys more authority than M. Lebrun, a member for French Lorraine and a former Cabinet Minister. M. Lebrun told the House of two regiments, composed entirely of men between forty-four and forty-eight, who had been in the trenches at Verdun since August, 1914, until February 21, 1916. When the Germans attacked Verdun these men were removed from the first line trenches, but instead of resting they had to work on the second line, and they were put in the trenches again, without having had a rest of any length since the beginning of the war. Nobody asked them whether they were married or not.

"MOTHER LOVE"

NEW PLAY MAKING SHORT TOUR, COMING TO THE GRAND.

The most successful plays on Broadway, New York, at the present time, "Turn to the Right," and "The Harp of Life," are both founded on mother love. It is a big subject and permits of unusual treatment by the dramatist as it can be treated from so many different angles.

"Mother Love," the title selected for the play by Robert Lawrence, has as its principal character a woman who, when very young, ignorant and innocent of the fundamental principles of life, made the one mistake which can never be forgiven by the world at large. A few years afterwards she married her employer and for more than twenty years, though she kept from him the secret of her nameless son, proved everything a wife should be. At the opening of the play this son, through outside influences, is in the employ of his mother's husband as a private secretary. Shortly after his mother's marriage a daughter was born, who is now a beautiful girl of eighteen. The son, ignorant of his parentage, falls desperately in love with the daughter, who reciprocates his effection. The husband, not knowing the relationship existing between the two, consents to their marriage, which is forbidden by the mother. The young couple plan an elopement, which is frustrated by the mother, who is forced to confess her secret to both, but eventually, through the efforts of the daughter, a reconcilation is effected.

It is a strong play, acted by a capable cast, who handle all the situations in such a delicate manner as not to offend the most sensitive.

"Mother Love" is now playing in Toronto. Next week Hamilton, Peterborough, Kingston and Ottawa will see the play, and the following week will be spent at His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal, from whence it goes to New York to open for a run.

OBITUARY

BERTRAM DAWSON.

Mr. Bertram Dawson, president of the Dickson Bridge Works Company, succumbed to an attack of pneumonia on Sunday night about 11 o'clock after an illness of only a few days' duration. The deceased, who was 36 years of age, was one of Campbellford's best known business men and enjoyed the respect of a large circle of acquaintances.

He was born in Omemee and spent the early part of his life in Peterborough. He came to Campbellford nine years ago with the Dickson Bridge Works Co., and later became a stockholder. His promotion with the company was rapid until he finally became president.

Seven years ago Mr. Dawson was united in marriage to Miss Laura Dickson, who with two small children, is left to cherish the fond memory of a loving husband and father. He is also survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dawson and three brothers and two sisters, viz.: Percy, of Winnipeg, Charles, of Quebec, and George, of Montreal; Mrs. Clemens, of Tyrone, and Mrs. (Dr.) Lloyd, of University, Alta. — Campbellford News.

MRS. JOHN HARRISTON

Jennie Airess, wife of Mr. John Harriston, 476 Rogers Street, died last evening as the result of pneumonia. Mr. Harrison is in the hospital suffering from the same disease. There are two children, who are being cared for by deceased's sisters.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 476 Rogers St., on Saturday afternoon at 2.30, and proceed to Little Lake Cemetery.

RUSSIANS ATTACKING AT MANY POINTS

Austrians Retire in Disorder After Repulse by Italians --- Germans Enter British Trenches Near Loos

HUNS WILL BE CALLED UPON TO SETTLE SCORES

Lieut. G. N. Milburn Has Served at Somme Front.

In a letter home, Lieut. G. N. Milburn, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and is now in France, with the 1st Canadian Battalion, says:

"Many and varied have been my experiences since putting on the colors. My only regret is that they were not on me before, for I have missed so much out here. When talking to the veterans, one feels like a kid as they speak of Givenchy, Ypres, and other places. However, I have had the honor of having gone through a good deal of the Somme fighting, when the Canadians gave a good account of themselves.

"At present we are away from that part of the front, and are holding the line at a somewhat quieter point. We are in the brigade reserve for a few days, and will take over the front line this week-end for our regular turn. The village we are in presents a very dilapidated appearance, as it has been heavily shelled both by the French and the Germans, but it is now safe, some distance behind the front line. We are quartered in the cellar of a house, or at least what I suppose it was at one time. You will see many pictures in our Canadian papers of the ruined villages which are true to life. Both France and Belgium have surely paid the price during this war, but the tale is not all told. The Hun will be called upon to settle many an old score before we are through with him.

Some Men Fatalists.

"Really it seems a shame that so-called civilized nations have to resort to such means to settle their disputes. A person at times wonders what it is all about and why such things are allowed to happen. However, I suppose it had to be, or at least men have gone so far in materialism that there must be a stop somewhere. Here some men are fatalists, for one is sitting or standing, as the case may be, when a bullet or a shell picks off one's companions, as it did poor Stuart Laing the other night. I had been talking to him just about a week before. He was the officer in charge of some engineering work on which I had a party of one hundred men. We were talking of old times in Peterborough. Then one night last week one of the battalions was putting on a 'show' and he with another officer was standing away from the line watching the scrap, when a stray bullet hit him on the head. He lived only a few minutes.

"I was over in another division with a party the past week and met a lot of old Edmonton boys whom I knew. It is surprising how many one runs across. There are days when we meet dozens of fellows, and then again we will not see them for weeks.

"As a rule the boys realize the principles for which they are fighting, and there are few complaints. We have a splendid chance to know our men both personally and through their correspondence, as all their letters are censored before leaving the company.

No High Cost of Living.

"I learn that the people at home are having to pay the high price of fifty cents for butter, and that other prices have increased. One consolation we over here have is that the Government supplies us with rations so that we have very little worry about our food, and the British soldier is by far the best fed soldier in the world.

A Just Cause.

"Well, it is getting on toward Christmas. Peace on earth and goodwill to men seems hardly possible with so much carnage and bloodshed as there is on the battlefields of Europe. But we are fighting for a just and honest cause, which without doubt will triumph in the end. And we poor mortals may sometime understand why God moves in such mysterious ways to perform His will."

GERMANY PREPARING GREAT NAVAL EFFORT

Submarines of Largest Type and Torpedo Boats Are Being Built---Zeppelins Scout Fearing Attack by British.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 5. — The Amsterdam correspondent of the Daily Express says Germany is preparing a tremendous naval effort. The greatest activity prevails from Emden to Memel; the Kiel yards are turning out only submarines of the largest type, and Hamburg and Cuxhaven are building torpedo boats. Aerial defences for all these yards have been completed. Zeppelin stations have been either strengthened or new ones built. Zeppelins scout day and night in fear of a possible English attack

GREEK STEAMSHIP TORPEDOED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 5. — The torpedoing by a submarine of the Greek steamship Siripiros is reported in a Havas despatch from Corunna. Twelve men of the crew were saved by a fishing boat.

A Havas despatch from Elferrol, Spain, says the captain and twelve men of the crew of the Siripiros have been landed on the beach at Cobas.

ENGAGEMENTS AT SERB. POSTS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 5. — An official report from the Macedonian front issued here today says engagements occurred on Wednesday among advanced posts in the sector held by Serbians.

ENEMY AVIATION GROUNDS, RAILWAY STATIONS AND BARRACKS BOMBARDED

Twenty French Airmen Drop Numerous Projectiles.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 5. — (Official Announcement.) — "During the night artillery was rather active in the sectors of Douaumont and Vaux.

"Twenty of our aviators last night carried out various bombbarding expeditions. The enemy aviation grounds at Matigny, Haucourt, Flete and Berns, railway stations at Bouilly, Athiesand, Villecourt and the barracks at Roye were bombarded with numerous projectiles."

LAST WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICE

Another successful service with an overflow congregation was held at All Saints' Church last evening. The series will conclude with a service in Trinity Church tonight. Rev. R. Pogue will speak on the subject, "Our Preparedness After the War."

It may be raining tonight, and if so your attendance will be a more definite witness for Christ, and a clear evidence of your interest in the boys in the trenches who have fought through months of worse weather than Peterborough ever experiences.

All are welcome. Let us have a worthy closing to a week of phenomenally successful meetings.

Collection tonight to defray expenses.—Peterborough Ministerial Association.

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM M.P. RETURNS FROM ENGLAND

Will Give an Address at Pembroke To-night.

OTTAWA, Jan 5.—Capt. Burnham M.P. for West Peterborough, who arrived in Ottawa today from London, goes to Pembroke to address a public meeting in aid of recruiting Friday evening, by invitation of Pembroke citizens.

He speaks with enthusiasm of the splendid spirit he found everywhere amongst the troops at the front.

Capt. Burnham has returned to Canada to do recruiting work, and will attend the coming session of Parliament. Capt. Burnham quoted Sir Julian Byng, commander of the Canadians, in high praise of the character and fighting qualities of the Dominion's soldiers. The returned M.P. was in the front trenches and had one narrow shave when a trench which he had visited an hour before was the object of an enemy raid. Eight of its defenders were killed and fourteen wounded, but the last man succeeded in holding it with a machine gun.

PATRIOTIC FUND WINS IN DIVISION COURT

Action Is Taken Against Delinquent Subscribers.

Some time ago the Finance Committee of the local branch of the Patriotic Fund decided to take legal action against delinquent subscribers to the Fund, there being arrears to the amount of $4000.

A number of actions entered in the Division Court were won by the Patriotic Fund. A number of others are being heard in Division Court toady.

It is the intention of the commttee to take proceedings in all cases where subscriptions have not been paid.

HEAVY LOSSES FOR AUSTRIANS

ROME, Jan. 5. — The war office announces the Austrians attacked violently on Wednesday night between the Adige and Lake Garda, but were repulsed, retiring in disorder with heavy losses.

E. F. CARVER IS KILLED

Met His Death When Load of Hay Upset.

Edward F. Carver, son of H. M Carver of Caledonia was killed yesterday when a load of hay upset while Mr. Carver was on his way to town. The full particulars of the accident were not given in the telegram which was received by Mr. Harry Carver, Charlotte street, who is a cousin of the deceased.

Harry Carver will leave in the morning to attend the funeral.

RUSSIANS ATTACKING

Movement Along Line Held by Prince Leopold.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 5—Army headquarters reports that German infantry advanced into British trenches near Loos, blew up several galleries, inflicted serious losses, and returned with 51 prisoners.

On Prince Leopold's front the Russians are attacking at many points.

In Roumania, between the Transylvanian Eastern frontier and the lowlands of Sereth, German forces took several hundred prisoners, and south of the Buzeu, 1,400 prisoners and six machine guns.

LOCAL SCHOOLS WELL SUPPLIED WITH SOFT COAL

SEVERAL INDUSTRIES NOW HAVE ONLY SMALL SUPPLY ON HAND.

Thanks to the wisdom of the members of the Board of Education last fall, Peterborough schools are not in the same position as some of the Toronto institutions. Yesterday several of the Queen City's buildings had to close owing to the failure of the coal supply, while here in Peterborough the contract is being fulfilled to the letter at $5.65 per ton, while soft coal is costing the local dealers about $9.00 per ton f.o.b. the cars here, and there is just enough coming in to take care of regular customers.

Hard coal is selling for $9 for the nut size, while the stove and egg sizes can be got for $8.75 and pea coal for $7.75. The coal mining companies all seem to be able to get their orders filled, but it is impossible for the local dealers to get delivery from the railway companies.

That is the general complaint from the local men. Mr. Weir, of the firm of Weir & McCarthy, stated that they have had considerable difficulty in keeping all sizes of coal in stock, but always had enough to prevent their customers suffering. They have three cars of soft coal on the track somewhere in Canada.

It is reported that some of the local industries are very low in their supply of soft coal.

MR. DUMBLE SAYS ASSESSMENT FOR WATER RATES IS UNFAIR

Mr. D. W. Dumble has addressed the following letter to the Utilities Commission:—

Gentlemen: I beg to draw your attention to an unfairness in the matter of assessing for water rates. I hold two lots, one of them is a corner lot; the other, the same size, is not. For the corner lot you assess me for both side and front measurements, 140 feet; for the next lot on its frontage, 36 feet. Each lot is the same size; each lot will carry one house! each honse will require the same quantity of water.

Now the question is, why should I pay for the corner lot $1.12 and for the next lot only 28c? I know your answer. You say that the cost for pipe laying, etc., on the corner lot is much greater than on the inside lot, and that somebody must pay for the carrying on the pipes, etc., and you lay the extra costs on the man who happens to occupy the corner lot. Now at every corner there is a square in the centre; you may call it "No man's land"; you have to carry the water pipes over this square, east, west, north and south, and you charge the cost of getting over the corner to the general cost of the water system. The consumer pays his share of that in his general taxes, but what fairness is there in making the fixed amount of water used by the occupant of the corner lot cost three times as much as the occupant of the next lot pays for the same accommodation? Would it not be equitable to charge all consumers of the same quantity of water the same price and not charge the unfortunate man on the corner more than his fair share? Let every consumer pay the same price for the same thing.

I submit this to your consideration as I think the present method unjust.—I am, gentlemen, Your Obedient Servant, D. W. Dumble.

LIEUT. FRED HUBBS WRITES FROM SWITZERLAND HOTEL

Afraid He'll Awake to Find it a Dream.

Peterborough friends of Lieut. Fred. Hubbs will be interested in a letter just received from him by his father, Mr. C. E. Hubbs, 336 Concession street. Lieut. Hubbs, who took part in the fighting last June, was wounded and taken prisoner by the Germans. Recently he was exchanged, going to Switzerland, in which country he is interned. He writes as follows:

Palace Hotel and Grand Hotel Des Alpes,
Murren, Switzerland.

Dear Dad,—I have moved again, this time to a new country. I got here yesterday morning, after several hours from Constance, where I was held up for four weeks on account of a mixup in the exchange, but at last we got away on Wednesday at 7.45 p.m. and got some welcome all along the route during the night, landing here at noon and coming up 5,500 feet at the end. Across from our hotel is the Jungfrau, the Monk and Yeager Mountains, and such scenery as I never expected to see. We are about 1,000 British here, all living in hotels, and it is some change from cabbage soup, half rotten fish, quarter pound of meat per week and living inside a barbed-wire fence with Bosh sentries all around. My parcels were coming good when I came, and of course will, and they will come along, I think, in due course.

I expect you know long ago that I am here, as I cabled home from Zurich two night ago, and the cable would be home long before this gets started.

Treatment in Hospital.

I did not get used so badly in Germany except in hospital, where I had some trouble, and was nearly court-martialed for kicking an orderly away from me for lifting my broken leg wrong and causing the bones to smash through the flesh. But I got it squared. The doctor I had was one of those kultur brutes, and I hope I meet him again after the war. All the others at least did me no harm. I was unlucky only about my doctor. The general attitude in German has changed a lot since the early days. There is a great deal of starvation among the civilians, as the army takes all the good grub, and they are generally seeing that the finish will be bad for them. I think we will have one more year before we have them right. I met Col. Usher at Constance, but he did not pass the commission. He has gone to Freidberg, where Rogers is. It is a fine camp, as camps go. I met a chap who was there with Rogers, and he says Rogers is fine and was already working on a minstrel show. Our boys are all right for parcels, and one thing about the Boshes is that they are afraid to steal parcels. So all one suffers from that source is delay.

Winter Sports.

My leg is not so bad as it was in Boshland. It got a lot better as soon as I crossed the border. But I will get treatment here to make it bend. We have a curling club here, and skiing and tobogganing and all winter sports, and there are about twenty-five of us in a big hotel with all the fixings. I am afraid yet that I will wake up and see the wire outside and a Bosh sentry walking up and down. The Boshes are not all devils and were they out from under the thumb of the military caste would be pretty good people. They are very saving and industrious, and a grand nation of boot lickers from the bottom up.

I am feeling fine and expect to get in shape within a few months, but cannot go very far here as yet, as I am not acclimatised to either decent grub or the altitude, but guess I will improve. Will write you again soon as there is no limit to our correspondence here, and let you know just how things are.

Good-bye for now.

FRED. HUBBS.

Murren, Switzerland.

PTES. WOODROW AND BARNES ARE CASUALTIES

Two Members of 93rd Are Severely Wounded.

This afternoon Rev. James Price of St. George's Church received a letter from a chaplain at the front stating that Pte. W. Woodrow, formerly choirmaster at St. George's Church, had been severely wounded in the right arm and asking that Mr. Price notify Mrs. Woodrow.

Pte. Woodrow went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and has been serving at the front for some considerable time.

Mrs. Woodrow also received a letter today giving the news of the wounding of Pte. Barnes, of which official notification came through this morning to his wife.

Pte. Thos. Edward Barnes of the 93rd Batt., transferred to the Mounted Rifles, is officialy reported severely wounded in the arm on Dec. 22. He was admitted to hospital at Etaples. Mrs. Barnes, living at Claraday, received the official notification this morning.

The 247th band will give an open-air concert on the market tomorrow morning. Addresses will be made by officers and others, appealing to the men to enlist and to the fathers and mothers to use their influence on the young men to get into khaki.

Capt. Thomson has taken new quarters at the Armories. The paymaster's office is now located next to the quartermaster's quarters in the north end of the building.

Several prospective recruits from Apsley interviewed the medical officers this morning.

The officers and non-commisioned officers will attend an inoculation parade on Monday morning, the 8th inst.

A position is open for a returned soldier as steward in a local club. Married man preferred. Quarters included, heated and lighted. Fair salary and practically a house thrown in. Apply for particulars at office of the Patriotic Fund.

Killed by Train

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AYLMER, Jan. 5. — While standing on the track at Springfield waiting for an express to go by, Alvin Martin of Malahide township failed to notice a freight train approaching from an opposite direction, and was struck and instantly killed last night. His horse and rig escaped.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, JANUARY 5, 1917

HIS HONOR JUDGE RUDDY.

PETERBOROUGH citizens of all classes as well as members of the legal profession, will join in extending congratulations to Mr. R. Ruddy, K.C., who has just been appointed judge in Ontario County. Mr. Ruddy is a native of that county, a son of a farmer, was educated in the high school at Uxbridge and completed his education for the legal profession in Toronto. He practised law for nearly twenty years in Millbrook, which town he left for the wider field and greater opportunities to be found in Peterborough. That he has been successful in his life work is evidenced by the fact that he now returns to the county of his nativity clad in the judicial ermine.

His elevation to the Bench will give general satisfaction throughout the county. Some time ago the members of the local bar unanimously joined in a memorial to the Government recommending Mr. Ruddy for the Bench, and the County Council three years ago also endorsed him for one of the vacant judgeships. He is well equipped for the onerous duties of his new position and beyond a doubt will be a credit to the Canadian judiciary. He has had the distinguished honor of appearing before the Privy Council in London, and his merits were duly recognized when some years ago he was appointed a K. C.

V. EASTWOOD IS CHAIRMAN.

MR. VINCENT EASTWOOD had a double claim upon the honor which was accorded him last night when he was elected chairman of the Board of Education for 1917. In the first place he is the oldest member in point of service who had never yet held the position. For years, too, he has been the financial expert of the Board, and his counsel has prevailed in guiding so wisely the expenditures year by year, expenditures in which not a dollar has been misplaced or paid out unnecessarily, as a retrospect of the situation convinces everyone.

In the shuffle Mr. Gordon failed to land a chairmanship, but he will no doubt be satisfied seeing that he secured a place on the committee that deals with a matter in which he has always taken an active interest.

CAPT. BURNHAM RETURNS.

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM, M.P., has returned to Canada, and immediately upon his arrival proceeds to take up the work for which he has received special training during the months of his stay in England. Tonight he will address a recruiting meeting in Pembroke, and surely a message directly from the front, presented with the force with which Capt. Burnham will handle it, cannot fail to effect a useful purpose.

It is age alone that keeps Capt. Burnham out of actual service. He has even offered to enlist as a transport driver, and has volunteered for duty in the military hospitals. The authorities, however, have decided that he can render the Empire more effective service as a recruiter.

With that object in view he was sent to the front with a party of officers, and there he had an opportunity to study actual conditions. He knows now just what the men in the trenches are doing and what they expect of those who are still at home.

It is to be hoped that Capt. Burnham will soon be heard in Peterborough, for it is certain that he has for the Canadian people a message from the fighting forces that will be well worth hearing.

NEWSPAPERS, CHURCHES AND THE WAR.

AN ONTARIO MINISTER of the Gospel, in the course of a sermon the other day, declared that if there had been a religious daily paper in every city, run as Christ would have run it, this war would not have taken place. Leaving aside the question of how Christ would have conducted a daily paper, or whether He would have conducted one at all or not, one is naturally tempted to ask why a minister of the Gospel should seek to place the responsibility on the newspapers for the failure of the Christian world to live up to the teachings of Christ. As the Woodstock Sentinel-Review well puts it, if there was not a religious daily paper conducted as Christ would have conducted it, in every city, there was a Christian church, not only in every city, but in every town and village, and in most of the cities, towns and villages several Christian churches. Why did they not prevent he war? Or is it that they were not conducted as Christ would have conducted them?

Perhaps the responsibility for this war can be divided equally between the press and the public if any measure of it belongs to either. A certain class of newspapers have for years been breeding a spirit of hate between Britain and Germany, just as have some of the journals and philosophers in that country. Volleys of brickbats have been discharged by one party at the other and for the damage so wrought the day of reckoning was bound to come. The small boy who wantonly shatters the windows of a disused church saddles his parents and guardians with the burden of the indemnity that the law levies. It was the late Prince Bismarck who remarked that wars were caused not so much by diplomats as by bellicose editors who wrought damage to the structures of their national neighbors, damage which the country that sheltered the gory-minded journalists was eventually called upon to make good.

There are, unfortunately, jingoes even among the ministers of the day. We have all heard gowned occupants of the pulpit, imbued with the spirit of the biblical age, when might was right indeed, blatantly hold the sword above all else as an agent of civilization. Some have gone so far as to say in those halcyon days when the whole world was at peace that the man who offered armed resistance to autonomy in Ireland would in very truth be rendering service to the kingship of Christ.

When this war is over let the jingo in public life be treated as the nuisance and danger which he really is, and let no heed be paid to his flannel-mouthed sentiments. Let the sacred vestments, too, be stripped from the back of the religious fanatic who would civilize the heathen nations by brute force rather than by the peaceful precepts that were taught by the Nazarene.

THE FARMERS' FUTURE.

WHEN THE DEPARTMENT of Agriculture sends a lecturer to address the farmers of Peterborough County, that functionary never fails to congratulate the men on the land upon the conditions under which they live, after he has made a trip through the rural sections. Like every stranger, he invariably notes the comfortable houses, the splendid modern outbuildings and the good fences that are distinguishing features of the farms of this county. There is an air of prosperity everywhere. Further investigation satisfies the visitor that the farmers are well up in the general departments of their work, especially in the matter of live stock, for the herds of cows and beef cattle and the horses raised in Peterborough County will hold their own against those in any other section of the Dominion.

But the Department lecturer never fails to tell the farmers that they have not yet made the most of their opportunities and that the best is yet ahead of them. No farms anywhere possess a greater diversity of soil. The hills and valleys are not the result of accident, but were designed by nature for a purpose, of which the farmer should take advantage. Every hillside in the county should be covered with a modern orchard or used for the production of the smaller fruits. The high land is specially adopted for the production of alfalfa, the crop that means for the stock raiser prosperity never before dreamed of. In these two departments of agricultural art the farmers of this county are all far behind the age.

If the methods of our fathers have made the farmers of Peterborough County prosperous, if they have have paid for the comfortable homes and commodious barns, then the systems that have proved effective by official experiment should, if generally adopted, place the rural residents on the very crest of the wave of prosperity that seems to be sweeping over the agricultural section of Ontario.

Like every other profession or vocation, farming is still in the adolescent stage. Greater production is possible, and this is the one thing required to solve the problem of the high cost of living in the crowded urban centres.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ONE KING can make war, but one neutral president cannot hope to make peace.

President Wilson is also distinguished as the only man in the world who hasn't heard what the Entente is fighting for.

Some Gain.

(Buffalo Express.)

Babies in at least one of the fashionable New York apartment houses may have, temporarily, the same privileges as dogs. That is some gain.

One learns from the St. Thomas (Ont.) Times that someone "assumed the roll of Santa Claus at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, for the 30th time." Santa should know by this time how to protect his roll.

Training to Be a Waitress.

(New York Sun.)

Oh, well, look on the bright side. If daughter refuses to learn a trade or a profession, preferring to spend all her time in assisting at social affairs, pouring for this or that tea and serving punch for the other reception, take comfort in the thought that she is at least in training to be a waitress.

He Laffs Best Who Laffs Last.

"Why do you laugh at my stories?" a wag asked a celebrated Englishman who was visiting this country. The latter replied: "I do not understand them at once, but I take them on faith. I laugh when I hear them, and when they sink in I laugh again. So you see I have a double pleasure."

To the Credit of Mr. Cochrane.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

It would seem that Mr. F. P. Gutelius, of the Department of Railways and Canals, had an energetic public servant, not given overmuch to respect for the patronage octopus where it is necessary to overrule it for the sake of efficient railway operation. It is also to the credit of Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, that the authority of Mr. Gutelius, as manager of the government railways, is being upheld.

Britain's National Debt.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Britain's national debt is now $12,000,000,000. But the debt is not now so great, in proportion to the national wealth, as it was at the close of the Napoleonic war, when it was over $4,000,000,000. In a hundred years the wealth of Britain has increased much more than threefold.

Many Christmas Gifts Are Gratefully Acknowledged

Little Ones at St. Vincent's Orphanage Were Made Happy.

The sisters of St. Vincent's Orphanage desire to thank most sincerely the following benefactors who by their generosity helped to fill the stockings of the orphans, or filled the festive board with good things that made their young hearts glad.

Not the least of the little ones' Yuletide pleasures was that afforded them by the kindness of Mr. C. Rutherford and family, who served the annual banquet at their own home on Jan. 2.

May all who participated in making the orphans happy be repaid by Him Who has promised that even a cup of cold water given to the needy shall not go unrewarded.

EDITOR'S MAIL

CANVASS FOR RECRUITS.

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—With your kind permission I would like to offer a few suggestions concerning the 247th Battalion's canvass of the city, and in so doing hope I may not incur the displeasure of the military officials, particularly those entrusted with the collection of the data required.

In the first place, every citizen should cheerfully and promptly comply with the officer's request for this information, for he is simply discharging his duty, an imposed duty, none too pleasant, I may reasonably suppose, and, while it may be annoying to some oversensitive people to be so frequently bothered for apparently the same information, don't you think it must be infinitely more trying to the officer who is obliged only too often to meet so many people who fume, and scowl and abuse him, withholding particulars which, as Britons, we should be glad to proffer without even waiting to be asked These officers are our own people, friends—not our enemies—and we should meet them with a smile and the glad hand.

In my opinion, the work could be expedited, and to better satisfaction, if the officer would leave a card or a slip, asking for the required information, as many of us are employed on night work and rest during the day, and so are not accessible. Others work during the day and possibly are out to the show at night, and in like manner are not at home to be interviewed. If these cards were left—and we're used to signing cards—we could fill them out in a few minutes at our leisure and they could be called for later. As I understand it, there has been a great list of names —1,400—turned into the Armories, many of whom are not eligible for various reasons; and it is the intention of the officers, from this information being gathered, to remove such names from the lists and cease troubling the parties. It is only a matter of time till we have conscription, anyway, and if our hearts are in the right place we should make this repugnant duty of canvassing as easy as possible for our worthy military fellow-citizens. If conscription comes, withholding the information will be no benefit; if no conscription, giving it will be no detriment. So let's help the boys who voluntarily enlisted to fight our—mark that word "our"—battles.

Editor Review: Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the push you gave the co-operative movement in last night's editorial, I send you The Canadian Co-operator Magazine in order that you may get thoroughly acquainted with the inner workings of the concern, as you will in all probability advocate the cause when the pinch of necessity gets tighter. Also to show that it is not altogether necessary to cite the case of England to prove the possibilities of co-operation. Others following.

SSES IN PEARLING INDUSTRY SINCE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR

OST people may not be aware that four-fifths of the world's output of pearl-shell of the best is produced from Aus- waters almost exclusively la, including the few Dutch her islands in the immediate rhood of the northern shores island continent. The only pearling grounds of conse- where high-grade shell is ob- lie around the Malay Archi- and Manila.

Lo market is controlled At the present of the Australian product Pearlers are getting considerably less for their shell now than before the war, although the cost of gathering it and of freights is ever so much higher. A great portion of the fleet is now laid up, and the comparatively few boats that are at work are only in commission to keep the men employed.

Mr. Clark has 35 vessels at Broome, while the Celebes Trading Company, in which he has large interests, has 65 vessels at the Aru islands. Thursday island, between Australia and New Guinea, was formerly the headquarters of these boats, but the Commonwealth restrictions made it necessary to transfer them to the Dutch flag. When both the fleets in which he is interested are fully working, employment is given to about 800 men, chiefly Japanese, Malays, and Manila men, and the expenses of operation run to about £65,000 a year.

Prior to the war shellers at Broome got as much as £220 per ton on the spot for their shell. The price had now dropped to £110, which was quite unprofitable. The only hope of keeping the industry going as a permanent and profitable business is for the Australian Government to fix such a price for shell as would leave owners a reasonable margin for all the risks they had to take, and to limit the export. If the Government would follow this course, and see that the pearl fleets were so limited that the supply did not overtake the demand to any extent, much could be done to improve the conditions of the Australian pearling industry, which was well worth encouraging in every possible way.

OUR TROOPS IN FRANCE

AN ANALYTICAL CLEARING HOUSE KEPT BEHIND THE LINES.

THERE is a town in France which for some time past has been particularly identified with the Canadian forces at the front. For one thing, there is established there a Canadian Army Pay Office, which controls the accounts for all the Canadian troops in France, paying out about seven million francs a month. In charge is a major of the Canadian Army Pay Corps.

In another part of this town is situated the Canadian Corps Headquarters, and the visit the Canadian newspapermen were privileged to pay to this analytical clearing-house was the first that had been paid by any correspondents of any nationality since it was established. There is no more wonderful institution in connection with the Canadian forces anywhere.

The Canadian officer who is in charge is a son of the Archbishop of Ottawa: You might think, from his amazing grasp of a million details and the marvel of the system he has largely helped to bring into existence here, that he would find it child's play to work out and control details for the merging of all the big department stores in the world, and have not the slightest difficulty afterwards in personally pulling the strings of the whole combine; and that he would always know to a fraction any and all details of the working of any one of them. This officer went to France with the first contingent to take charge of this base depot, and, till then, was Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General of Mobilization in the Militia Department at Ottawa, formerly a cadet of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and later with the R. F. A.

At this office are handled all matters of record, personal services, and discipline. Should reinforcements be required it is here that word arrives by wire, and within the shortest possible space of time the required troops have been requisitioned and are on their way, the fullest account of every item in connection with the transaction being entered in card indexes, and from there into books of permanent record. These books will show in a second exactly where, which, and when further troops were asked for and despatched, a debit and credit balance being drawn after each entry, men still available being the balance carried forward.

Casualties, too, all come in detail to this wonderful dissecting office prior to being forwarded to London and Ottawa, and are immediately entered and indexed. The colonel can refer in a moment to any officer or man serving at the front, ascertain where he is—if still with his unit—or what has happened to him if he has been wounded, and, in that case, the nature of his wound and the place to which he has been taken are promptly discovered. The office has details of every Canadian landing in France from the time of his arrival to the time he goes away.

An equally complete system applies to all soldiers' effects. All articles belonging to a man who has been killed which may be likely to have a sentimental value to those he leaves behind—a ring, a watch, a photograph, or, maybe, a little tress of hair—are collected and entered with the greatest carefulness.

The way the colonel has systematized every minute detail now saves an immense amount of time, and everything, at the present time, is in such a position of perfection that all trouble is avoided. But the thought and labor involved in originating a detailed system for every one of at least a dozen departments, it can easily be imagined, was no light task. It occupied many weeks of sixteen hours a day to do it all. Now the colonel presses a button and the thing is done.

The present condition of extraordinary order has grown out of the original work of two men—the Colonel and his batman. At the present time the Colonel can be in direct communication at any time with any unit at the front. On his desk he has a book containing a list of the duties of every man on the staff. "I believe that, in a way, we have got here a sensitive, articulate machine," said the colonel.

Although everything that is done suggests the regular clockwork of machinery, that is exactly the opposite to the way the Colonel looks for the work to be done. "I often explain to them," he said, "that I want them to always treat every case as if it were an exceptional case, and not a matter of rule. Particularly in connection with casualties we often receive requests out of the regular order of things, but we always try to do our best to comply with them. I think I may say we try to hold the balance between the army and the individual."

The visiting newspaper men were taken over several parts of the building, and in every portion they saw the same evidences of thorough order and minute system in every detail. Uniforms mended, docketed, and ready packed in lower rooms were just as easy to identify as were the names of those who had worn them. Everything was immaculately clean. On the colonel's desk there was no pile of papers, no unanswered correspondence, no scrap of paper of any kind. All that was there were five pencils, a pen, and two books containing the indexed duties of the staff. Alongside on the wall was a mapped-out plan of departments, divided into sections, half sections, and quarter sections. It was the finest business office I have ever seen.—The Globe.

No man has any rights that his wife's relatives are bound to respect.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

DIPHTHERIA AND SORE THROAT.

AT THIS TIME of the year there is apt to be a good deal of sore throat and diphtheria. Every sore throat should merit close attention. It may be diphtheria, even if there is little or no membrane to be seen. The throat from which Park and Williams, the noted diphtheria specialists of New York, secured the most virulent of diphtheria toxins had no membrane whatever. If your doctor has the slightest doubt about the case, have him take a swab for diagnosis, and while he is waiting for the report let him give the patient a dose of antitoxin. If it turns out not to be diphtheria, so much the better. If it is diphtheria your child, it may be, has twenty-four hours' start with antitoxin. Since it is well known that nearly all cases of diphtheria which are diagnosed given antitoxin on the first day recover; early dosage is of great importance. In the city of Philadelphia 761 consecutive cases of this disease were given antitoxin on the first day and all recovered. Sometimes children who have been given antitoxin show a rash, which is alarming to some people. It is a rash similar to that occurring in certain persons when they eat shellfish, tomatoes, or strawberries. All that the rash means is that certain persons are susceptible to protein or albuminous substances contained in the horse serum carrying the antitoxin. The contained antitoxin has nothing whatever to do with causing the rash. If a similar quantity of horse serum or broth were injected under the skin of a susceptible person a similar rash would occur. Some persons will never show a rash with serum of any kind, others who react easily to proteins show it every time. The rash, apart from the uncomfortable sensation, does no harm.

• • •

Dose of Antitoxin.

Then there is the question of the dose. There is no more danger from 20,000 units than there is from 1,000, so the large size of the dose need not cause any concern. Almost any case of first-day diphtheria should receive 5,000 units. If severe, especially if a day or two has elapsed, the dose should be much increased, say to 10,000 or 20,000 units. In laryngeal or advanced cases, the remedy should be given in the veins (intravenously) so as to get up against the toxin in the blood as soon as possible. Now that Diphtheria Antitoxin is supplied free by the Provincial Board of Health to everyone, we should hear less about death from the disease in Ontario.

Medicines are of certain value. Good tonics are useful. Good food at regular intervals is essential. It is most important that the patient have absolute rest in bed all through the course of the disease and for a week or two after the serious symptoms such as fever, rapid pulse, swelling of the neck glands have subsided. The heart muscle in diphtheria becomes weak and soft and some patients who have got about too soon have died suddenly. A case of sudden death in diphtheria must not be attributed to the antitoxin administered. It has nothing to do with causing death. It is harmless. Remember this about antitoxin—that it is, when used early and in proper doses, a most marvellous cure for a disease which twenty or twenty-five years ago was the terror of the mothers of our country. The fact that this terror of the disease has disappeared is due to antitoxin alone.

Membranous croup is diphtheria. It is diphtheria of the larynx or wind pipe. The reason it is so fatal is because the membrane and swollen tissues of the small windpipe of the child is easily plugged up, and as a result the child suffocates. Prompt and vigorous treatment is needed in such cases. In addition to the use of antitoxin (given intravenously) intubation, that is the introduction into the windpipe of a metal tube, is often a life-saving measure. Tracheotomy, since the introduction of intubation, is less used.

There are certain quack cures advertised for the prevention and cure of diphtheria. None of them are of any value. Moreover they only cause a waste of time and interfere with valuable measures.

In the prevention of a further spread to other members of the family, the most important measures are:—

(1) Keep them away from the sick patient and give each one 500 to 1000 units of antitoxin.

(2) Let lots of fresh air into the house and clean up the sick room after recovery or death of the patient.

LUDENDORFF IS SAID TO BE GERMANY'S GREATEST STRATEGIST

READERS, meet Mr. Ludendorff, Quartermaster-General Ludendorff, a German military hero discovered by Herbert Bayard Swope, the correspondent of The New York World in Germany. According to Mr. Swope, his name is inseparably linked with that of Hindenburg. Informed persons never mention one without the other. It is like Gott and the Kaiser. Outside of Germany General Ludendorff is not known. Being a junior to Hindenburg, and at other times being junior to other officers, it is natural that his name should not have been advertised when his seniors accomplished anything of note. But in Germany there are those who hold that Hindenburg's success is chiefly due to the fact that he had Ludendorff to advise him. Ludendorff, they say, is the real brains. He plans while Hindenburg applies the driving force. He must be a soldier of marked ability, for as soon as Hindenburg had taken charge in the East he sent for Ludendorff, who went by special train from Liege to East Prussia. When Hindenburg was made Chief of the General Staff he took Ludendorff to Berlin with him.

Ludendorff has never been interviewed, Mr. Swope tells us. Sometimes he has sat beside Hindenburg when this general was being interrogated by newspaper correspondents. On these occasions Ludendorff throws in a remark now and then. "We do not think of peace," he observed once. "No way but war leads to peace." Again he remarked, "There is no blind fate. Numerical superiority and danger exist only for the weak. A firm will commands fate." Hindenburg, as we know, is much more loquacious, and as he talks he now and then glances at his silent adviser with the idea of noting whether his words please. Sometimes in his fits of talkativeness, especially after having fraternised with what Lloyd George called the most deadly of England's foes, Hindenburg has attributed his success to his subordinates, and those who have followed Ludendorff's career suppose that it is chiefly this subordinate that he has in mind. The mystery of the Battle of Tannenburg, and the defeat of the Russians in the [illegible] rian marshes have never been explained either by Russia or Germany, and it is said that Ludendorff can alone expound the mystery, since he devised the scheme which won the notable German victories.

When the war broke out Ludendorff, then a general major, was transferred to the Belgian front, and commanded troops under Gen. von Emmich. His were the first German soldiers to enter Liege. His general had been killed the day before the city was entered, and he had to take charge. Through the night of August 6 he and his brigade huddled together on the hillside, not knowing what they were to do on the morrow. They had received no orders, and Ludendorff had to make the decision. He supposed other brigades had moved forward and taken the citadel, and so he concluded to advance. When he entered Liege, however, he was astonished to find that his were the only German troops in the city. A day or so later he turned up at Aix-la-Chapelle with despatches, and was hailed as one returned from the dead. In another fortnight as he was preparing to lead his troops into Namur word came to him that he had been appointed to Hindenburg's army, and he departed for East Prussia in a special train.

On his way to headquarters it is said that he sat up planning the campaign that eventually Hindenburg was to work out. In the course of his training Ludendorff, like Hindenburg, had visited Russian Poland and East Prussia, and he was conning familiar ground as he studied the situation. It was, as he then supposed and as the people of Germany believed, a most critical one. As we know now the Russian army that invaded East Prussia was a mere mob, thousands of fighters being armed with nothing more lethal than pitchforks. The invasion was dictated by political rather than military considerations. Russia wished to divert German strength from Belgium and give France time to prepare. Heroically the Russian soldiers did their part, but no well informed military man was astonished when Hindenburg checked the advance, defeated the Russians at Tannenburg and in the Masurian swamps and ended the invasion of East Prussia. But successful as those engagements were from a German point of view, they were not decisive. No large Russian army had been destroyed, and even when the Hindenburg steam roller started in the following spring, and Russian fortress after fortress fell, the Russian armies remained and defied Hindenburg and Ludendorff to either destroy or capture them.

The correspondent of The New York World believes that practically all the leading German generals have the same view of war at heart, that is to say, that the more terrible it is the more merciful it becomes, since it tends to burn itself out sooner. Hindenburg's stand with regard to submarines, which Ludendorff supports, is supposed to be dictated by diplomatic necessities. At bottom all German generals are one with Mackensen, who is called the "American eater" because of the ferocity of his views concerning the use to which submarines should be put. Both Hindenburg and Ludendorff are merciless in the manner in which they drive their own troops.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE WAR

CANADIAN WOMAN HAS TAKEN PICTURES ON WESTERN FRONT.

Few more interesting war visitors have come to Canada than Mrs. Florence Harper (formerly Miss Florence MacLeod of Woodstock). In Europe when war broke out, Mrs. Harper became closely interested in French and Belgian relief work and conceived the idea of taking pictures of the work and exhibiting them on this side of the water. Collaborating with her has been Captain Donald C. Thompson, who was shot through the eye while operating the machine. Mrs. Harper has a nine-hundred-dollar cinema camera, and her party includes her partner and his wife and the camera man.

Mrs. Harper, who is a woman of independent wealth, had been so actively engaged in French relief work under the Duc de Polignac that the French Government gave her every facility to get pictures at the very front itself. And though it had been Mrs. Harper's intention to use her pictures in her own lectures she has been unable to carry out her plans owing to a painful affection of the throat. Accordingly she has disposed of many of her pictures to well known publications and regular film companies, and recently started for the Russian front. Armed with a passport from Sir Edward Grey, as her husband is an Englishman, Mrs. Harper has nearly a hundred letters to important men in Russia and China, as she is going to the Czar's domains by way of Manilla and China.

Very business-like did the lady look as she bade farewell to Toronto, for her adventuresome journey will cover about two months before she reaches the Russian front, and she had cut off her hair to save unnecessary trouble. Mrs. Harper hopes to return by next spring and carry out her original plan of lecturing with her pictures. Such wonderful things has she to say of the marvellous spirit of the French. "Words seem feeble to convey any idea of the indomitable spirit of the whole French army," said Mrs. Harper, who also has much to say of the appreciation in France of Canadian soldiers and relief work.

Mrs. Harper likes her hospital pictures best, as they show the wonderful cures wrought by the new ambrine, a liquid paraffin. Men who have been most cruelly burned about the hands and face are soon restored to normal condition by this wonderful new treatment.

Whales.

The largest of all mammals are not the elephants, but the whales. A large elephant weighs about six tons, but the largest whale reaches the immense weight of 150 tons and would furnish four carloads of flesh and blubber. About forty different kinds of whales and dolphins are known, and, although they live in the open sea and look like fish, they are not fish at all, but are true mammals, breathing air and feeding their young on milk, like cows and horses.

Steer Bulldogging.

In perhaps the most daring sport of all—steer bulldogging—is revealed a feat you must see to believe. A man jumps from the back of his running horse as he overtakes a Texas longhorn. If his judgment is good he seizes the stiletto-like horns and drags the steer to a standstill. Then begins a struggle worthy of a gladiator as the man, using the horns as levers, bends and strains every muscle to throw the great beast by twisting its neck. If he succeeds in this the classics of the game require him to hold the steer's upper lip in his teeth, at the same time raising his hands for the count of four seconds; hence the term "steer bulldogging." This sport is absolutely harmless in every respect to the four legged animal, but his two legged competitor must use consummate skill, strength and nerve to protect himself and conquer his antagonist.—Charles W. Furlong in Harper's Magazine.

VENERABLE OTONABEE COUPLE CELEBRATED WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Weir Entertain Friends Including the Bridesmaid---and Groomsman of Fifty Years Ago---Pioneer Days Recalled.

(By One of the Guests.)

I was one of the hundred or more invited guests to the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Weir on the evening of New Year's Day, and as I rounded Downer's big hill I saw the best display of bunting I ever saw on a flag pole. At the top of Mr. Weir's 45-foot flag pole there floated a Union Jack fifteen feet long and eight feet wide, beneath that floated the flag of our Dominion, nine feet long and four and one-half feet wide. Beneath floated the Tricolor of France fifteen feet long and eight feet wide. It was a rich sight and admired by all the guests. The lawn and trees in front of the house were decorated with Chinese lanterns and the house was brilliantly lighted up. The guests arrived pretty well on time, and soon the house was occupied from upstairs to basement, and the sound of sweet and patriotic music supplied by the J. M. Greene Music Company was heard in all parts of the house. Every person seemed possessed with a kindly feeling for Mr. and Mrs. Weir and time went merrily on till supper was announced at 10 o'clock. The tables were abundantly supplied with food, and two large four-storey bridescakes trimmed in the Coleman Bros. usual handsome style and decorated with gold leaves and buds. A cake was placed on each of the two long tables. The guests were waited on by a set of young men who proved to be adepts at the business. After supper everything went on as merrily as marriage bells, in music, dancing, songs, recitations and games, till at 3 o'clock the master of ceremonies called a halt and demanded a speech from the groom.

A Hearty Welcome.

Mr. Weir commenced by bidding them, in the name of his partner and himself a hearty welcome, and thanked the neighbors and relatives for joining with them at this their fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, and felt the only way they could show their appreciation was by giving them a standing invitation to their diamond wedding. He said he was born fifty years too soon. Had he been born fifty years later he would be in France tonight. When he came into this world Otonabee was in a very crude state indeed, but not so bad as when his father came in 1832; and just to make the people of the present appreciate the comforts and luxuries they enjoyed, he related a few of the hardships his father endured. Of the first wheat his father grew he got a bagful, and carried it on his back to Rice Lake; got an indian to take him across the lake, then carried it twelve miles further to Cobourg, got it ground, and carried the flour home. After a few years he had to go to Toronto on some land business, and had to walk. He left home in the middle of the night in midwinter, without any boots; he had three pairs of socks and a pair of oversocks on his feet and three other pairs and some grub in his pockets. He walked to within nine miles of Toronto that day, and the next morning before breakfast he went to Toronto, got his business done, and came back to the nine-mile house that night. The next day he came home. Three years later they came to Otonabee. The English Government sent out an immigration party from Ireland under the guidance of Peter Robinson. He settled them in Otonabee and Douro. He built them a wind grist mill and a store on the west bank of the River Otonabee and called the place Petersborough. His father would take two bushels of wheat and his mother one bushel on their backs, carry it to the mill, wade the river and carry the flour home. Those were a sample of the hardships endured by the first settlers. Mr. Weir also gave an amusing account of his first acquaintance with the young lady whom he married about three years afterward.

Groomsman and Bridesmaid There.

Among the guests were the groomsman and bridesmaid of fifty years ago, Mr. George Taylor and Mrs. Elisa Stenton, who were also at their silver wedding twenty-five years ago.

Many enjoyed the dancing, and Mr. Weir and Mrs. Manlece in their neat waltzing and heel and toe polka brought down the house in applause.

Mr. Weir is an amusing and fluent speaker and kept the guests in roars of laughter, and that portion of his speech referring to the deeds of Old England, of the Dominion of Canada and of France was patriotic and sublime.

There was no lull in the amusements, not even for five minutes, from 7 in the evening until 4 in the morning, when the guests began to depart. The last sleighload of twenty-one left at five in the morning, singing "For he's a jolly good fellow, whom nobody can deny."

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

FOWLER
INDIVDUALITY

The exceptional care Dr. Fowler takes in making his "PEBLO" Glasses fit the contour of the face, centering the lenses over the pupil of the eyes, setting them out sufficiently far to clear the eyelashes, and otherwise making them exactly suit the face on which they are to be worn, is the reason why Fowler's "PEBLO" Glasses have that distinctly individual appearance. Every pair is made for the wearer, and the wearer only.

VINCENT EASTWOOD IS CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

VINCENT EASTWOOD
Chairman of the Board

Col. J. W. Miller Takes Chairmanship of Committee on Finance.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood was elected chairman for the 1917 Board of Education at the inaugural meeting held last night.

There were present Messrs. Eastwood, Miller, McGrath, Fowler, Denne, Crane, Gordon, and Hill, Dr. Burnham and Dr. Neal.

After Secretary Thompson had called the meeting to order the usual formal notice of the election result was read and the qualifications of the new members filed. He then called on the members to select their chairman.

Elected on First Ballot

The first ballot taken resulted in the election of Mr. Vincent Eastwood to preside for the year 1917 and he took his seat amid the applause of all the members.

Mr. Eastwood said he appreciated the favor and confidence the Board had conferred on him by selecting him for their chairman. The post was an honorable one. It did one good to look back on the records and see the list of past chairmen. As the city grew the responsibilities of the board were becoming greater and it was the duty of all to see that the money handed to them for educational purposes was properly and efficiently spent. A problem that would face the body before long was the completion of the education of many of our sons who had left school in order to go to the front and fight the Empire's battles. When they returned to their homes it was a debt due them that every facility be accorded to them in order that the boys might be fitted for the business and professional world. He thanked the board for the honor conferred on him.

Standing Committees

Dr. Burnham fathered the motion which appointed the following committee to strike the standing committees for the year: Messrs. Miller, Fowler, Denne, Crane and Burnham.

After a short deliberation the committee reported and the following were selected:—

Finance Committee— Col. J. W. Miller (chairman), T. B. McGrath, Dr. Burnham, and G. N. Gordon.

Property Committee— R. Denne (chairman-, Dr. Neal, A. A. Fowler, G. N. Gordon

COL. J. W. MILLER
Finance Chairman

Supervision Committee — John Crane (chairman), W. H. Hill, Dr. Burnham, R. Denne.

Committee on Appointments—W. H. Hill (chairman), and the whole board

Advisory Industrial Committee—V. Eastwood (chairman), T. B. McGrath, A. A. Fowler, Dr. Neal, John Crane, Col. J. W. Miller, D. G. Patterson, R. Anson, W. Sangster, T. H. G., Denne, J. Corkery, W. R. Breyfogle.

Industrial Commercial Committee —W. R. Morris (chairman), W. F. Johnston, A. W. Cressman, W. H. Hamilton, A. A. Fowler, Dr. Neal, G. N. Gordon, T. B. McGrath

Teacher Resigns

There was only one communication for the consideration of the board. Miss Ruth McFadden, teacher at the Queen Mary School, asked the board to accept her resignation to take effect Feb. 1.

W. H. Hill pointed out to the mebers that it was contrary to the rules of the board to relieve teachers from their contracts unless a doctor's certificate was forthcoming showing sickness. In this case he understood the young lady was to be married. It would be impossible to get a suitable substitute until Easter.

The board decided to leave the matter in the hands of the chairman, the chairman of the committee on appointments, and Inspector Mowat to arrange if possible for a suitable substitute, otherwise Miss McFadden be advised that the board cannot accept her resignation before Easter.

OBITUARY

JAMES STUBBS

James Stubbs, a well-known resident of this city, died at the family residence, 611 Water Street, last night after an extended illness. Mr. Stubbs was well known in all parts of the province, having always been interested in religious education and his lectures, with stereoptican views of the Holy Land and Scriptural subjects have been given in many of the leading cities and towns.

He was always an active worker in all affairs connected with George Street Methodist Church, where his loss will be greatly felt.

The deceased was 63 years of age and is survived by his wife, who was Miss Sarah Doneil, and a grandchild, Edgar Stubbs of Toronto. The late William Stubbs who died last spring was a son.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery. The funeral services, conducted by Dev. R. G. Peeves, B.D., will be held at 3 o'clock.

It is requested that friends will kindly omit flowers.

JAMES GEORGE ARMSTRONG

James George Armstrong, one of the most prominent farmers of Smith and reeve of the township for many years, died at his late residence last evening. For some years he had not been enjoying the best of health, but during the past summer he seemed to pay more attention to farm matters and his many friends were hoping that he would continue to recover his former good health. On Wednesday night he took a serious turn for the worse, and in spite of the best of care and medical attention he passed away.

The late Mr. Armstrong was born in Otonabee, a son of the late William Armstrong, of that township, where he resided until his marriage to Miss Elizabeth Roseborough when he took up residence in Smith on what was called the "Cherry Grove" farm. In all municipal affairs he took an active interest, serving for many years as councillor and later as reeve and member of the County Council.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Albert Garbutt, of Smith, and one son, Mr. Albert Armstrong, who lived with his father on the homestead. They will have the sincere sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Miss Edith Armstrong of Otonabee and Mrs. William Knox, of Norwood are sisters, and his brothers are Messrs. Samuel and John, of Otonabee, Bert, of Toronto, and Fred., of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held from the family residence, Lot 16, Concession 4, in the Township of Smith tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and proceed to Little Lake Cemetery. The funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. Gladstone McKee.

ARE NOW OUT OF DOBRUDJA

RUSSIAN AND ROUMANIAN FORCES EVACUATED PROVINCE WITHOUT LOSS.

LONDON, Jan. 5. — Except for a narrow strip of land projecting into the Danube marshes toward the Moldavian town of Galatz, all of Dobrudja has been cleared by the Teutonic allies of Russian and Roumanian troops.

Gen. Frederick B. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the British War Office, declares that the latest reports received in London from the Roumanian theatre of military operations indicated that the Russian forces had evacuated the province of Dobrudja without loss.

BRITISH TRANSPORT SUNK IN MEDITERRANEAN SEA

LONDON, Jan. 5. — The British transport Ivernia has been sunk by a submarine, it was officially announced tonight. The text of the report reads: "The Ivernia was sunk by an enemy submarine in the Mediterranean on January 1 during bad weather and while carrying troops. Four military officers and 116 soldiers, as well as 33 of the crew, are missing. The surgeon and chief engineer are among the missing officers."

The Cunard liner Ivernia, a 14,278 ton steamer, has been for some time in the British Government service as a transport, having at various times carried troops from Canada and between British ports and the Dardanelles.

SHIP BOUND FOR CANADA SUNK

LONDON, Jan. 5. — An Admiralty announcement of another case "of callous disregard for the lives of non-combatants came to light," says that nothing further had been heard of the British steamer North Wales, proceeding in ballast from Hull for Canada, which a German wireless despatch on Nov. 10 reported as having been torpedoed.

As only one piece of wood marked "North Wales" has been washed ashore, together with some bodies on the Cornish coast, it is presumed that the crew which took to the boats in the gales then raging were drowned.

HAIG COMMANDS 2,000,000 MEN

PARIS, Jan. 5. — A special Havas despatch from the British front in France says:

"Gen. Sir Douglas Haig today commands the largest army Great Britain ever levied on her soil. The number of effectives in the British army in France on January 1 was nearly two million men, completely trained and ready day or night to receive orders from their commander-in-chief.

This figure only refers to the British forces in France, and is exclusive of those employed in the defence of Great Britain, Ireland, India, Saloniki, Egypt, Mesopotamia and Africa.

A patriotic recital will be given by Helen Davies Sherry at St. Paul's Church tonight at 8.15, under the auspices of Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E. Admission, 50c.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

Steamship, wharf and warehouse property of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, St. John, N.B., in the hands of a receiver, were sold under foreclosure proceedings for $3,366,000.

Mike Raite, a Roumanian, was instantly killed at the Canadian Steel Foundries at Welland, being caught and wound around a shaft.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IS FIRST AID TO PATRIOTISM

Mrs Rogers Collins' Address to Red Cross Workers.

Patriotism means service, and as the ballot is but a means to better service, any women who do not want the vote and any men or women who try to prevent women from getting the vote, are not patriotic in the highest sense of the word, declared Mrs. Alice Rogers-Collins, of Toronto, who addressed the members of the Red Cross Society at the Public Library yesterday afternoon. The subject was, Woman Suffrage, First Aid to Patriotism.

The speaker said:

It is desired that the men and women of Ontario should present to the Legislature, when it next meets, a petition asking that women should be granted the right to vote on the same terms as it now is, or shall be, granted to men. The petition forms will soon be circulated in Peterborough, and it is expected that all thinking men and women will sign the petition.

Non-Partisan Question

To those who have not made a study of woman suffrage, a few points should be noted:—

1—Woman suffrage is not a partisan question. This is evidenced by the fact that, whereas it has been the Conservative Government in Canada which has recently withheld the right to vote from our women, in England it has been the Liberal Government. Better evidence still of the non-partisan character of the movement is the fact that the thinking men of both sides of politics are championing the cause of women.

2.—It is not a movement of women against men, and those who try to see it in this light cannot possibly understand the underlying possibilities of the movement. Anyone who has made a thorough study of the subject knows that the most rabid suffragettes are men and this can be proved by anyone who reads the book of the year by Israel Zangwill, "The War for the World."

4.—The woman movement is a movement of thinking men and women who are working together for the betterment of the world. The ballot in itself would be of no value. It is what lies back of the ballot that really means much to all lovers of right and justice.

The reasons why thinking women want the vote are:

First—Because they are qualified mentally and are no longer satisfied to be classed with criminals, idiots, and lunatics.

Second— Because woman's ideas on moral questions will help to raise the moral standard of our country.

Third—Because woman's first thought is the protection of life. For centuries men's minds have been training along commercial lines and the mothering of the nation is woman's work in life. With the ballot as an aid, woman will bring this mother instinct to bear on our laws, which in this line are almost unbelievable, as we see by the justice of the law for women as shown by the Criminal Code:—

The working girl or a shrub: Any employer who seduces a girl or woman formerly of good character, under 21 years of age, who is in his employ, is liable to two years' imprisonment. Anyone damaging a tree or shrub growing in park or garden may be imprisoned for five years. (Sections 213 and 510).

A promise of marriage: Seduction of girl under 21 of good character under promise of marriage, renders any man over 21 liable to two years' imprisonment, but for stealing metal, woodwork, etc., from private or public grounds or burial places, the penalty is seven years. (Sections 212 and 372).

Our daughters or our cattle: Anyone administering a drug or intoxicant to any girl or woman for immoral purposes, gets two years, but anyone maiming or wounding cattle or their young is liable to fourteen years' imprisonment. (Sections 216 and 510).

A young girl or a fishery: For seduction of a chaste girl of between 14 and 16 years, the maximum sentence is two years, but for placing lime or other noxious material that may injure fish in a stream the penalty is seven years. (Sections 211 and 510).

Money or morality: For procuring a girl under 21, not of known immoral character, the penalty is two years. For having in one's possession wittingly forged bank notes, fourteen years is the sentence, and for making counterfeit coin or regilding or resilvering coin to pass for gold or silver, imprisonment f life is the maximum sentence. (Se tions 216, 550 and 552).

Women are told that their d mand for the right to protect them selves means the death of chivalr

If men cannot give both just and chivalry, let them give justic

Infant Mortality

Infant mortality in Canada very high, as compared with cou tries where women have had the vo for some time, and have been i strumental in bringing into existen better laws for the protection life.

Women want better laws for care of the feebleminded and wo For over 23 years the National Cou cil has used its Heaven-sent "infl ence" (which one bears so much o to try to prevent the marriage feeble-minded persons, but our Go ernments have "no time" to atte to so trivial a matter. Influen alone is good; influence plus the ba lot will make things move mo quickly for the betterment of o country.

Child Labor.

Women also strike a blow child labor wherever they have t vote to enable them to do so.

Fourth.— A movement may judged of a good deal by the orga ization supporting and opposing Supporting woman suffrage are o ganization such as the Toron Teachers' Association, the Toron labor unions, the Dominion Allian the W.C.T.U., the National Coun of Women; while the only two o ganizations opposing woman suffra are the liquor traffickers and t traffickers in vice.

Fifth—Woman suffrage has be proved a success wherever it h been tried, and even those who o posed it before its trial, do not wi to revert to the old order of thing This, to a practical person, mea much.

There are many arguments again having woman suffrage in Cana but only one reason, and that is th it is new. Some of the argumen put forward are: Woman's place the home. This is the best argume for woman suffrage that could po sibly be put forward, for it is pecially in the things which aff the home that women wish to have say.

2—Women would usurp ma place. This is not the idea of t movement at all. Not man alo not woman alone, but the man a woman mind working together. God intended is what makes ha ness in the private home, or in t larger sphere of the great home State.

3.—Women are too emotional When we know that every year North-America alone, 60,000 gi are led into homes of vice, and th $125,000,000 is spent yearly in C ada for vice, is it not time that w man's emotional or pitying a life-protecting instincts be broug to bear on our national life?

4.—Women don't want the vo —in every reform that the wo has ever known only a few peo have been the workers. As examp of this, we cite higher education women and the emancipation of Southern slaves. Any new movem for moral improvement will only supported at first by broadmin people, and by people in whom sense of justice has been developed. The average people oppose, or at best feebly follow th who lead, till the movement is assured success.

5.—It is not time yet.—This is always said of any new moveme The time for woman suffrage is lo past due, and now is the time women to work for the vote show their patriotism. Some wo in Toronto, who are backed up money and liquor interests, are ing to make unthinking women lieve that it is unpatriotic to w for the vote now, because Red Cr work would be neglected. This i most erroneous idea, as the wo who are working hardest in the fr chise campaign are also the workers along all other patri lines and have not ceased their ing and knitting. Even Flore Nightingale felt in time of wa need of the ballot, and said, neither approve of women who cline the responsibility of wie the vote nor of men who shut women from the right to wield If Florence Nightingale lived she would probably say, "or of or women who shut out the w who wish to wield it, for the is hampered today even more by row-minded women who adopt dog-in-the-manger attitude, than men. What could be more patri especially at this time, than women should work while our

EVERY FARM IN COUNTY SHOULD HAVE AN ORCHARD ON HILLSIDE

R. E. L. Harkness, of Iroquois, Addresses Members of West Peterborough Board of Agriculture in Smith--Farmers in This Vicinity Have Not Seized All Their Opportunities.

The West Peterborough Board of Agriculture, the successor of the Farmers' Institute, held a meeting in the old Temperance Hall in Smith yesterday afternoon and evening, the speaker from the Department being Mr. R. E. L. Harkness, of Iroquois, Dundas County. Mr. J. J. Paget, of Cambaro, Wentworah County, was expected, but through some misunderstanding as to the date, or from some other cause, failed to show up. The officers of the board present were: President J. A. McGregor, whose well-tilled farm and comfortable home are near the scene of the meeting, and Secretary-Treasurer Allan B. Mann.

Mr. Harkness is a sturdy tiller of the soil, a man who is well pleased with the world for the simple reason that he has found his life work and he is not only proud of his calling but is filled with hope that it has a greater future ahead of it, that even half the possibilities of agriculture have not yet been attained. If Mr. Harkness' practical advice were followed life in the country would be a veritable Eden-like existence with beauty spots and garden plots on every farm.

The Afternoon Session

At the afternoon session Mr Harkness spoke on a variety of subjects, upon every one of which he invited discussion by those present. He showed the advantage to the soil and to the farmer's profit in growing clover, he warned them never to plant corn twice in succession on the same field if they would avoid the deadly smut, and described his own methods of handling the fertilizer which is produced on every farm. Mr. Harkness believes that the hills of Peterborough County are the ideal places for the raising of alfalfa, a comparatively rare crop in this district, and gave instructions as to how the seed should be selected and sown and as to the best methods for harvesting and saving the crop.

A Lecture on Fruit

At the evening session, at which a number of ladies were present, Mr. Harkness said at the outset of his address that while the farmers of Peterborough were well up in stock raising, they were behind in the matter of growing apples and the smaller fruits. Ther should, he said, be an orchard and a garden of the smaller fruits on every hillside in the country. Land worth $60 an acre will in ten years' time, if set out in fruit trees almost double in value and will yield a rich return on the capital invested. One acre of strawberries will, when intelligently handled, give a return of $1,100 a year and three men can set out the plants on one acre in ten hours. The vines in order to bring the best results should be protected during the winter by a coating of straw. Asparagus, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, grapes and muskmelons should be raised on every farm.

No orchard can be made to pay unless it is thoroughly cultivated and carefully pruned and spayed at the proper season, but if this method is adopted there is money in fruit.

Secretary-Treasurer Mann made a brief address and Roland Scott, a youngster who already has a proper pride in the calling of his father, gave a recitation setting forth the trials and triumphs of the farmer. The meeting was closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The board's last meetings for the year will be held this afternoon and evening at Buckhorn.

If you are suffering from constipation or sick headache, try Dr. Norvall's stomach and tonic tablets.

Be sure you get the genuine, as they are guaranteed and should they fail to give you relief, return the bottle to your dealer and he will refund your money.

ENNISMORE ELECTIONS

The township of Ennismore election resulted as follows:—

Reeve—John Young.

Councillors—Patrick Y. Crowley, William Harrington, James Sullivan, Clayton Telford.

Quite a vacancy was left in the council at the nominations, caused by the resignation of three of the old staff — Reeve William H. Crough, Councillors Jas. Guiry and Michael Perdue.

Patrick Y. Crowley will be the only one of the old council to take his place at the first meeting.

Mr. W. Harrington was in the Council before and his merits of the past elected him again.

The two junior members elected are Clayton Telford and James Sullivan, who, owing to their popularity, headed the poll.

St. Andrew's Church, Blyth, has called Rev. Geo. A. Telford of Carleton Place.

"The filling in of the National Service card is obligatory," says Secretary Peterson, of the National Service Commission, in a letter to the Montreal Board of Trade.

At the opening of the recruiting campaign in St. Catharines, Dr. Jessop, M.P.P., offered $200 for the first man to enlist, and J. D. Chaplin put up $1,000 for the next five men.

Holidays in Danish Islands.

The natives of the Danish islands (West Indies) apparently celebrate the national holidays of all countries with complete impartiality—the Fourth of July in honor of the country that wouldn't adopt them; the 14th of July because it is celebrated in Martinique and it would never do to let the French negroes get ahead of them; the birthday of the king of Denmark because the islands belong to him; the birthday of the king of England because the islands once belonged to him; the birthday of the German emperor in honor of the Hamburg-American line, and the birthdays of all the royal families, I presume, as well as many local and impromptu holidays of their own. They also are very scrupulous about observing the Sabbath, at least in its negative aspect.—E. E. Slosson in New York Independent.

Grand Trunk Commissary Car.

When the full account is written of Canada's participation in the war there will be no more interesting chapter than that dealing with the methods employed in transporting this great army of men from the training areas to the seaboard, over distances, in many instances, of thousands of miles, and thence from our Atlantic ports to the English camps and the trenches of Flanders and France. One side of this work which stands out most clearly is the use of the Military dining cars which have been specially created in Canada to provide our soldiers with meals while on their long railway journeys. No country in the world ever faced the problem of carrying over so great a distance by rail so many men and to meet the situation something new in railroad equipment had to be provided to attend to the cooking and serving of meals. The ordinary dining car, as compact as a watch in its arrangement, can feed thirty people at one sitting, but how to dine hundreds of men at one time was the problem. That it has been mastered in splendid fashion is a compliment to the dining car experts of Canada, and particularly to Mr. E. W. Smith, Superintendent of dining and parlor car service, Grand Trunk Railway System. So successful have been the methods adopted on the Grand Trunk that they have attracted the attention of authorities in all parts of the world and were recently inquired into by the United States Government.

The Grand Trunk Commissary Car shown in the illustration is the largest travelling kitchen ever devised. It is eighty feet long, has a full-sized hotel range ten feet in length, steam-cooking apparatus [illegible] refrigerator space and store-room capacity for many tons of provisions. Eight cooks work in it without confusion, while a passageway running the whole length of the car allows the military waiters to pass on their way to and from the coaches. In the movement of a battalion two of these cars are used, the military special being run, as a rule, in two sections. The commissary car is placed in the centre of the train in order that it is easy of access from all the coaches. When a battalion entrains the Commissary Department is always the subject of keen interest among the men in khaki. The military cooks are for the time being out of action. The comfort of the men, so far as diet is concerned, depends upon the railway's crew, in charge of a specially chosen steward. The system of service is explained to the soldiers by the steward at the first meal on the train. The non-commissioned officer in each coach appoints his own waiters. Punctually as the minute hand of the watch reaches the meal hour the waiters from the first car on the train and the last car walk through to the commissary. The cooks have been prepared for hours and everything is ready and piping hot. Along the great counter is spread the various portions of the meal. It is breakfast time and the morning menu calls for oatmeal porridge, meats, potatoes, bread and butter, jam and coffee. Two men take the big trays of meats and potatoes, another the bread, already sliced and buttered, another the porridge, another the coffee and so to the end. As soon as the first two coaches have been supplied two more squads of waiters arrive until all are served. Within fifteen minutes every man on the train is busy with his meal. Serving over twelve hundred men in fifteen minutes without fuss or furore means organization and that is the secret of this railway's method of handling the problem. The rule is that every man shall be amply supplied and nothing delights the cook more than to see boys relish some favorite dish so well that they come back for "more." Three fine meals a day make happy interludes on the long rail journeys. The appreciation of the officers and men for the service given makes the hard work necessary in carrying out the task a pleasure to the men concerned.

HISTORY OF SERIALS

The London "Standard" Was First English Paper to Print Serial

It is said that the Old Lady of Shoe Lane, as the now defunct "Standard" was nicknamed, was the first English newspaper to print a serial story, although to-day the papers which do not are to be counted on the fingers of one hand. The distinction of being the first weekly to do so belongs to the "Sunday Times." The story was "Old St. Paul's," by Harrison Ainsworth, and the author of that stirring story got a thousand pounds for the serial rights.

A well known editor, now dead, tells a good story of when Trollope came to him to arrange for the appearance serially of "Doctor Thorn." The editor offered the author two thousand pounds, but the latter wanted three. To this the editor objected, and the novelist offered to toss for the other thousand. The editor objected, and the matter was settled amicably. "But I felt unsettled," goes on the editor. "I felt mean. I had refused a challenge. To relieve my mind I said: 'Now that is settled, come over to my club, where we can have a quiet room to ourselves, and I will toss you for that thousand with pleasure. But Trollope wouldn't."

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was written as it ran, and the authoress intended to bring it to an end in twelve instalments. It ran to forty-three. For the serial rights Mrs. Stowe got $300, and thought she had done well. On the book she made $20,000 in six months on a 10 per cent. royalty.

The first title in "All the Year Round," in the very first number, dated April 30th, 1859, is "A Tale of Two Cities," and the opening words are, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." It ran for half a year, and was one of the most successful serials ever written.

STARS AND PLANETS

There is a good deal of difference, as science has found out, in the visibility of stars and planets when viewed through a telescope by daylight. This varies according to the color of the heavenly bodies. The red or yellow stars are much more easily seen than the white ones. Unless the telescope is focused with the greatest accuracy often an extremely bright star will be absolutely lost against a daylight field. As a general thing the planets are much less visible in daylight than stars. The reason for this is that the telescope diminishes the brightness of the planet's disc as well as of the sky, and, therefore, does not heighten the contrast as in the case of the star. Two of the planets, however, Venus and Mercury, are better observed in daylight than in darkness. Saturn on the other hand, can hardly be seen even through a five-inch telescope, except at night.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N.B.— Unauthorised publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

A peculiar result was the outcome of the election held in Guelph township, where three of the candidates for councillor received the same number of votes.

SPORTING NEWS

INDOOR BASEBALL AND BASKET BALL BY SENIORS AT Y.M.C.A.

Last night the Senior Employed Boys Class started the new term with the excellent attendance of 22.

Harold Copp (captain of the Tigers) with the good support which he received from his players, managed to defeat the Senators, under Capt. Brown, in a game by baseball, by the score of 4 to 1. In the course of this game Pitcher Brown's delivery was freely hit and Copp and Cottingham got some lucky hits. Catcher S. Thorndyke played a good game despite the fact that he received a foul ball in the face.

This game was followed by a game of basketball between the Athletics under Helson and the Indians, owned by McLeod. This game was won by the Athletics by the close score of 18—16. The stars in this contest were Helson, Cavanaugh and Thorndyke for the Athletics, and Eaton, Armstrong and McLeod for the Indians.

Next Monday there will be a basketball double-header — Tigers vs. Athletics and Indians vs. Senators.

PUCKERINGS

The intermediate game scheduled for Lindsay tonight has been called off on account of the poor condition of the ice.

McPhee, a former Peterborough player, is showing good form with St. Patrick's of Toronto.

Mooke Heffernan is a member of the team representing Crescent A.C. of New York, which will make a tour of Canadian cities later in the season. The New Yorkers will play here if arrangements can be made.

Uses For Sawdust

Sawdust is being put to an increasing number of useful purposes. Used as an absorbent for nitro-glycerine, it produces dynamite. Used with clay and burned, it produces a terra-cotta brick full of small cavities that, owing to its lightness and its properties as a non-conductor, makes excellent fire-proof material for walls or floors. Treating it with fused caustic alkali produces oxalic acid. Mixed with a suitable binder and compressed, it can be used for making mouldings and imitation carvings. If mixed with Portland cement it produces a flooring material.

Charge For Water

A lady and gentleman on a visit to an English seaside town went into a restaurant to get a dinner and each had a glass of water. They were charged one cent per glass. They said that in all their travels they had never before been asked to pay for water.

For diving in shallow water a helmet has been invented that serves the purpose without the necessity for a complete diver's suit.

GOLF

(By Grantland Rice.)

The passing of James Braid from the Ancient Green into Golf's Valhalla, where his place will be high, breaks up the most remarkable rivalry that any sport has ever known—the closest triple competition over the longest stretch of time.

Vardon—Taylor—Braid—the three greatest names in golf—and now only the two Englishmen are left, with Scotland's entry listed with the past.

Braid is gone—but the story of his twenty-year rivalry with Vardon and Taylor will live in sport for more years than most of us will ever know. It is the story of a competition unparalleled and unparagoned.

The Long War.

You have heard much of the rivalry between Cobb and Speaker — between Travers and Evans—between Travers and Travis.

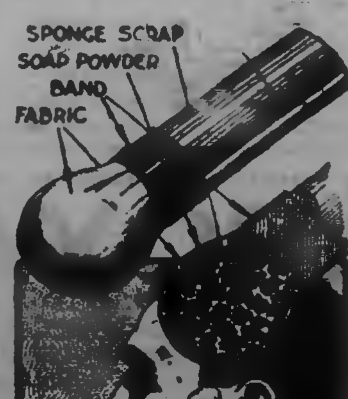
These rivalries in comparison seem as mere breaths of time. For Braid, Vardon and Taylor have been at war for golf supremacy for twenty years and the competition was the closest any game has ever shown.

Some time ago Harold Hilton arranged the complete figures for this twenty-year rivalry in British open championships, with the following remarkable results:

Vardon, 6,237 strokes.
Taylor, 6,238 strokes.
Braid, 6,231 strokes.

When you put three entries together over the hardest tests in the game, over the championship route for twenty years, and at the finish the third man is but four strokes away from the leader—the mere matter of par on one hole that calls for a drive and a pitch—the amazing evenness of the play can be appreciated.

THIS SHAVING BRUSH IS USED BUT ONCE



A sanitary shaving brush which is designed to be used but once and then thrown away has been patented recently. To a handle of wood, or other inexpensive material, is fastened a meshed bag, or gauze container, in which are pieces of sponge and a small amount of powdered soap. By immersing the brush in water and then applying it to the face a lather can be worked up readily. The device is designed for use in barber shops particularly so that each patron may have his face lathered with a brush used on no one else. Since inexpensive materials can be employed in making these brushes, they can be discarded after being used once.—Popular Mechanics.

IS A REAL DOG OF WAR

"MARS," BRINDLE BULLDOG WENT TO THE FRONT WITH ITS MASTER.

In one of the groups of wounded soldiers that recently returned to Canada from the front was a brindle bulldog by the name of "Mars," and he is now having his wounds treated in Toronto like any other battle scarred hero. Mars belonged to Pte. Elnetsky, who enlisted with a New Brunswick unit, and the dog went along with his master as the pet and the mascot of the battalion. Things went all right for Mars during the weeks of training in England, but when the time arrived for his master to go to France, the military authorities decreed that the dog could not be taken to the front. Here was a dilemma. This soldier could not part with his pet, neither could the boys of the battalion lose their mascot, and they had to think of ways and means to get the dog across the Channel.

After some hard thinking friends of Pte. Elnetsky decided to take half of his kit, and then "Mars" found a nice, clean kennel for a time in the kitbag of his master. It was scarcely a nice journey for "Mars," but as the private says, you would almost have thought that he knew that that was the only way that he could get across. But he got across all right, and took his place in the firing line, and seemed to enjoy the life. At first he did not like the shells or the noise, but he got used to it, and soon made himself a great diversion for the boys in the trenches.

All went right with master and dog until the battle of Festubert. Then the master was badly wounded in the left hand by shrapnel, and the dog also went down under the hail. Both master and dog were taken to the rear, and later both were sent to England, Mars having a ticket on his collar, really an identification card telling of his wounds.

When they arrived at Liverpool the doctor immediately saw to the dog, and before the master was looked after "Mars" underwent an operation without an anaesthetic and had the shrapnel taken out of his hip. Part of the shrapnel was taken from the nose, but not all of it, and it is still there.

When Pte. Elnetsky got his gold bar showing that he had been wounded there was a bar for "Mars," and to-day it is on his collar. When they were sent home it was not only the master that was glad, but Mars seemed to know that he was done with the hard life, and after arriving in the hospital at Toronto he sniffed around with pleasure and allowed everyone to fondle him and examine his bar of honor. Pte. Elnetsky will be in hospital for some time, and Mars is also back for convalescent treatment. This is undoubtedly the first time that a dog has come home recommended for treatment, but he will get it at the hospital.

When Buccaneers Reigned.

The importance of the island of St. Thomas arises from the fact that the harbor on the south side of the island, on whose borders the town of Charlotte Amalie is located, is one of the finest in all tropical America. From the days of the buccaneers its strategic advantage has been realized, for when the Spanish main was the happy hunting ground of the gentlemen of the black flag this harbor was their headquarters. Behind its outer hills the pirate craft found shelter from the open sea and were screened from the sight of passing ships until the moment came to pounce upon them. In more recent times it has played the role of the safe harbor for the thousands of vessels bound from Europe to Panama and surrounding territory, or vice versa. With a free port, where repairs, ships' stores and coal might be had, upon which there had been no levy of tariff duties, the shipping world found the harbor of Charlotte Amalie an attractive way station on most of its Caribbean routes.—National Geographic Magazine

Big News in Brief

Considerable criticism of the immigration service is being heard owing to the large number of Americans employed in Sarnia munition concerns, while local men are unemployed.

Brantford High Cost of Living Committee repeated its request to the Minister of Labor to investigate the prices of canned goods and urged the admission of oleomargarine during the war.

The Engineers camp at Petawawa has been destroyed by fire and many valuable maps and drawings are lost in the flames. Two days before Christmas the Headquarters Building was destroyed. An enquiry will be made.

JANUARY SALE OF COTTONS, SHEETINGS AND HOUSEHOLD LINENS. PRICES EXCEPTIONALLY ATTRACTIVE

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

are fighting for us, to bring in a measure which will make our country a better and purer place to live in. The dangers for our boys are not all in the trenches, and surely we must work for woman suffrage if we lay claim to being at all patriotic.

6—Women cannot fight—This reason is generally given by some venerable old gentleman, or by some person with physical disabilities. It has even been advanced by a man with a cork leg. Many men do not fight who vote, as we well know, and we must also remember that every time a soldier is born some woman risks death.

7—Women do not know about politics.—This is not to be wondered at as there has been no incentive to women to study politics. It has, however, been proved that, where women are enfranchised, their whole outlook has broadened, and they have felt the necessity and pleasure of becoming interested in the great affairs of State. This gives women an addition charm in the eyes of intelligent men, instead of making them "lose their charm," as is the idea held by anti-suffragists. They also claim that the enfranchisement of women will lead to friction in the home, but where there is to be friction in the home, a burned potato is much more likely to cause it than the vote. Friction in the home is much more often seen where there is an active and a passive mind than where two active minds are working in harmony together.

Women of Peterborough perhaps do not realize that in almost all other cities of Ontario the men have petitioned the Government to give their women the vote. The men of Peterborough assuredly value the womanhood of the city as much as men of other cities value theirs; so it rests now in the hands of the women of Peterborough to show that their city is progressive and patriotic. Sign the petitions, men and women of Peterborough, and show the spirit of Abraham Lincoln, who said, "I go for all sharing the privileges of the government who assist in bearing its burdens, by no means excluding women."

Mrs. T. F. Matthews, president of the branch of the Red Cross, presided over the meeting. Preceding the address by Mrs. Rogers-Collins, Dr. Jessie Birnie gave a talk on Red Cross work.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

CUNNINGHAM—SCOTT

A pretty wedding was solemnised on Thursday, Dec. 28, at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Victoria Harbor, when Maude Agnes, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Irwin Scott, was married to Capt. J. Grant Cunningham, B.A., M.B., elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cunningham, Moose Jaw, Sask. (formerly of Norwood). Rev. Mr. Gilmour of Penetanguishene conducting the ceremony. Capt. Cunningham is at present attached to the A.M.C. and has but recently returned from France, where he has been serving with the R.A.M.C. The bride wore her travelling suit of seal brown broadcloth, with waist of Georgette crepe. Mrs. Brown played the wedding march and during the signing of the register Lieut. J. N. Cunningham, brother of the groom, sang. After the ceremony dinner was served at the home of the bride. Only the immediate friends were present. Capt. and Mrs. Cunningham have left for a short honeymoon trip.—Norwood Register.

Mrs. John French and daughter have returned to Renfrew after a visit with Mrs. Colson at the Oriental Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. McEachren, Toronto, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Muriel Isobel, to Capt. Elsworth Flavelle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Flavelle, the marriage to take place the end of January

Mrs. (Dr.) T. H. Bell, formerly Miss Eva Denne, who volunteered her services to the staff of Canadian nurses and has been in England for over a year attending to the injured Canadians, has arrived in Canada. It is expected that she will arrive in the city tomorrow on a visit to her brothers and sisters. Her many friends will be glad to welcome her home.

Mrs. R. Junkin and her grandson, Jack Croft, have returned to Toronto after visiting Miss A. A. Turner and Mrs. G. W. Mulligan.

The Misses L. and K. Condon have returned to St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, after spending the holidays with their parents at Lakefield.

Lieut. Claude Rogers, who has returned to Canada on furlough, will arrive in the city this afternoon on the express from the East. Lieut. Rogers has been serving at the front in the mechanical transport.

Mrs. Alice Rogers-Collins is the guest of Mrs. Walter Roger during her visit to the city.

It is expected that Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., will arrive in the city tomorrow, although no definite word to that effect has been received. Capt. Burnham will address a meeting at Pembroke tonight.

His numerous friends will be glad to know that Capt. (Dr.) Frederick, stationed at Saloniki, is rapidly recovering from his illness.

PIECE OF CLOTH USED AS CLUE

ATTEMPTS ARE MADE TO IDENTIFY VICTIM OF BIG FIRE.

The bones of a human frame were recovered from the ruins of the Quaker Oats plant some days ago and the identity of the victim has never been established. A remarkable circumstance in connection with the case is that a fragment of the jumper worn by the dead man was found near the remains. This piece of clothing was taken with the remains to the undertaking rooms of Lane & Eano, where it was carefully washed. It was found to contain a patch skillfully inserted and of different material than that used in the original garment. The woman who repaired the torn jumper will be able to identify the remains by that means. The garment has been submitted to several of the bereaved for inspection, but so far no one has been found to clear up the mystery.

WEATHER FORECASTS.
Sunday: Light snowfalls and much the same temperature.

London, Jan. 6th, (C.P.)---The Spectator predicts that another and a far more serious appeal for peace is coming from Germany before Easter when the seriousness of economic conditions and a terrific food Shortage may compel Germany to end the war. This information the writer Says is based on Information from Highest Sources.

London, Jan. 6th, (C.P.)---The German Emperor in an order to the army and navy charges that the allies were rejecting his peace offer because they desire the destruction of Germany. He declares all responsibility for further sacrifices all on his enemies and that "with God's help German arms will enforce the understanding they have rejected."

CHAIRMANSHIPS FOR COUNCILS COMMITTEES

Will Ald. McIntyre Leave the Board of Works?

The inaugural meeting of the new City Council will be held on Monday morning at 11 o'clock. There will be quite an interest taken in the main business before the aldermen, the selection of the standing committees for the year.

The chief interest centres on the chairmanship of the different committees, and the Board of Works receives first consideration as the chief spending body. It is understood that Ald. McIntyre is not anxious to take on the arduous duties which he filled so capably in 1916, and the talk is that Ald. Weir will be asked to accept the post. Of course, if Ald. McIntyre wants it he can have it.

It is said that Ald. Wm. Langford aspires to the chairmanship of the Finance Committee, which Ald. Stratton has held for two years.

New industries for the icty will be one subject for the serious consideration of the new Council, and if Ald. Weir is moved to the Works Committee, Ald. McIntyre may be asked to assume the chairmanship of the manufacturers' board.

Fire Committee.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee ruler this year will find a lot of responsibility on his shoulders. Motorising of the trucks is bound to be accomplished, and the selection of the best apparatus will be a source of much worry to the members of this committee. Some of the members are advocating Ald. Dobbin for this work as he has had wide experience with details which are essential to the head of this committee. There are some who suggest Ald. Duncan and Ald. Langford.

Property Committee.

The Property Committee was well guided by Ald. Saunders last year, and the opinion is that he should be left to continue his good work. There are several important matters to be arranged for, one of which is a proper system of night soil collection.

Railways and Parks.

Ald. Langford has been suggested as the most suitable chairman for the railways, parks and boulevards body and his familiarity with every need of the city and his experience on the different committees tends to leave him without opposition for it.

Legal and Reception.

Ald. Dobbin filled the chairmanship of the Legal and Reception Committee very satisfactorily last year, which was an exceptionally hard one owing to the number of claims made against the city, to say nothing of the reception end of it, which required a great amount of time and attention. Ald. Duncan will likely be asked to assume this responsibility.

The committee to select the standing committees will be appointed at the morning session and will report to the regular meeting, which has been called for 2 o'clock in the afternoon. This will give the aldermen who wish to go, a chance to be in Toronto for the reception to the Quebec "Bonne Entente" delegation in the evening.

LAST CALL FOR SERVICE CARDS

MUST BE AT POST OFFICE NOT LATER THAN MONDAY.

Monday is the last day for the National Service cards to be returned to the post office.

All those having cards which were not filled out when the collector called will either hand them to the carrier on Monday or drop same in letter box on the street before Monday p.m., in order to be in time for the final check of the city.

After Monday p.m. all cards not then returned will have their names and addresses forwarded to Ottawa as refusing to sign same.

The last district will be collected Monday via Water street from Brock street south, also west to Stewart street from Charlotte to Wolfe street, also Rubidge and Reid streets from Charlotte to Sherbrooke street and King street to Park street.

You can greatly assist the carriers in the final results and also save your names from going to Ottawa by having cards ready and handing the same to the carrier as he passes along the route, or by dropping cards into the street letter boxes not later than Monday.

Kindly give thie your very careful attention. If those who have not received cards will apply to their regular carrieer, the cards will be gladly furnished.

Be sure to have the cards in before Monday night.

Lieut. Claude Rogers, of the supply column of the mechanical transport department in France, arrived home last evening and was warmly greeted by his relatives and a host of friends. He was granted two months leave of absence and will be able to spend five weeks of it here. borough.

There was nothing of an eventful nature happened on the voyage home. Quite a few of the Canadian officers on leave and special duty came over on the same steamship.

Lieut. Rogers at his residence on Belmont avenue received many of his friends last evening.

MAY LEAD TO PROSECUTIONS

FAILURE TO GIVE INFORMATION ON HIGH COST OF LIVING.

MUST MAKE RETURNS.

OTTAWA, Jan. 6. — Prosecutions under the Crothers legislation are to be undertaken. The Minister of Labor, in accordance with the terms of the new law, is applying to the Attorney-General of Ontario for authority to prosecute a number of persons in this province to whom questions have been addressed by the department, and who failed to supply the information asked for. The department, it will be remembered, called for return as to the existing stocks of the necessaries of life, prices at which they were purchased and the selling price. Returns have been made to the department in great numbers, but in many cases the information is restricted, and it is to reach the men making such returns that action is now being taken.

The Labor Department has, of course, power to check up the returns made to it by sending its own inspector into the warehouses, stores, etc., of the individuals or companies, but this does not relieve the latter of the necessity of giving full and accurate information. The returns which have been made show a remarkable condition existing in connection with the marketing of food products, clothing, etc., in Canada. It is found that the practice under which a wholesaler dictates the prices at which his goods are to be retailed has been a very common one and in some cases it has been found that bonuses have been paid for the purpose of holding up prices charged to the consumers. The new Act provides that any agreement affecting prices is criminal. The Department of Labor is taking steps to nullify all such agreements and to enforce penalties in cases where the provisions of the new law are further disregarded.

HERMIT NOW HELD IN JAIL

LIVED IN CABIN IN WOODS BACK OF BUCKHORN.

County Constable Archie Moore made a trip into Harvey township back of Buckhorn yesterday and took into custody Earl Love on a charge of vagrancy. The man had been living a hermit's life in an old cabin in the woods. His appearance showed that he was a stranger to a barber, and his ragged condition bespoke a life estranged from comforts.

County Magistrate Langley this morning remanded him for a wek.

PTE. CAMPBELL KILLED; PTE. McINTOSH WOUNDED

CASUALTIES IN TAYLOR FAMILY.

Word was received yesterday at the Indian village at Chemong that Pte. Isaac Taylor and Pte. Charles Taylor, two of the reservation men who enlisted with the 93rd Battalion had been wounded. Isaac is one of five brothers and Charlie is an uncle.

Pte. Woodrow Suffers Amputation of Right Arm.

Dr. Edwards, M.P., of Cataraqui, member for Frontenac, and Col. Ponton, of Belleville, will deliver addresses at the Armories Sunday night in the interest of recruiting and for the 247th Battalion in particular.

The 247th Band will play.

Official notification of two more casualties among the men of the 93rd Battalion bring the total to 44. Pte. Thos. E. Campbell, who before joining the ranks was employed by Wm. Kavanagh, of R. R. No. 2, Indian River, was illed in action on Dec. 22nd while fighting with the Mounted Rifles.

Pte. David John McIntosh, of 348 Stewart street, was admitted to No. 6 General Hospital at Frevente on Dec. 28th, having sustained a gunshot wound in the head.

Information received by Rev. Jas. Price says that the injuries received by Pte. W. Woodrow, formerly choirmaster at St. George's Church, were so serious that the right arm had to be amputated above the elbow. Pte. Woodrow is progressing favorobly. His numerous friends here will hope for continued progress and that he will soon be invalided home. Several relatives of Pte. Woodrow are taking their part in the war.

Two More Recruits.

The strength of the 247th Battalion was increased by two this morning when the following were attested:

Pte. Thomas Davis, 346 Aylmer street.

Pte. A. J. Bristol, station agent at Coe Hill.

Battalion Orders

J. H. SMITH IS ALDERMAN IN THE EAST-SIDE WARD

Recount Before Judge Huycke Confirms Returns as Sent in by Election Officials --- Majority is 4.

J. H. Smith will be one of the aldermen from the East Ward for the next two years. A recount of the ballots cast in Monday's election was held before Judge Huycke this morning and Ald. Smith's majority of four as returned by the election officials was confirmed.

There was not a single error detected in the count that was returned to City Clerk Armstrong on Monday night and published in Tuesday's papers. Every ballot box containing the votes for aldermen was opened and the contents recounted. At every polling subdivsion there the original count was correct. Two ballots had been rejected by the officials at one one subdivision, and this judgment was confirmed by Judge Huycke.

The number of ballot used added to the blanks returned to the city clerk, when totalled, corresponded exactly with the number sent out. In every particular the election in the East Ward appears to have been conducted according to legal requirements.

The hitch in the returns occurred in the Coon's subdivision, where John T. Craig was the deputy returning officer. With John Devlin, the poll clerk, he counted the aldermanic ballots first and found 34 for Evans and 45 for Smith. There had been 90 ballots cast according to the poll clerk's record, and the missing vote was the start of the mixup. Twice more the votes were counted, and each time they made it 38 for Evans and 41 for Smith, the ballots probably being misplaced upon the table. When the two candidates went into the room the votes were again counted twice with the latter result, and Mr. Smith conceded the election of his opponent. If the returns had been signed then Mr. Evans would still be in office.

Mr. Craig telephoned to City Clerk Armstrong concerning the missing ballot and was told that be would probably find that he had placed it by mistake in the box containing the votes cast for members of the School Board. This proved to have been the case when the latter votes were counted. Once more the ballots cast for the aldermanic candidates were carefully separated and recounted and the election of Mr. Smith became a certainty.

Ex-Ald. Evans never suspected or charged any irregularity in this matter. The majority was so narrow that he asked for a recount simply to assure himself that a mistake, slight and natural, had not been made in the first summing up.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for Ald. Smith, and W. H. Moore, K.C., for ex-Ald. Evans. Besides these lawyers and the principals in the contest, City Clerk Armstrong was in attendance

The two rejected ballots were cast at Hill's store. One was not marked at all and the other had a cross opposite the name of each aldermanic candidate.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1917

THE EFFICACY OF PRAYER.

THE EVANGELICAL churches of the city, in a commendable spirit of fraternity, united in a week of prayer in which petitions were put up for the success of the Allies' cause, for the preservation of the heroes at the front, and for an early and conclusive peace. All the services were well attended, and the different denominations were drawn closer together for a common purpose. Commenting on this fact, a reader writes that the present is a time for action and not for prayer, and that the petitions will avail nothing to accomplish the end in view. The cynic, it seems, must be with us always as an affliction.

Before the followers of Robert Bruce struck a blow at the battle of Bannockburn, the sturdy Scotch yeomen knelt to pray while the might of England advanced against them in all the pomp and circumstance of war. Providence may not have interfered directly, but the very spirit which induced the warriors to send up a petition nerved their hearts and strengthened their arms for the fray.

The Covenanters of old worshipped on the hillsides with their weapons within easy reach and with eyes ever on the lookout for the murderous Claverhouse and his dragoons. Theirs was a muscular Christianity. Their faith was backed up by deeds. The same sentiments animated those who met in special worship in the various city churches during the week. They were not content to pray and leave the rest to Providence when the petitions were ended. Every man and woman who attended those services is today more firmly than ever resolved to do their utmost to help on the work in which they invoked Divine co-operation.

"Father, if Thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless not my will but Thine be done," prayed the Nazarene, as the shadow of His doom fell heavily upon Him and in His agony of soul He sweat as it were great drops of blood. The cup was pressed upon Him until it was drained of its last dregs, but in the darkness of the garden an angel was sent to comfort Him.

That comforter gave Him strength to bear the indignity of arrest, the humiliation of a mock trial, the blows of His captors, the crown of thorns, the jeers of the mob and the agony of His sacrificial death.

The Peterborough mother or wife who prays that son or husband be spared in the trenches may be called upon to drink the myrrh of suffering and grief, but the Comforter will surely give them strength for the trial.

WHY WOMEN SHOULD VOTE.

MRS. ALICE ROGERS-COLLINS of Toronto, who addressed the members of the Red Cross on equal suffrage the other day, seems to have not only advanced valid reasons why women should vote, but to have successfully met all the objections put in by the opponents of an extension of the franchise.

One claim made by those opposed to the reform is that no such contentious legislation should be introduced while the war is in progress. It is, however, the part that woman has taken in that struggle, the sacrifice she has made, and the intelligent efforts she has put forth to aid the cause, that have emphasized her claim to enjoy equal rights with man. The war has called for measures more radical than the conferring of the ballot on women, and the people have accepted the new conditions without a murmur.

Some of the arguments used against equal suffrage if recognized as of weight, would result in depriving a large proportion of the male population of the franchise. Some women know infinitely more of politics than do some of the men who blindly hand in a ballot without any idea of the issues involved and unable to furnish any reasons for voting a certain ticket beyond the sentimental one that their fathers were of that political stripe before they themselves were born. Give women th right to vote and they will have an object in studying political conditions, and the majority will be perfectly able to explain their faith.

Another objection urged against equal suffrage is that the majority of women do not want the vote and would not use it if they possessed it. Why not apply the same reasoning to men? It is evident that right here in our own city a large percentage of the men do not prize the privilege of the ballot when about two-thirds of the qualified voters failed to turn out at the municipal elections last Monday.

The liquor party have always been opposed to equal suffrage, but the power of that party is broken and is no longer to be taken into consideration.

Social reforms, more closely associated with the welfare of the masses that inland revenue taxes or customs duties, are achieved slowly. Give women the right to vote, and the millennium will be hastened, for on these questions the feminine intuition is more infallible than that of man.

Woman will never come into her own, she will never have the same standing in the industrial world, no matter how efficient she may be, until she is made a force in politics. And labor and capital will continue at odds while one sex is used as a weapon to keep down the wages of the others.

A BOON TO THE BEREAVED.

ONE OF THE WOMEN widowed by the fire in the plant of the Quaker Oats will receive $20 a month so long as she remains unmarried and the same amount for her children until they reach the age of 16 years, or $480 a year in all, a small income it may be, but infinitely better than if she felt herself suddenly called upon to take up the burden of life alone without means or income from any source. If that woman's husband had left her an accident insurance policy of $10,000, that amount invested would yield her at five per cent, an income of $500 a year, only $20 in excess of what she now commands. Paying the premiums on such a policy woudld have meant sacrifice on the part of the family of a wage-earner. The income from the Government comes without one cent of outlay by the beneficiaries.

The memory of the late Sir James Whitney will always be associated with the Workmen's Compensation Act, which will ever be regarded as one of his greatest achievements in the interests of the people. The preparation of the law extended over a period of years, in which time every act of the kind in existence in other countries was thoroughly investigated by experts.

No legislative enactment so extensive in scope was ever put in force and found so free of defects that called for amendments. It is, too, just as carefully administered as it was thoroughly prepared.

A great measure of the success of the Act must be credited to Mr. A. E. Peck, who was a member of the Legislature when the bill was before the House. He spared neither time nor labor in investigation and constantly met the workingmen in his constituency to ascertain their views on a subject which so closely interested them. To have had a hand in such legislation is the best memorial any public man could possibly establish for himself.

WELL WORTH THE MONEY.

THE ST. THOMAS TIMES says that to elect a mayor, eleven aldermen and five school trustees, cost that city at the rate of 22½ cents a vote, and propounds the question, "Did the electors receive value for their money?"

Perhaps not. St. Thomas, like other cities, was simply made the victim of the vaulting ambition of men who had no objection to run for mayor or other office so long as they were involved in no expense. But it was certainly worth something to read these gentlemen a lesson and to shake their ineffable regard for themselves.

Then, again, the election gave the voters in the Railroad City a chance to re-elect to the School Board at the head of the polls a citizen who is on duty at the front. The election may have come high, but the opportunity to make such an enviable patriotic record should be considered well worth the outlay.

PENNY BANKS IN SCHOOLS.

PENNY BANKS have been installed in some of the schools of Ontario with a view to teaching children the principles of thrift, but the experiment is not universally regarded as satisfactory. The School Board of this city have decided against this innovation. Penny banks are now regarded as nothing more nor less than an educational frill, of which there is already an abundance.

In the first place, these banks make a lot of extra work for the teachers, who are required to receive the deposits and to make a record of them.

Any system designed to teach thrift lacks in the first essential if it fails to teach the children to earn the amount of money which they place in these banks. There can be no true economy unless something of self-denial is involved. Children make no sacrifice, they learn nothing of thrift, when they hand over to their teacher, a banker for the occasion, a sum of money that has been given them for that purpose.

Any funds deposited by the children in this way is just so much taken from the parental bank account. Hence it is not fair to regard several hundred dollars in the penny banks as so much extra saving.

The savings banks of today will accept deposits as low as $1, and this should tend to encourage thrift among those of small means, without cumbering the school curriculum with a new fad.

Finance Minister White is preaching thrift on the part of the people. If he divided a sum of money equally or pro rata among the people with the understanding that they at once deposit it in the post office saving banks and so practically surrender all control of it, his proposition would be no less effective in inculcating the principles of thift than is the proposition to have children place the overflow small change of the family in a school savings bank.

Another objection to the penny banks is that they create class distinction and breed jealousy among the pupils. The child who hands in a dollar once a week is apt to boast of his financial standing and to look down upon the pupil who deposits a penny or five cents.

There is a place for everything in this world. That for banking is certainly not in the public schools, especially when the system of operation teaches the child nothing as to the means of earning money or of the methods of conducting financial transactions. The child is merely made a messenger between his parents and the bank. He adds nothing to the wealth of the country by his dabbling in finance.

A father with $100 in a savings bank could easily transfer the account to his boy of tender years and then boast that the little follow had increased the capital of the nation by that amount, a contention that would certainly not survive a calm investigation.

Hundreds of Girls Lose Positions Because They Are Slow to Observe

Failure to note familiar things—mental sloventiness.

These may be the bars between you and that position you expect to get or didn't land.

Hundreds of young applicants — school boys and girls who thought they had an education —are wondering why they were turned away from stores recruiting sales forces for the fall rush.

About 95 out of every 100 such applicants don't pass the easiest kind of entrance exams into the business world.

"The qualities we look for most and find least often," said George C. Pratt, "are initiative and the sense of responsibility.

"And the most common fault is the amazing lack of observation, as shown in solicitations for positions."

Manager of Seattle's largest department store, Pratt, has made employment a scientific study there and in Boston. To him an application cards is a blue-print of the candidate's mind.

"Look at this card," he indicated, "filled in by a girl of 23 who wants a position in our millinery department. An eighth grade graduate, she has mispelled her own name, that of her native town and state and the prefix to her telephone number.

"Such mental slovenliness shows that she would be hopeless as a saleswoman,

"She wouldn't properly size up a prospective customer. She'd probably try to sell gaudy hats to women who plainly wanted modest ones, or vice versa. She'd not note the condition of her stock, and she'd lose trade.

"Her case is typical of hundreds who seek positions here and in other establishments.

"Again, applicants claim they are tactful when they are constantly quarreling at home; say they are cheerful when the family knows them as grouches, profess a sweet disposition when it actually hurts them to smile.

"As a girl is in her own home so she will be in the business world. And most employers find out what her home record is!

"You can't snap at your mother, growl at your brother or sister, shock your father and expect to attain success in the commercial world, even if you should happen to land a position!

"I would advise young men and women seeking positions to hold up to themselves the mirror of their home conduct and to remember that a happy frame of mind is almost essential to salesmanship.

"Both home and schools might profitably devote more effort toward including a sense of responsibility into youngsters who want to or must go into the business world.

"They should be taught that the store, the office, the shop are for the first two or three years a continuation of school, a working laboratory where studiousness is to be further developed, instead of a mere job to be held down at so much per week.

"Then that great disparity between the number of young people who apply for positions and the few who are qualified to land, will be materially reduced."

WAR BUSINESS LOST BY U.S.

(New York Sun.)

American manufacturers will not wax very fat on munition contracts in 1917, according to information obtained in high banking circles. Because of the increasing production abroad and in Canada, and the attitude of the Federal Reserve Board in warning bankers against the purchase of British and French treasury bills, it was learned that more than $100,000,000 worth of munition contracts have ben cancelled by Great Britain in the last three weeks.

Great Britain has placed with Canadian manufacturers contracts for war supplies valued at between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000 since the Reserve Board's warning. These contracts were originally intended for American firms. The placing of the contracts with Canadian firms has caused an almost unprecedented situation in this country, in that Canada probably will have to come into this market for money to finance her huge munition contracts. This will practically mean, bankers say, that American interests will furnish the money by which Canadian firms will reap profits which were intended for American firms.

Indications also are that there will be a general curtailment from now on of all buying by the Allies in this country. None of the options for further munition contracts is expected to be exercised by the Allies, but there will be no cancellation of contracts for raw materials in the American market. Companies producing iron, steel, copper and other products will not be hit by the new move by Great Britain, France and Russia.

The cancellations and objections of options have been distributed over the whole field, it was explained, so the action will not bear heavily on any one particular section, but practically all of the large concerns which have gone in for manufacturing munitions since the beginning of the war have had their contracts clipped. Nearly all of these contracts have carried cancellation clauses.

It is the intention of the Allies, especially Great Britain, to strengthen their credit position in this country, in the next year, bankers said. To this end Great Britain will ship about $50,000,000 more gold this month. There will be no change in the plans to issue a new loan of about $250,000,000 in the middle or latter part of this month, however. Informal conferences are being held by bankers in regard to this new financing.

The new Canadian loan will not be brought out, according to present indications, until spring, or some time after the British loan has been floated.

Canada's Generosity.

It used to be said in the days before the war that the British people underrated their Empire because they were unable to comprehend any values that could not be expressed in terms of pounds, shillings, and pence. The reproach no longer holds good.

We have learned from the enthusiasm and devotion of the men of the Dominions that the meaning of the Empire needs to be expressed in terms of higher value. But even on that old sordid basis we are finding out week by week and month by month how much the Colonies are worth to the Motherland. The Province of Ontario has contributed a magnificent gift of £250,000 to the "Our Day" effort in behalf of the Red Cross funds. And this is but an installment of the £400,000 which this one province of Canada is voluntarily subscribing to the splendid cause.

Canada's generosity is indeed inexhaustible. For hospital equipment the Canadian Government contributed, to begin with, £20,000. The women of Canada subscribed £60,000, of which £20,000 was to go to the War Office and the balance to the Admiralty for Haslar Hospital. These and similar contributions in addition to the splendid hospital equipment for the treatment of Canadian wounded which the Dominion has herself provided.

There are other gifts and benefactions innumerable. How many people in this country are aware that Canadian help has been received towards the relief of distress in our east coast holdings [illegible]? Yet that is so. A [illegible] contribution of wheat given to this country by Canada was sold and the money devoted to this purpose. Now comes this magnificent gift from Ontario. And all this on top of a contribution of close upon 400,000 of the finest soldiers in the world!—London Daily Mail.

"He who puts his hand to the plow," screamed the cross-roads orator, "must not turn back!"

"What is he to do when he gets to the end of a furrer?" asked the auditor in the blue jeans overalls.

Not Too Deserving

"At an early age he was thrown on his own resources."

"And now he's a millionaire. Think fo that!"

"Oh, he doesn't deserve much credit. His resources at the time were several millions."

"Your narrative is too highly colored," remarked the editor, returning the bulky manuscript.

"In what way?" inquired the disappointed author.

"Why," replied the editor, "in the very first chapter you make the old man turn purple with rage, the villain turn green with envy, the hero turn white with anger, the heroine turn red with blushes, and the coachman turn blue with cold."

At a recent political convention, two of the delegates were discussing the religious affiliations of prominent statesmen, when one of them a Baptist, observed to the other, who was a Methodist:

"I understand that William Jennings Bryan has turned Baptist."

"What?" exclaimed the Methodist. "Why, that can't be!"

"Yes, it is," persisted the Baptist.

"No, sir," continued the Methodist; "it can't be true. To become a Baptist one must be entirely immersed."

"Yes, that is true; but what has that to do with it?"

"Simply this," returned the Methodist, "Mr. Bryan would never consent to disapear from public view as long as that."

Former President Taft was visiting a Southern home, and after he had gone an old colored mammy was asked what she thought of him. "Well," she replied, "he looks like he'd be regular to his meals, suh."

Little Tommy had repeatedly been warned by his nurse as to the awful results of biting his nails, but all to no avail, so, as a last resource, she decided on harsher measures to cure him of the pernicious habit.

"If you persist in biting your nails," she remarked, "you will swell out like an air balloon."

Little Tommy believed, took heed and didn't bite his nails for two whole days. On the third day Tommy's mother was giving a party, quite a swell affair, and Tommy, on his promise of good behaviour, was allowed to partake of tea with his mother's guests.

As soon as tea was over, Tommy edged close up to a very corpulent lady of the party, gazed at her in silence for a few moments, and then exclaimed, in a loud, awestruck voice:

"I see you bite your nails."

HINDENBURG AS SAVIOR OF GERMANY BECOMES NATIONAL HERO

HINDENBURG! Hindenburg! Now you'll see a change! It was the day on which Hindenburg was appointed and Germany had gone mad with joy—or was it relief? With all their faith in the "Hanover dug-out" and with all their pride in the "Savior of East Prussia," there was mixed in this new excess of Hindenburg worship a kind of childish relief. One could measure the depth of the depression before by the degree of relief afterwards. Yet it would be unwise to attempt to depreciate either Hindenburg's military talent or his personal influence. It is of the latter that I am most convinced, because I met and spoke with people who had come from his immediate entourage. I met soldiers who had fought as near him as it is given to German soldiers to fight, and I met also an officer, maimed for life, who had helped to win Hindenburg's victories. These people all carried with them the reflection of that extra ordinary confidence and coolness which Hindenburg appears to inspire.

It is personal magnetism of a high quality, and all the more remarkable because the man himself lacks (if I can trust my informants) any of that refinement of feature or character which usually accompanies a really magnetic individual. He has willpower, no doubt, but that is oftenest a quality consciously exercised. His influence of his staff and his men, on all those who are in his neighborhood, is, as I gather, not consciously exercised. It is an effortless influence, and therefore in a captain all the more valuable. And yet, because it is a personal magnetism, unconsciously exercised, it appears not to be communicable. He can inspire his officers and his men, but he cannot send his officers to inspire the men in the west.

Hindenburg is not without his critics. For if, as I admit, his name works miracles among the troops and among the ordinary population (I can speak at any rate for Saxony and the south), I found that in Berlin and to some extent also in Frankfort men of high standing shook their heads.

You must remember that one reason why Hindenburg is so popular with the "veering crowds" is that they believe him, as he believes himself, entirely independent of any but military considerations. People have suspected that England has been spared for this reason or that, reasons political, commercial, or financial. They have believed that the zeppelins and submarines could "bring England to her knees," but that the Kaiser has been too much under the influence of Ballin and other financiers and business men and has been swayed by them to admit of some hesitancy in the use of "Germany's deadliest weapons." I need not tell you that the old aristocracy, who before the war hated as they feared the Kaiser's new "aristocracy of commerce" (you remember how the said "Germany's diplomacy must become commercialized") were the first to hint that the "Ballin crowd" were too much in the counsel of the Sovereign.

And this it is what in Berlin, as I found, makes sundry shake their heads. For they fear that the German Government will never again dare to deny Hindenburg anything that he demands, even if the granting is political suicide. He might and he may at some moment demand some measure at home or abroad that may shatter German finance, throw yet other enemies into the scale against her, or (if another measure he is said to favor be really contemplated) let out of the German hand one of Germany's poor last trumps; and still neither Hollweg the Chanceller nor Another would dare refuse him, for if afterwards some scheme of his fell short of fulfilment the wrath of Germany would turn on those who refused him his request. He is become, so some fear, the Dictator of Germany, greater than Kaiser or Parliament, and the future of the war and of the years after the war depends on the wisdom of one man.

WINTER WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Our Canadian winters are extremely hard on the health of little ones. The weather is often so severe that the mother cannot take the little one out for an airing. The consequence is that baby is confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms; takes cold and becomes cross and peevish. Baby's Own Tablets should be given to keep the little one healthy. They regulate the stomach and bowels and prevent or cure colds. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GERANIUMS VS. FERNS

Some Plants Need Much More Care Than Others

Geraniums are, perhaps, the best known and, on the whole, the easiest to keep of the various varieties of house plants. Give them as much sunshine as possible, for they will bloom in winter when all other flowers fail. Ferns, palms, rubber, and cacti plants require special care and handling. The same is true of begonias, fuchsias, ivy, umbrella plants, etc. Ferns require a strong light to do their best, but will grow fairly well with only a little sunlight. As we think of ferns growing in the woods, we are apt to think they require no sunlight, but it is not so with the different types which come from the florists. They are raised for indoor culture, and must receive sunlight and just enough water to keep them moist. If they are kept too wet, or allowed to go bone dry a few times, it will be the ruination of the fern, for they cannot thrive under such conditions.

A PIONEER BISHOP.

A Man Who Went Into the North-West in the Early Days.

Bishop W. D. Reeve, one of the Dominion's pioneer clergy, Bishop of Toronto, recently celebrated the 25th anniversary of his elevation to the episcopate. Bishop Reeve's first real experience of Canada was gained in the North. It commenced after he had bid farewell to his home in Lincolnshire, England, and with his bride of two weeks he entered upon his work in the wilds of the Mackenzie River district. That was in 1869 when he was in his 25th year, and had behind him a sound training acquired at the Theological Training Church Missionary Society College, London. Fort Garry, which is now Winnipeg, had then a population of 200 people. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Reeve passed through on their way to Fort Simpson, which was to be the centre of their labors for many years. The people there were scattered over a wide area; they were chiefly trappers and to fulfill his mission among them the Bishop had to perform his circuit on snow shoes or by sleigh in the winter time, and by boat or canoe in the summer. Naturally, in that wild country at that time he had many thrilling experiences, and in addition to being missionary he had to act the part of physician to the sick. Altogether Bishop Reeve spent 38 years in the Mackenzie district, being at one time Archdeacon of Chipewyan, and later the first Bishop of Mackenzie River. During those years many changes took place in the habits of the people. The country passed from a wild state to one of civilization. In 1874 Bishop Reeve was ordained a priest. In 1891 the University of Manitoba honored him with the degree of Doctor of Divinity, and on November 29, the same year, he was created a bishop at Holy Trinity church, Winnipeg. It was only because of advancing years, and the strenuousness of the work in the North that Bishop Reeve sought a change, and in 1907 he moved to Toronto to be assistant to the late Bishop Sweatman.

SCOT AND ANZAC

ONE OF GREAT FRIENDSHIPS RESULTING FROM THE WAR.

The friendship between the Australian troops and the Scottish regiments is the subject of a recent article from Captain C. E. W. Bean, the official correspondent with the Australian troops. Australians and New Zealanders, he says, have fought alongside of many good mates in this war. I suppose the Twenty-ninth Division and the navy and Indian mounted batteries and infantry were their outstanding friends in Gallipoli; in France, the artillery of a certain famous regular division and the Scotsmen.

It is quite remarkable how the Australian seems to forgather with the Scotsman wherever in France he meets him. You will see them sharing each other's canteens at the base, yarning round each other's campfires at the front. Wherever the pipers are, there will the Australians be gathered together. I asked an Australian the other day how it was that he and his mates had struck up such a remarkable friendship with a certain Highland regiment camped near them. "Well, I think it's their sense of humor," he said. We looked at him rather hard. "You see, they can understand our jokes," he said. "They don't seem to take us too serious like."

And I think he had just hit it. The Australian has a habit of pulling his mate's leg and being on his guard against a leg-pull in return. He has sharpened his conversation against the conversation of his friends from the time he could speak—his uncles are generally to blame for it; they started him on the path of repartee by pulling his legs before those same legs had learnt to walk. As a result he is always sparring in conversation—does not mean to be taken seriously. And the Scotsman, cautious and always on the lookout for a feint, is seldom caught by it. If he is, the chances are he gives it back—with interest.

It is a grim, dry variety of humor and it goes with a wonderful grim, sturdy nature. Few people here ever see a Scottish regiment passing without waiting to watch the last square figure swing down the road, if they have the time. Many look at the perfect swing of the kilts and the strong bare knees. For myself, I can never take my eyes off their faces. Every face is different from the next. Each man seems to be thinking for himself, and ready to stand up for his own decision against the world.

The friendship between the Scot and the Australian, Captain Bean continues, persisted into the fighting. "A Scottish unit was alongside of the Australians for a considerable time. I was told that an Australian working party, while digging a forward trench, was sniped continually by a German machine gunner out in front of his own line in a shell hole. One or two men were hit. The line on the flank of the working party happened to be held by Scottish troops. An officer from the Australians had to visit the Scottish line in order to make some preparations for a forthcoming attack. He found the Scotsmen there impatiently waiting for the dark to go over the parapet and get that sniper—they could scarcely be held back even then, straining like hounds on the leash. The sniper was bagged later with his machine gun. It was a mixed affair, Scottish and Australian, and I believe there was an argument as to who owned the machine gun."

Too Few Producers.

Writing in The London Magazine, Sir Leo Chiozza Money, the well known M.P. and economist calls attention to the fact that the trouble with Great Britain's economic system in the past was that the country had too few producers.

Previous to the war, he says—and he quotes figures to prove it—only one in three of the British male population aged eighteen or over was engaged directly in the production of industrial wealth. Continuing, he says: "As a matter of fact, if we are to abolish poverty in our land, it is necessary to draft not only more women but more men into productive industry. Thus only can we get that plentiful supply of material commodities which is necessary to obtain better houses, better home furnishings, better supplies of material for comfort, culture, sport and recreation. We must have more producers." There is no doubt that Britain is going to be a very changed country after the soldiers come back from the war. The best brains of the old land are already being devoted to the solution of the problems that will then arise and after the manner in which it has stood the test of the greatest cataclysm in the history of the world it is very unlikely that British genius will prove itself unable to devise an economic system whereby there will be work for all and a return for that work which will spell happiness and contentment for all grades of society.

Bonus for Regularity.

To prevent irregular attendance in the Second Chamber of the Dutch Parliament, the Prime Minister, Mr. Cort Van Der Linden, has brought forward the proposal that members shall be paid an extra fee of $2 for every sitting they attend. He proposes also that the yearly salary of members shall be raised from $800 to $1,200, with right to pension. According to the Dutch constitution, not only is the Chamber debarred from taking any decision unless more than half its members are present, but it may not even deliberate. The "absenteeism" has not only sometimes prevented parliamentary sitting opening at the appointed hour, but has even occasionally entirely stopped the Chamber from proceeding with its business.

New South Wales, Australia, is expecting a large immigration from the United States after the war.

When Greek Meets Greek.

The middle aged American who was having his shoes polished looked down at the busy Greek lad who was bent on turning out a good job.

"Well, young man," he said, rather patronizingly, "I suppose you are learning to speak good English. By the bye, how long have you been in this country?"

"'Bout one year, meester," was the prompt reply. "You live here some time, I guess?"

"Oh," answered the other vaguely, with a mysterious smile, "I've been here over a year."

The young Greek regarded his customer with suspicion for a moment and then, appearing to understand that he was being quizzed, said swiftly, with a dazzling smile: "Well, meester, I give you complimen'. You speak very good language for so short while!"—New York Post.

Song Writers and the Bowery.

The Bowery in New York has produced some of the greatest American song makers. It was among the old Bowery haunts that Stephen C. Foster found the inspiration for "My Old Kentucky Home," "Darling Nellie Gray," "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," "The Old Folks at Home" and "Gentle Annie." And down the old Bowery Howard and Charles Graham often wandered while humming to themselves the initial strains of such songs as "My Dad's the Engineer," "A Picture That Is Turned Towards the Wall" and "Two Little Girls In Blue." But Foster and the Graham brothers, however, saw few of the golden nuggets that now gladden the hearts and eyes of song writers.—American Magazine.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physican.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath, or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes, all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected, organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally, because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

CARDIFF AGAINST PEACE

Welshmen Denounced Premature Discussions—"Cromwell Needed"

As a counterblast to a meeting of the National Council of Civil Liberties Cardiff arranged a great patriotic demonstration. On the platform were representatives of every shade of political thought, and with typical Welsh fervor the great audience of working men and women roared its determination to "turn the false peace agitators away from Cardiff," as Mr. C. B. Stanton, the miners' M.P., put it at the end of a rousing speech. "If the Government is too weak to stop mischievous people from poisoning the minds of some of our best boys in the colliery districts, let us show them that Cardiff is strong enough to call a halt." Deafening cheers indicated that every one of his hearers was with him in this sentiment.

Major-General Sir Ivor Herbert, who presided, read a message from Lord Rhondda saying, "I wish we could infuse a dash of Cromwell into the Cabinet. They are showing too much leniency to peace prattlers and conscientous objectors." Mr. Lloyd-George wrote: "You have my best wishes for the success of your meeting. No faint-hearted nation, no feeble-hearted person ever achieved any great purpose." A resolution registered emphatic protest against "all agitations in favor of a premature and forced peace as calculated to create dissension in a time of national crisis and to advance the interests of the enemy."

M.C. After the V.C.

Second Lieut. Albert Jacka, V.C., of the Australian Infantry, awarded the Military Cross, led his platoon against a large number of the enemy who had counter-attacked the battalion on his right. The enemy were driven back, some prisoners they had taken were recovered, and 50 of the enemy captured. He was himself wounded in this attack. The gallant Australian was a lance-corporal when he won the V.C. at Anzac. His four comrades killed or wounded, he held a portion of a trench single-handed against the attack of seven Turks, all of whom he killed.

Kaiser in His Power

At a meeting at Llangollen Captain Best said that when the Kaiser was six years old he was taken to see the British fleet in the Baltic, and his (Captain Best's) father was told off to carry the boy up the gangway. "I've heard my father say many times times," added Captain Best, "'What a pity I didn't drop the little beggar overboard.'"

Friends Tell Friends
ZUTOO
Stops Headache

Five years ago ZUTOO was practically unknown in Canada.
To-day, thousands and thousands of men and women depend on these little harmless tablets for quick relief from Headaches.
Their fame has gone from friend to friend—from town to town—from coast to coast.
Wherever there are headaches, there should be ZUTOO Tablets—they cure in 20 minutes. 25c a box—at all dealers or by mail postpaid. B. N. Robinson & Co. Regd., Coaticook, Que.

F. M. Dela Fosse's Report on the Public Library.

In his annual report on the Public Library, F. M. Dela Fosse, the librarian, suggests the teaching of classes in reference work, adding that as the Library Committee is adding books of great value to this section of the Library every year, the training in seeking out information is bound to be of incalculable value to any who engage in it.

The report says:

Save in one respect, the Library has had the most successful year in its history. An exception has to be made in the matter of circulation, which shows a falling-off compared with 1915 of about ,000 volumes. This in itself is not a great matter, as the main falling off has been in Fiction. There has been an encouraging increase in the circulation of books relating to Useful Arts and Sociology.

The total number of juvenile books taken out during the year was 8,745, a marked increase over the preceding twelve months, the number for 1915 being 8,012.

1,346 Volumes Added

During the year 1,346 volumes have been added to the Library, of which 1,048 were for adults and 298 for juveniles.

The large amount of fiction purchased is accounted for by the fact that many of the books that had proved to be favorites with the public were worn out, and these had to be renewed in addition to purchasing the best of the current fiction.

About twelve hundred dollars' worth of literature has been purchased during the year. At a meeting of the Library Committee held early in the year it was decided to purchase a certain percentage of books for each section. The committee felt that in this way they would be best attending to the interests of the public.

84 Volumes Presented.

Eighty-four volumes were presented to the Library, besides the usual quota received from the Dominion and Ontario Governments. The Library is indebted to the following donors: Miss Maguire, Capt. Burnham, M.P., New Zealand Government, the Smithsonian Institute, Mr. O'Dell, Farm and Dairy, Journal of Commerce, W. R. Morris, C. C. Abbott, South African Government, Carnegie Library (Ottawa), Carnegie Peace Endowment, Mr. Croft, G. A. Gillespie, Esq., M.P.P., the Misses Nicholls, and Mr. Pogue.

Some 450 volumes have had to be retired, every one of which has been a book of fiction. In cases where the volumes were not too far gone to be of service, they were made up in bundles and sent for the use of our soldiers overseas or to the local recruiting rooms. Capt. Best took charge of those destined for overseas use, and Mrs. Scadding of those for local service.

In the mending department a great deal of useful work has been done, and I am pleased to add that it has been done at smaller cost to the Library than in any former year. Four thousand five hundred books were repaired and thirty-one magazines bound and made ready for the shelves.

The Library building has been made use of by many patriotic societies, chief among them being the Red Cross Society. The basement of the building is still being made use of by the ladies as a storehouse for some of their supplies.

The members of the staff have shown efficiency in their work, and I have nothing but praise for the way in which they have striven to do their various duties.

The amount received in fines, etc., during the year was, as will be seen from the monthly statement, $174.38. In this amount must be included $11 for tickets purchased by borrowers living outside the city limits.

The Library has received at all times the courteous attention of the Review and the Examiner, and the assistance rendered by these journals in disseminating information concerning its activities is not to be measured in words.

Classes in Reference Work.

Before closing this report I would like to suggest, for the consideration of the Board, one way at least in which a very useful work might be accomplished, and that is in the teaching of classes in reference work. If the heads of the various educational institutions in the city could hit upon some method whereby certain classes could be sent to do reference work along specified lines of work, I think the Library would be in a very good position to aid them both with books and suggestions. Our Library Committee is adding books of great value to this section every year, and the training in seeking out information therein is bound to be of incalculable value to any who engage in it.

Five thousand one hundred and sixty-eight tickets have been issued since the Library was opened. During the past twelve months 690 tickets were issued; 169 of these were to juveniles and 40 to Normal School teachers.

A northern Ontario man who recently purchased a Cobden hotel was fined $200 and costs for selling liquor.

With $22.00 already pledged, the campaign to be held next week to raise $7,000 for Galt Y.M.C.A. is already assured.

Give Now to the Patriotic Fund

If ever you would give-give now

"BEAR YE ONE ANOTHER'S BURDENS"

'Tis an old saying—sometimes a hard one—but worthy of all acceptation.

Take a present-day illustration. British Columbia—out there under the setting sun—is helping to bear Ontario's burdens. She has sent to the front—that shell-torn front in France—a larger proportion of her manhood than has Ontario.

Therefore it comes to pass that we in Ontario are being asked to help in bearing British Columbia's burdens by helping its soldiers' families. It's a fair, a just, request. We all are in the same boat. We must bear one another's burdens. And if one Province, not rich in money, makes heavy calls on the Patriotic Fund, the richer Provinces must help out their poorer neighbor. Under a plan of each Province caring only for its own, the Province sending no men would spend no money. It would neither Fight nor Pay.

Ontario will need about six million dollars in 1917 for the families of its own soldiers. The Canadian Patriotic Fund is asking for that sum as a minimum below which the richest Province in the Dominion will not go. But, as a matter of fact, the Fund hopes Ontario will do still better—will bear another's burdens by helping out gallant British Columbia.

How stands the Western Province? It will require, in 1917, two million dollars for the families of its men at the front. That is one-third of Ontario's requirements. But Ontario has probably more than seven times the population. British Columbia asks no favors. With only about 350,000 people—not rich in this world's goods, but rich in pluck and good red blood—it is undertaking to raise One Million Dollars for the Canadian Patriotic Fund! That equals $2.86 per head. Ontario, if it raise six million, will be giving about $2.38 per head.

But the Western Province will still be short One Million Dollars. Where is this sum to come from? Eastern Canada. And Ontario, if it wishes to help, can do so only to the extent to which its gifts to the Fund exceed Six Million Dollars.

A lot of money, isn't it? Yet less than British Columbia is giving, if measured on a per capita basis, and far less if measured by ability to pay. There will be no difficulty in securing the Six Millions if three plans are followed:

THREE PLANS FOR HELPING THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND:

1. If all County Councils make reasonably large grants to the national Fund.
2. If all towns, whether separated from their counties or not, will undertake campaigns.
3. If all citizens, in town or country, contribute fairly according to their means.

As to No. 1. The County Councils are beginning well. Simcoe has decided to largely increase its grant. For 1917 it will be the generous sum of $120,000. Victoria, another county patriotic to the core, has doubled its grant, jumping it from $2,500 a month in 1916 to $5,000 in 1917. The majority of the County Councils will decide at the January sessions how large their grants will be. Public opinion will have great influence on the Councils. Every county ratepayer, sympathetic towards the Fund, should write or speak to his representative on the Council, endorsing a liberal grant.

As to No. 2. Many towns ignore the duty of holding campaigns. This applies particularly to towns which pay a county tax. Yet this tax never represents a fair or just contribution to the Fund from men of moderate or large means. Practically it is based on what the poorer men can afford. The richer should give much more, and they can be reached only through a popular campaign. To relieve anxiety these campaigns should be held in January or February.

As to No. 3. Patriotism of the individual is the basis of the Fund. Everything is built on it. If he will not make some sacrifice for the sake of the mothers, wives and children of the men at the front, the Fund suffers, and they suffer with it. The average family on the Fund requires $200 a year from it. It is the duty—it should be considered the Privilege—of every Canadian stay-at-home to ask himself: For how many weeks, at $4 a week, must I, in self-respect and in gratitude, take care of one of these families? If my county taxation for this purpose means that I am taking care of only one family for one week when I could do more, am I doing the right thing?

The answer to these questions will be found when he sits down and mails his extra gift to his local Branch.

Ontario is being asked to assure the Canadian Patriotic Fund that it can depend on having six million dollars in 1917 for the families of Ontario's soldiers.

Four million of these dollars must be secured from individual subscriptions. If there is no Branch of the Fund in your town or county send your subscription direct to the Head Office, Canadian Patriotic Fund, Vittoria street, Ottawa.

ONE OF THE BEST POULTRY SHOWS HELD IN THE CITY

Winners at Guelph Will be Exhibited Here Next Week.

Secretary Archie Brault is a busy man these days. Entries for the annual show of the Peterborough Poultry Association close today, and judging from the large list already received, the full capacity of the market hall will be taxed to its limit. The beautiful window hangers are quite an attraction, reminding the public of the dates of the show, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 9th, 10th and 11th. Miss Yates always of so much interest in her lectures—will be here again with an entirely new demonstration outfit supplied by the Department of Agriculture. Then something new here is a sales class, where the breeders have placed on sale overstock of pure breds, which is a decided opportunity for those whose ambitions to get into the good ones at a reasonable price is possible.

Hamilton Patriotic Association decided to ask the city and Provincial governments to grant $1,000 each for the purpose of securing 500 men in one month for the Tiger Depot Battalion.

BRAILA TAKEN BY MACKENSEN

TEUTONS WIN ROUMANIA'S CHIEF COMMERCIAL CENTRE.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Danube port of Braila, Roumania's chief commercial centre, has been captured by Mackensen. Troops of the Danube army advancing from the south and west united with the Bulgarian forces on the Dobrudjan side of the city to effect its capture.

The reduction of the last defences of the great Roumanian granary was rapid. German and Austrian battalions broke through the Braila bridgehead position yesterday and in a desperate house-to-house struggle captured Gurgueti and Romanaul, two towns within the city's defences. In this operation 1,400 prisoners and six machine guns fell into the hands of the attackers.

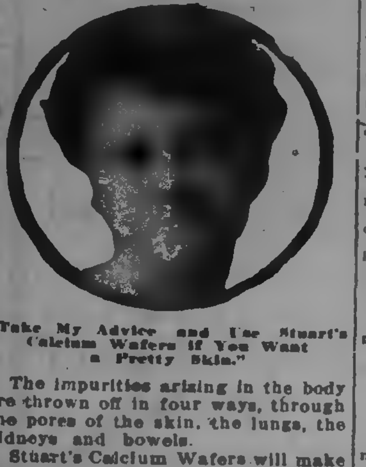
SUMMER DESSERTS

In the hot summer time, do not provide pie and such like heavy desserts for your family. Remember that light dishes, such as snow pudding with custard sauce, chocolate blanc mange, prune whip, frozen fruit omelet, coffee gelatine, etc., with some freshly baked sponge or loaf cake is much more appealing on a warm day, and far more easily digested. Rhubarb foam is seasonable and easily made: Two cupful of diced rhubarb, 3-4 cup of sugar, 1 tablespoonful cornstarch, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoonful of vanilla. Boil the rhubarb in half a cupful of water till tender; then add sugar and cornstarch, moistened with a little water; boil several minutes. Beat the egg whites till stiff, add the vanilla, and fold the rhubarb mixture into them. Serve very cold. If liked, sliced bananas may be served under it.

FACE FASHIONS THIS YEAR

Demand That the Complexion be Made Clear and Clean and Nothing Aids the Skin Like Stuart's Calcium Wafers

All styles of dress this year make it necessary that every woman remove pimples, blotches, etc. This condition is brought about by reason of the fact that the colors used and style of hair dress throw the face in a position of prominence that will make pimples, etc., very hideous if they exist.



"Take My Advice and Use Stuart's Calcium Wafers if You Want a Pretty Skin."

The impurities arising in the body are thrown off in four ways, through the pores of the skin, the lungs, the kidneys and bowels.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make the blood clean. They will throw open the pores and in only a short time you will find the entire system free from marks of blood impurity.

The fresh, red, rosy hue of the blood flowing freely close to the skin, will give you the complexion you desire.

Obtain a box from ny druggist anywhere. Price, 10 cents.

Y.W.C.A. NOTES

What Canada needs today is strong, pure, God-fearing girls and women. It is the duty of every girl and woman to learn every practical thing she can to make her strong of mind and body, and above all else, spiritually.

The gymnasium girl knows that the erect head and well-poised body means greater respect for one's self and a broader outlook upon life. In fact, the entire being is changed through judicious physical training.

An invitation is extended to all girls who find it possible, to visit the gymnasium for the month of January. After the first of February the classes will be preparing for the exhibition and will be closed for visitors.

The club girls know that a jolly evening in the green room or club room, the open fire, popping corn or toasting marshmallows, helps not a little to promote good comradeship.

The quiet talks at the Sunday afternoon service help to start the week stronger and better fitted for the daily task.

A pastoral letter from Cardinal Begin will be read in all the churches of the Quebec diocese on Sunday next, exhorting the people to fill in the National Service cards.

An agricultural college on wheels is being fitted up by the officials of the O.A.C., preparatory to the cars starting out on a two months' tour of western Ontario, the start being made on the concession line north of Guelph next Monday.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

FOWLER INDIVDUALITY

The exceptional care Dr. Fowler takes in making his "PEBLO" Glasses fit the contour of the face, centering the lenses over the pupil of the eyes, setting them out sufficiently far to clear the eyelashes, and otherwise making them exactly suit the face on which they are to be worn, is the reason why Fowler's "PEBLO" Glasses have that distinctly individual appearance. Every pair is made for the wearer, and the wearer only.

The NEW EDISON

Of all the wonders Edison has achieved, none have brought more unalloyed joy than his artistic triumph in the Re-Creation of Music. To think of it!—Through his patient experimenting and study, the world's greatest interpreters of music will never cease to charm the ear. Every shade and tone is preserved for immediate Re-Creation at your will. And this claim, by the way, comes from the most unprejudiced sources—

This is the tribute of a noted critic, and is but one of the many enthusiastic endorsements of the press. It is convincing testimony of the vast difference that lies between the New Edison and the hundreds of makes of "Talking Machines" on the market. Only the New Edison could survive the supreme test of singing and playing in direct comparison with the living artist.

OUR PREPAREDNESS FOR AFTER THE WAR

Address Given by Rev. R. Pogue at Closing Meeting of Week of Prayer.

The concluding meeting in connection with the week of prayer was held last evening in Trinity Church. The attendance, as it has been every night of the week, was large, and the interest deep. The Ministerial Association made a wise choice of subjects. They fixed the minds of the people upon the war, and guided them in their prayers to pray for those things, which ought to be the burden of all our petitions until the war is over. The Rev. R. Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, was the speaker at last night's meeting. His subject was "Our Preparedness for After the War." He referred to the changes of a moral, social and religious character which are sure to take place, nd are even now taking place, as a result of the war, changes which will emerge in a new order after the confusion. Great changes have already taken place in the thought, life, outlook and ideals of the people. Already they are turning to the churches to see what word of light, guidance and comfort they can speak. They have come to see the meanness and smallness of life as once they lived it, that life is not to be an idle thing of pleasure or frivolity or self-aggrandizement, but a sacred gift surcharged with the deepest meaning, a gift to be used for God and the social well-being in sacrifice and service.

The speaker referred to several of the problems which will confront us at the close of the war, principally in connection with the return of the soldiers. The darker side was first touched upon. Many of our soldiers will return just as they went away, without religion and without God, with less regard for the Sabbath and things sacred than they had before. Some of them will come home the slaves of drink. And some, too, will come home bringing with them the seeds of vice and disease contracted in the old land. We ought as churcches, as Christian men and as phydicians, to be getting ready to deal with this genuine menace to our national life, and to the health of our women and the unborn children of coming generations.

The Brighter Side

Tht is the darker side. The brighter side is that the vest majority who come home will come home with new thoughts and experiences on the subject of religion. Many are finding Christ in the trenches who failed to find Him in our churches. They will wish to belong to the church when they return. The church must create an atmosphere in which they will feel at home. She must seek a deeper spiritual experience if she is to be on a par with these men to whom God has become real She must seek a deeper prayer life, for the men at the front are learning to pray. Will they find an atmosphere of prayer among the men of our churches when they come back?

They will come home with the feeling wrought into a conviction that our denominational rivalries are unholy and must stop. These men are standing side by side in the trenches. They are exchanging views on religion. They are getting a new sense of the value of things, of what is essential and what is nonessential. They are singing the same hymns, and worshipping the same God and Father of us all. When they come home they will rebel against the denominational barriers that separate them as disciples of Christ, and they will bring home with them such a spirit of unity as will seek to efface the border lines which have separated us, and which mean so little to the front. We ought to be getting ready to take a great forward step in the union of all branches of the Church of Christ. The man who does not feel in his very bones this new spirit of union that is abroad in the world today is incapable of interpreting aright the spirit of the times in which he lives, and incap- when it speaks. If ever God spoke able also of hearing the Divine voice to the church and bade them forget their petty rivalries and cease calling prejudices principles, cease working more as battalions in opposing armies, it is today. God is saying to us, "Get together, stand together, and fight together for one great object of overcoming the kingdom of darkness."

Immortality

The speaker referred also to the questions which our people and soldiers are asking on the doctrine of immortality, and asked if church members could give the answer of the New Testament on this doctrine. All the light we need is found there. They will also come home with new ideals of life and heroism, and the church must be ready to give them something to do which will be the moral equivalent of war, something which will be worthy of their best energies, and will call out their highest heroism. Our soldiers will have little use for the kind of life many of us lived before the war. A young officer returned from the front found his mother playing at bridge and complaining that the war had interfered with the social engagements of her circle. The young officer, in almost indignant protest, said, "Mother, how can you talk like that? I have learned out there that there is only one thing that really matters, and that is God." We shall have many men of that type return, men who have been hardened in the fierceness of conflict to recognize the ultimate realities, men of conviction, of moral earnestness, of the heroic, rather than the drawing room type. The church ought to be preparing herself so as to be able to stand on the same high level with these men, and to use them in doing the heroic things that they will wish to do, and for which the church ought to stand.

MARKET PRICES

Peterborough market was a little brisker than usual this week, owing to heavy arrivals of hog, straw and wood, and there was a ready sale for all of it.

Hay sold at $11 for the real good timothy, while mixed hay sold for $10 to $10.50. Straw sold for $5 to $5.50 per load, according to size and quality.

There was wood of all kinds offered for sale. Hardwood sold at $7.50 to $8 for both 4 ft. and sawed. Some good loads of mixed found a quick market at $5 to $5.50, while a few loads of dry cedar and pine brought $3.50 to $4. There was no gren wood on sale as yet.

The outside cattle market has made the drovers more active for the past week. Prices were high for good choice stock and several loads were shipped out today for Toronto and Montreal points.

The hog market has been very steady al wek and select hogs sold for $12.

The egg market is very much easier on the outside markets and while in a few instances the ladies this morning got 55c, the majority sold for 50c, and a few even lower.

There is no change in the butter market. Good butter sold at 45c nd the ladies who were not so well known sold theirs for 42c and 43c.

The fowl market was not oversupplied and what was offered sold at the same prices as prevailed last week.

On the outside market there was plenty of dressed pork, beef and lamb offered at the quoted prices on our list.

Beef hides are in good demand with slightly higher prices.

The Peterborough Poultry Association opens here on Wednesday. The entry list is a large one.

Seven Day Butter Record

Twenty-nine and one-half pounds of butter in seven days is the record of Jessie Fobes Pietertje DeKol 167418, a Holstein cow owned by Ed. H. Witte of Independence.

The Markets at a Glance.

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Flour during the week has held in a steady market with increasing firmness, due to the net gains in the upward price of wheat. An advance of 30 cents per barrel is recorded and the market is in continued firmness. Sugar declined 10 cents per hundred during the week. Conditions in Cuba continue favorable for a good crop of sugar. Butter is lightly easier, with a weakening noted in the price of creamery solids. Egg prices are weaker. Owing to the increased arrivals of new-laids the price has decline during the week. Storage eggs however are firmly held as supplies are diminishing. Eggs from the Chicago district will be an increasing factor in the storage egg market from now on. Poultry is in a dull market, many of the wholesalers having to place their left-over stocks from the holiday season in storage in order to save them from a dead loss. Honey is in a fair demand and prices are firm in this community. Shipments of dried fruits and other commodities from United States points are coming forward better. Embargoes recently in operation on certain railroads in that country have caused much inconvenience and delay to Canadian purchasers. Peppers are in firm market, with an advance recorded in white pepper during the week. Cloves are also in very firm market. Chicory is in strong market and is expected to be much higher in price. Teas have held steady during the week, with possibility of higher prices through the constantly advancing freight rates and marine insurance. Salt has advanced during the week. Certain brands of coffee in the tin have also been marked up. Bulk prices have registered an advance. Rices are firm. One brand of package oatmeal has recorded an advance. Business during the week was quiet at the year-end, but opened up with much promise during the first days of the New Year.

Big News in Brief

Registration of industry will probably be the next effort of the National Service Board.

Word was received by relatives of the death at Chicago of Judge Andrew Gillespie, son of the late Daniel Gillespie, of Cornwall.

Dr. Jessop, M.P.P., and Mayor Burgoyne, speaking at recruiting meetings in St. Catharines, declared for compulsory military service.

The soldiers on guard in Kitchener hoisted a large Union Jack over the office of W. E. Gallagher, defeated mayoralty candidate, and which is next to the News-Record office.

Teamsters Must Have Licenses

POLICE WILL ENDEAVOR TO MAKE COLLECTIONS.

There are many teamsters doing hauling in the city at present who have not taken out their city licenses and the police are going to issue summonses at once for failure to do so. Any teamsters doing any kind of teaming work are required to pay a license fee of $7.50 per year for each team.

Section 2 of Bylaw No. 3 says:

"No person shall, after the passing of this bylaw, without being licensed so to do, regularly use for hire any carriage, cart, truck, sleigh or other vehicle whatever for the conveyance of goods within the city of Peterborough or from any point within the limits of the city to any point not more than three miles beyond the said city limits."

A gas explosion caused a fire which destroyed A. McGlashan's home at Fonthill; loss $6,000.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD and PINE LIMIT

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to and including the 1st day of February, 1917, for the right to cut pulpwood and pine timber on a certain area situated on the Black Sturgeon River and other territory adjacent thereto, in the District of Thunder Bay.

Tenderers shall state the amount per cord on pulpwood, and per thousand feet board measure, on pine, that they are prepared to pay as a bonus in addition to dues of 40 cents per cord for spruce, and 20 cents per cord for other pulpwoods, and $2.00 per thousand feet, board measure, for pine, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque, payable to the Honorable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten thousand dollars ($10,000), which amount will be forfeited in the event of their not entering into agreement to carry out conditions, etc. The said $10,000 will be applied on account of bonus dues, as they accrue, but the regulation dues, as mentioned above, will require to be paid in the usual manner as returns of cutting of wood and timber are received.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

PARKER'S TEAM DEFEATED SOLDIERS BY 18 TO 4

HAMILTON, Jan. 6.—The Hamilton team had an easy time last night when it opened the local O.H.A. intermediate season in a game with the 227th Batt. team. The soldiers were never contenders at any stage of the game, and the civilian team simply player rings round them. It was 5 to 0 at the end of the first period and 18 to 4 at the end of the second. Lieut. Bert McKenzie of the 205th was referee. The teams:

227th Batt. — Goal, Morris; defence, Snowden, McGovern; rover, Sims; centre, Lapierre; wings, Findlay and Cook.

Hamilton—Goal, Sloan; defence, Reese, Parker, rover, Boyd; centre, Reid; wings, Murray and Farlow.

In the recount for Winnipeg mayoralty, with 73 boxes out of 96 examined, Ald. F. H. Davidson now leads Mayor D. J. Dyson by 18 votes.

BARRY TO LEAD THE RED SOX

WILL CONTINUE TO PLAY AT THE SECOND BAG.

BOSTON, Jan. 6.—Harry H. Frazee, President of the Boston American League Baseball Club, announced last night that John J. (Jack) Barry had accepted the managership of the team. The contract will be drawn up today. Its duration has not been fixed, but Mr. Frazee said that he would let Barry "sign for any number of years within reason," and that he would be the sole manager, with the privilege of choosing his own assistants.

Before announcing his acceptance Barry made it known that he desired to continue to play at the second base position, and President Frazee granted his request. Barry was captain of the team last year. The mount of his salary as manager was not made public.

PUCKERINGS

The sporting column of the Lindsay Post has been suffering from an attack of holleritis since the defeat of the Scugogville Intermediates here last Tuesday night. The Post has drifted behind the vale and dire things are said to be coming this way. Just how the sad happenings are to be brought about the Post does not venture an opinion.

The only assurance the Post gives its readers on hockey matters is that the Midgets got a good trimming and may be chastised again when the return game is played in Lindsay. It is admitted that the 247th Batt team is one of the niftiest sevens ever beheld by Lindsay fans and that next to getting safely out of Lindsay, the opportunity of seeing the locals in action is the greatest joy of the hockey fans.

A reversal in form shown by the weather man makes it almost safe to predict hard ice for Monday and Tuesday nights for the scheduled games with Cobourg and Bowmanville, the intermediates from the former town being billed for Brock Street rink on Monday night, with Bowmanville juniors filling in the next night.

The expressmen of this city challenge the livery car drivers to a game of hockey to be played at the Brock St. rink Thursday night between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock.

"Eddie, what the matter? Had a fall off your motorcycle?"

"No. I tried to hang some pictures and stood some dictionaries on a table, and they slipped from under me."

"[illegible] failed you, I suppose."

Advanced social legislation was the theme of the address delivered at the South Brant Reform Association annual meeting by J. E. Atkinson, editor of the Star, Toronto. W. D. Wiley was elected president.

SPECIALS FOR Y.M.C.A., SUNDAY

ADDRESS BY MR. HUGHSON JOHNSTON, AND MUSIC.

DR. NEAL'S ADDRESS.

The Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon meetings will be resumed tomorrow at 4:15, a special opening service having been prepared. An address will be given by Hughson Johnston and special music will be furnished by the Loader brothers and John James of the 247th Battalion. It is expected that this will be one of the best attended meetings of the season. Every man and older boy is invited.

The Y. M. C. A. Collegiate Club resumed its weekly sessions last evening and listened to an excellent vocational address on the Practice of Medicine as a Calling by Dr. Frank Neal. This is one of a series of vocational talks which has been planned for the Senior Collegiate Club, for the one thing prominent in the minds of these young men is what to do after leaving school. Dr. Neal convinced the boys that the practice of medicine is one of the most useful and altruistic of the professions. He said that it was impossible for a man to entirely master the study of medicine and surgery, but regardless of how busy a man might be in his profession, he must continue as a student. There is no calling in which a man must so rely upon himself, his own ability, knowledge and observation as in the practice of medicine. He said that some people are unreasonable in their criticism of a physician. They come to the doctor's office, listen to his advice, secure a bottle of medicine, and go home and forget all that the doctor said, do as they please, and expect that the medicine is going to make them well. People have the idea that the practice of medicine is very profitable. The doctor admitted that there was a possibility of a good living in the practice of medicine, but he said it was an unusual man who could get rich as a doctor. Surgical instruments and books and the general equipment used by a physician were the most expensive, and the progress of surgery and medicine made it necessary to constantly renew equipment to keep up to date. It is fatal to the success of a physician to get behind the times.

At the close of Dr. Neal's address the young men present passed a unanimous vote of thanks for his excellent address and the advice and suggestions given.

The next meeting of the club will eb held Friday evening, Jan. 12th, and a discussion of "Cheating and Graft" will be conducted by Mr. Hone.

A MERITORIOUS RECITAL

The audience at the recital given under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E., at St. Paul's Church last evening left that edifice unanimous in the conclusion that it was one of the most pleasurable musical events of the season, and that congratulations were due the chapter on the success of the evening. Mrs. Helen Davies Sherry, Miss Lora Logan and Mr. John Allan contributed to the program, and each received their well-merited due—a most cordial reception. Bouquets were presented to Mrs. Sherry and Miss Logan by Miss Audrey Huycke, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Huycke.

It was an evening of sweet melody in vocal numbers by Mrs. Sherry, violin selections by Miss Logan and organ numbers by Mr. Allan. A hush fell over the audience when in response to repeated calls for an encore at the conclusion of her last number, Mrs. Sherry sang "'Tis the Hour of Farewell" (Lehman), a song that depicts the soldier bidding adieu to his sweetheart as he is about to leave to take his place in the ranks. Mrs. Sherry's interpretation of the song will long be remembered by the audience at St. Paul's Church last night. The gifted singer's rendition of "Hear Ye, Israel" by Mendelssohn brought out the true spirit of the aria, with no apparent extra effort on the part of the vocalist. The loud and continued applause by the audience was gracefully acknowledged by the singer. Mrs. Sherry sang several short selections of a lighter vein, which brought out the sweetness and capacity of her voice to the full.

Miss Logan, always a popular contributor in violin selections, delighted her friends in her selections, which were praiseworthy for the purity of tone. She was accompanied on the piano by her mother.

Mr. Allan's masterful playing on the organ, which included the ever-popular Marche Militaire, was a great pleasure to the audience. Mr. Allan also played the piano accompaniments for Mrs. Sherry.

The Program

Organ Solo—Overture (Occasional Oratorio)—Handel.

Aria—Hear Ye Israel (Elijah) —Mendelssohn.

Violin Solo—Legende—Boehm.

Organ Solo—Romance (Samson et Dalila)—Saint Saens.

Vocal—(a) Mey Little Darling—Gomes. (b) With a Violet—Greig. (c) Two Brown Eyes—Greig. (d) The Lark Now Leaves—Parker.

Violin—(a) Melody for G String—Friml. (b) Rezeda—Friml.

Organ Solo — Marche Militaire — Gounod.

Vocal — (a) Songs my Mother Taught Me—Dvorak. (b) O Sea —Delibes.

God Save the King.

A Talk on Rheumatism

Telling How to Actually Cure This Painful Malady.

This article is for the man or woman who suffers from rheumatism who wants to be cured, not merely relieved—but actually cured. The most the rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the tender, aching joint, is a little relief. No lotion or linament ever did or can make a cure. The rheumatic poison is rooted in the blood. Therefore rheumatism can only be cured when this poisonous acid is driven out of the blood. Any doctor will tell you this is true. If you want something that will go right to the root of the trouble in the blood take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich blood which drives out the poisonous acid and cures rheumatism to stay cured. The truth of these statements has been proved in thousands of cases throughout Canada, and the following cure is a striking instance. Mrs. F. M. Simpson, R. R. No. 1, Blenheim, Ont., says: "For a long time I was confined to my bed, and actually crippled with rheumatism. The trouble first located in my ankle — which was much swollen. I thought it might be a sprain, but the doctor said it was rheumatism, and advised me to go to bed so that the trouble would not be aggravated. I did as directed, but instead of getting better, it spread first to my right knee, then to my left knee, and then to my arms. The limbs were much swollen, and if I moved them caused me considerable pain. I seemed to get weak in other respects, and fell off in weight from 156 to 110 pounds. I had no appetite and seemed to lose interest in everything. One day, while reading a paper, I came across the case of a rheumatic sufferer cured by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to try them and sent for three boxes. By the time these were gone I had certainly begun to improve, and with help was able to get up. Continuing the use of the pills I was first able to go about with the use of a crutch, which later I discarded for a cane, and then through the use of the pills I was able to throw aside the cane as well, and go about as briskly as I had ever done. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a blessing to me, and I strongly recommend them to other similar sufferers."

You can procure these Pills through any dealer in medicine or get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MASSAGE YOUR EARS

Pinkness Means Good Circulation—Making Them Shell-like

A woman journalist writes: "Why do you want to write about beautifying the ears?" queried a friend. "Why, hardly anyone shows her ears any more—it's almost immodest to let them out for public gaze. Besides, who wants beautiful ears. If you have them all right; if you haven't you drape your hair over them and forget them. The day of the heroine with the shell-like ear has passed, along with the gallant who whispered sweet nothings into them and wrote bad poetry about them."

I smiled at her remarks. As a matter of fact, there is little one can do to beautify the ears, except to keep them clean. If their shape is bad, one can, as my friend remarked, drape them over with hair and forget them.

However, a little massage is beneficial. And massaging the ears will often relieve a headache. Make the strokes downward behind the ear, and upward into the hair, pressing hard, then gently massage the inner parts of the ears themselves. This brings blood into them, and incidentally into the brain, making the head feel better, and giving the shell-like tints our old novels used to emphasize. When the ears are pink the blood is circulating properly through the head, when they are white the blood has not been beating through the veins as it should.

All massage movements should press the ears against the head, not away from it. Special care should be taken of children's ears, for boys and girls with great ears standing away from their heads are objects of pity, and often, alas! of ridicule. The ears should be washed as often as the face, and the loose wax kept washed off.

The girl who is willing to take in washing to support a family can afford to marry a man who wears a lot of finger rings.

A. G. DELAMATER PRESENTS A BIG PLAY ON A BIG THEME—

"MOTHER LOVE"

Now playing Grand Opera House Toronto.
A notable cast and a carload of beautiful scenery and effects.
PRICES 50c—75c—$1. Gallery 25c. Seat Sale opens Saturday, Jan. 6 will be seen at the Grand next Tuesday evening, January 9th. It is a new play by Robert Lawrence, and, although Mr. Lawrence has enjoyed an enviable reputation for several years as a stage director and has revised plays of many other authors, "Mother Love" is his maiden effort as a dramatist.

"MOTHER LOVE"

There have been several other plays written with this theme as their foundation, among them "Madame X" and "The Harp of Life," now running in New York with Laurette Taylor in the stellar role. Mr. Lawrence has treated the theme in an entirely different way from other authors who have used it, and is said to have constructed a particularly strong, virile play.

QUICK WORK IN PAINTING BUILDINGS

TORONTO FIRM BEATS RECORD.

MR F. G. ROBERTS, President Fred G. Roberts & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Three new large buildings in Toronto, recently completed, furnished a new record in painting and decorating.

The Robert Simpson Co. mail order building on Mutual Street is eleven stories high, and contains 28,000 panes of glass. The painting in this large building was completely finished in 66 days.

The Sherbourne House Club, 88 Bleecker Street (rear of late Senator Cox's home), contains 127 bedrooms, 14 lavatories, dining rooms and kitchens, halls, etc, etc. These were stained and rubbed to a piano finish and walls and ceilings decorated throughout in 30 days.

The Ford Office and Service Building at Dupont and Christie Streets, required 50,000 yards of painting, and was completed in 30 days.

This is marvellously quick time in which to complete the painting, etc., of large buildings like these, and establishes a new record in Toronto.

Mr. Fred G. Roberts the president of the Fred. G. Roberts & Co., Limited, Toronto, is justly proud of this accomplishment, as it was his company which was awarded the contracts and notwithstanding the present labor difficulties all were completed in the above record time.

Mr. Roberts was educated in Peterborough, Ont.; is a director of Forester's Hall, Ltd., and a member of the Toronto Board of Trade.

His company has secured a great many of the recent large painting and decorating contracts. In addition to the above the company has successfully completed four C.P.R. Buildings, Process and Press Buildings at the Exhibition Grounds, Bell Telephone Building, Molson's Bank, and the Bank of Commerce at Waterloo, Ryrie Building, St. Charles Hotel, West End Y.M.C.A., Canada Foundry Building, 3 Carnegie Libraries, Peterborough Baptist Church, Peterborough Carpet Works, Grasselli Chemical Co., Hamilton; Brennen's Apartment House Hamilton; three large buildings for the Wm. Davies Co., Toronto, York Knitting Mills, Toronto, and the Robert Simpson Co. stables and wagon sheds.

J. Boyd, of West Luther, comes to the Wellington County Council this year, replacing his son, who was warden two years ago, subsequently becoming quartermaster of the county battalion.

At a meeting of the farmers of Welland county, the support of every member was pledged for the National Service registration.

KAISER'S ALLY NEAR COLLAPSE

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY NEAR END OF TETHER

Quarrel Between the Two Kaisers Gone too far to be Patched---Authorities Would Make Inflamed Public Opinion an Excuse for Ending the War.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 8.—A Berne despatch to The Daily News says reports from trustworthy sources show that Austria-Hungary is near collapse. No effort is made to conceal the fact that the quarrel between the two kaisers has gone too far to be patched up. Austria compelled Germany to agree to a joint offer to open peace negotiations. Now that the offer has been definitely rejected, developments of an even more sensational character may take place during the next few weeks. The authorities are anxious to make the inflamed public opinion an excuse for ending the war and are allowing the press more liberty.

ENTENTE UNITED AND FIRM

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, January 8.—The Italian press is filled with cordial comments on the conclusion of the conference of the Allied leaders here. One point emphasized in the conference shows united action and firm resolution.

It is impossible in a few words to express the feeling of implicit confidence and faith which the Italian nation now has in England and the English. The acclaiming of Mr. Lloyd George by the Italians is only part of this feeling of faith and trust that the British nations will lead the Allies to a victorious conclusion of war. France comes in for a great share of the same feeling, but the British Empire is now looked upon as the great reserve strength of the Allies.

FRENCH PATROLS ENGAGED

PARIS, January 8. — Patrol engagements occurred last night in the regions of Bouchavesnes on the Somme front and of Parroy Forest in Lorraine. Otherwise there was little activity.

Legal — Aldermen Duncan (chairman), Dobbin, Stratton, Langford, Worth, Taylor.

Railways — Alderman Langford (chairman), Smith, Saunders, Worth, Taylor.

Three members of the Board of Trade will be apointed to act with the manufacturers' committee.

Inaugural Meeting.

The inaugural meeting of the City Council for 1917 was held this morning when there were present His Worship Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Saunders, Taylor, Dobbin, Stratton, Duncan, Worth, Langford, McIntyre Weir and Smith.

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS

Mayor Duffus presented his address to the Council as follows:

In his address to the Council Mayor Duffus welcomed Ald. Taylor, Worth and Smith, and of ex-Aldermen Edgar and Evans said they had always done their best and will no doubt be missed by the Council. His Worship asked that harmony, co-operation, and astute business acumen be the ever-prevailing policy and spirit of the Council, and said he would do his best to carry out his part.

Of the management of the various departments at the City Hall, Mayor Duffus said Peterborough should be proud.

"Smoothness and harmony prevails at all times. They have never been accused of even the slightest irregularity. It is a matter of unqualified pride that our financial affairs have been so clean. We are not only free from serious reproach, but among municipalities we stand a representative of the highest type of financial integrity. There has been no whisper of scandal and the word 'graft' has no local application.

Board of Works

"I would advise as far as our public works are concerned, that only such work as is urgently essential be undertaken. However, we must keep in good condition our streets and sidewalks. It is not conducive to economy to allow our streets to get into a state of disrepair.

"Additional oiling must be done to keep down the dust and preserve our streets. For this work I advise one extra distributing wagon in order that the work may be done quicker, immediately the warm weather comes in the spring, so that the ratepayers will not experience the same dust nuisance as they have heretofore. We may also be forced to install a storage tank for unloading carloads of oil, in order to save demurrage charges.

"The footbridge over the river at the C. P. R. naturally should be taken up and completed as early this year as conditions will permit, and I ask the chairman of the Board of Works to lose no time in this regard.

"The water main for Auburn must be completed first thing in the spring for the convenience and safety of the people in that section of the city.

"Regarding the present Hunter St. bridge, I insist on money being provided at once for a thorough inspection of the present bridge, as it is very old and may not be altogether safe for heavy traffic. This can be done to better advantage when the river is frozen over.

ALD. A. A. McINTYRE
Who leaves the chairmanship of the Board of Works to preside over the Manufacturers Committee

"The question of a new bridge at Hunter St. must receive the attention of the Council sooner or later, and notwithstanding the high cost of material, circumstances may warrant its construction at a date which may require this year's Council to get plans and specifications completed so as to submit a bylaw to the ratepayers for their verdict.

"The attitude of the Dominion Government in regard to opening the canal, the Provincial Government in regard to street railway extension, and rebuilding of the Quaker Oats plant will have a large influence in this regard."

His Worship also referred to work on sewers, the sewage disposal plant and surface drainage.

Property Committee

Mayor Duffus said the work of garbage collection had not been wholly satisfactory. Too often the ashes and garbage are left and allowed to remain for days or until the next collection day. This should not be and will not be tolerated.

The night soil collection, also very unsatisfactory last year, must receive the earliest attention of Council.

Fire Department

The Mayor made the following recommendations in regard to hte Fire Department:

That one, two or more pieces of motor-driven fire fighting apparatus be acquired, not too cumbersome or expensive, but such as will be most expedient and efficient for the purpurposes of the city of Peterborough.

That the proper number of good firemen be maintained at the fire station at all times and that a system of efficiency badges be adopted for the members by which, commencing after the expiration of eight years' continuous service, the badge shall carry an increase of pay, after fifteen years of continuous service a further increase, and after twenty years' continuous service a still further increase, whereby the men who remain in continuous service on the department will be automaticaly compensated from period to period for such service.

That a first class assistant chief be engaged so that at any time the chief is incapacitated or off duty for any reason whatever, the department will have a competent officer to take charge.

That the chief of the department devote his time to the duties of the fire department, that he should not engage in public activities no matter how commendable they might be, that will unduly detract his attention or cause him to be away from the fire station and the duties for which the city has him engaged, thereby reducing the efficiency of possibly half a million dollars' outlay for fire fighting purposes and making our property and the lives of our people that much more hazardous.

"Gentlemen, I make these recommendations advisedly. Some day something terrible may happen in loss of life and property which might have been averted. We have been placed here by the ratepayers. We must recognize our responsibilities."

Legal and Reception Committee.

"During the year no doubt a number of soldiers wil return, and at all instances when we can get the information in time, the trains must be met and the boys given the recognition they deserve."

Hydro Radials and Power

During 1916 very little could be done in regard to radial railways owing to the attitude of the Government which was that no money could be provided for this purpose owing to the war. The power situation is not satisfactory in every respect, inasmuch as it was understood that the municipalities would own the power and that it would be operated for them by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. At the present time it is owned by the Government and if it is the intention of the Government to continue this arrangement and not turn it over to the municipalities, I am of the opinion that the City of Peterborough should take steps towards owning its own power. We have it right at our door and it can be developed almost as cheap if not cheaper than any other place in the province. For these reasons I strongly feel that a meeting should be arranged and Col. the Hon. Sir Adam Beck, M.P.P. the Dean of the Hydro, invited to attend and deliver an address in order to allow the people of this district to become familiar with the whole situation. Sir Adam has always been a warm friend of Peterborough and I am sure the people would be delighted to hear him.

The matter as to whether the street railway and gas should be taken over by the city or left in the hands of the Government must be taken up and considered.

Further street railway extensions must also be taken up, and if possible, carried out.

New Industries

The Manufacturers Committee must be prepared to inaugurate a vigorous campaign for new industries. The Quaker Oats Co. must be dealt with in the most business-like manner in order that they may get operating again with the least possible delay.

More advertising will be required so that we may get a full share of the new industries that may be contemplating locating in Canada. This will no doubt entail considerable expense, but nevertheless it must be done.

Provincial Highways

Already an association has been formed along the front and considerable arrangements for the building of a concrete highway from Quebec to Toronto by the Government. This highway is to follow the shore of Lake Ontario along what is known as the Kingston Road.

I have been made a member of the executive of the committee which has in hand that portion of the road extending from York County to Prescott and I am of the opinion that it would be a splendid arrangement for Peterborough if the Government could be induced to build a trunk line from Port Hope to Peterborough at the same time. This road will be a direct route from the States from both east and west, as it will no doubt be continued through Western Otario, and the large number of tourists who will use this route will almost invariably visit Peterborough on account of the lift lock, our back lakes and other attractions. This would be a good advertisement for Peterborough and would put a large amount of money into circulation. Of course it will not be built until after the war, but I think it is imperative if we are to benefit by it, that he matter be taken up at once and thoroughly investigated with a view to getting con-

NO REINFORCEMENTS OR ARTILLERY CAME TO AID OF GERMANS AT ARRAS

Scottish Officer Smoked Cigarette on Top of Third Line Parapet and Did Not See Single German.

PORTUGUESE OFFICERS ARRIVE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, January 8.—A news agency despatch from British army headquarters says: One of the strangest incidents of the war was the Scotch-English raid southeast of Arras on Saturday. First, second and third line German trenches were entered almost unopposed. The stormers declare today that despite "S. O. S." flares, the Germans did not receive reinforcements or artillery aid, therefore those in the trenches suddenly disappeared in dugouts, which the British bombed and blew up along the two thousand yard front involved. A Scottish officer who participated in the raid declared that he did not see a single German nor did he hear a single machine gun nor a sniper's rifle, although he sat on the parapet of an enemy third line trench, smoked a cigarette and strolled leisurely back to his own trenches.

The raid followed a five hour smashing bombardment and was executed under cover of a smoke as well as a shell fire barrage.

Officers of the Portuguese expeditionary force have arrived here preparatory to fighting on the Western front and are tackling enthusiastically their new problems. Authorization to cable this news was given for the first time today.

POPE WILL NOT TAKE HAND

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, January 8.—A news agency despatch from Rome says the Pope will declare the present moment inopportune for a peace movement, in notes to Germany and America. The Messagero declares the Pope will narrate his own personal efforts towards peace and his desire to end the great war, but sums up his conclusions that the time is not ripe for definite steps.

GREECE FINDS DIFFICULTIES

LONDON, January 8. — Reuter's Athens correspondent says the Greek Government has handed representatives of the Entente Allies a statement pointing out the difficulties in the way of compliance with some of the terms demanded by the Entente.

PETERBOROUGH SOLDIERS HAVE REACHED QUEBEC

Canadian Casualties to End of December 67,890.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

QUEBEC, Jan. 8—Among the invalided soldiers who arrived here on Saturday were R. . Sapprey, D. B. Iviron, G. Grange, H. Wood and H. P. Doherty of Peterborough.

CANADIAN CASUALTIES

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.— The casualties up to the end of December in the Canadian Overceas Forces aggregate 67,890, made up as follows:—

Killed	10,834
Died of wounds	4,010
Died of sickness	494
Presumed dead	1,108
Wounded	48,454
Missing	2,970

To Tour District

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, O.C. of the 247th, intends to make a tour of the different towns and villages in his district shortly in order to get into touch with affairs at the recruiting centres.

The officers in charge of the canvass started on the second week of their visits today.

Pte. W. J. Puffer is appointed sergeant (provisionally) from Jan. 6.

Pte. A. J. Bristol is appointed acting-sergt. from Jan. 6.

Pte. Wilfred J. Lewis of 56 Wolsey Street, is the latest addition to the ranks of the 247th Batt.

Three men who came up from Millbrook to try and get into khaki were disappointed when the medical officer handed them buttons.

None More Fearless

Citizens who have not read Col. J. A. Currie's book, "The Red Watch," will be interested in the following extract from its pages:

> "Back and forth I went, and the entire line was canvassed and discussed. Lieut. Fessenden, one of the most brilliant graduates of the R. M. C., had a particularly hard spot to deal with, and was handling is in a manner worthy of any of the great Belgian engineers. No lieutenant in the whole Allied army was a better student of the art of war or a more fearless man than this rosy-cheeked boy of 21."—Col. J. A. Currie, M. P., in "The Red Watch."

The young officer is the son of Mr. Cortez Fessenden, science master at the Collegiate Institute. Lieut. Fessenden is a prisoner of war in Germany. His brother was decorated by the Italian Government some time ago.

Col. T. W. H. Young of Peterborough was one of those mentioned in the despatches from the British commander-in-chief in the list published on Friday.

Sergt.-Instructor Patrick Duggan sends a telegram to Mr. Charles Duggan that he is "heading for Winnipeg," probably having been assigned to duty in the Western city. He reached Canada the first of the month.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JANUARY 8, 1917

WHERE WERE THE FOURTEEN HUNDRED?

LIEUT.-COL. ACKERMAN stated at the recruiting meeting in the Armories last night that there are fourteen hundred eligible men in Peterborough who have not yet enlisted. This is a conservative estimate based on the census that has been taken by the officers of the 247th Battalion. Some of them would be prevented by circumstances from joining the forces, while others might not be able to pass the physical test. All of the latter who submitted to examination would be given a rejection button to show that they were willing to do their duty. If conscription is ever resorted to, the census just completed will not have been made in vain, for the authorities will at once know whom to take and whom to leave at home.

The figures submitted by Lieut.-Col. Ackerman are reliable as well as conservative, but the fourteen hundred eligibles were not in evidence at the meeting last night. There was hardly a corporal's guard of young men in the building, the audience being made up as usual of men past the military age, and women.

Then, where were the missing? The slackers were certainly not at the churches earlier in the evening. They shun such places as a rule, probably because they would there be likely to hear something to remind them of what the country requires of them or because they would have their gutta percha consciences pricked by being compelled to listen to the strains of the National Anthem.

But the slackers were not in hiding under the bed last night. Scores of them could be counted as they hung around the entrances to the various city churches just before the services were concluded. As the worshippers left the buildings the slackers mingled with the throng and fastened themselves as escorts upon their lady friends. Then they headed in some other direction than that in which the Armories lay. The recruiting officers might do effective work at the church doors Sunday evening, provided some means could be devised to prevent the waiting brigade from taking to their heels.

The young ladies who attend church are perfectly able to find their way home without escort. The streets are well lighted and perfectly safe, and if any danger did beset them on the way, the slacker is rather an indifferent bodyguard than otherwise.

But the meeting at the Armories last night will not be lacking in results. The appeal made to the women by Dr. Edwards and Col. Ponton will have its effect. Mothers, sisters and sweethearts were shown their duty, how they can exert their influence to get their sons, brothers and friends into uniforms. In this way the women of Peterborough can render the Empire valuable service. Let the slacker be shown his duty and put in his place. If he refuses to fight, then let him be ostracized in social circles.

One feature of last night's meeting was the vociferous appplause that greeted any reference to the possibility of conscription, or, as Col. Ponton so aptly put it, universal national service. The sentiment of the hundreds present was unanimously in favor of it. Dr. Edwards is a member of the Dominion Parliament, one of the foremost men on his side of the House, and he can meet his colleagues in a few days with the message that in Peterborough, where so much has already been done, from where so many brave men have been sent to the trenches, the people are not satisfied even with what has been accomplished, but would have the Government step in and draft, if necessary, the last available man.

Dr. Edwards and Col. Ponton put the case clearly before their auditors. If their eloquence is to fill the ranks of the 247th Battalion, then the time for orations is past and drastic measures are required.

MILITARY TRAINING.

A NUMBER of young men take the physical training course either at the Y. M. C. A. or in private. The exercise makes them fit, but it does not necessarily inspire them with the ambition to start out on a tour of pugilistic conquest and try conclusions with such champions as Jess Willard or to rescue the fighting honors from the keeping of the colored race. If such an ambition ever does spring up within them, it fortunately rarely develops to the danger stage.

But the training gives the young man a sense of security as he goes about his daily tasks. The aggression of the bully has no terrors for him, satisfied as he is in his own mind that he can fairly hold his own against all comers.

The man physically fit is like the nation prepared in a military sense. To feel secure is a condition to be desired. Military training in schools will not develop a race of aggressors against the peace and safety of our national neighbors any more then physical training in the Y. M. C. A. or elsewhere will raise up a race of bullies.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

THE EXHAUSTIVE annual report of the Public Library for the past year as submitted by Librarian F. M. Dela Fosse is the best possible advertisement that institution could receive, and should lead the people of the city to realise and appreciate one of the greatest advantages which they possess, and of which they can avail themselves without cost.

The Library is well stocked with all classes of literature. The reading rooms are comfortable and supplied with the best newspapers and magazines of the day. The Library is well managed by a courteous and efficient staff. The man or woman in search of information on any subject need not remain long in the dark. If they will call at the Library they can easily obtain what they are in quest of. If they do not know how to proceed themselves, Librarian Dela Fosse or his assistants will be only too pleased to render them aid.

The citizens of Peterborough, then, should realise their advantages and develop the Library habit. It is an institution which is one of the show places of the city, and is economically managed by a board of capable business men and yet is up to date in every respect. There is no excuse for anyone remaining in intellectual darkness while the doors of the Public Library are open to him.

The institution, however, will not have reached the full measure of its usefulness until the reading rooms are kept open for at least a few hours every Sunday so that the man employed during the week can have an opportunity to avail himself of its advantages.

THE WEST SIMCOE CAMPAIGN.

THE CAMPAIGN in the bye-election in West Simcoe to choose a successor to the late Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture in the Hearst cabinet, is calling into the fray some of the heavyweights in both parties. Just as in the two previous bye-elections, the Ontario Temperance Act will be the deciding factor. If the Government is beaten, it will be on that issue alone.

Mr. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, is on the platform for the first time since prohibition became effective. He is not the same campaigner that he was in former years. His methods are vastly different. He says little on the temperance issue, he who formerly made it his leading topic. At Collingwood on Friday night he contented himself with avowing that he is not in league with the liquor party to defeat the Government.

Mr. Rowell is a sufficiently astute politician to know that for him and his party safety lies in silence. Although West Simcoe was under local option for eight years before prohibition, the temperance Liberals are not likely to reward the party that gave the traffic its quietus, while those of the other faith can be counted upon to punish the party that gave the people of the province what they called for. The trouble with the election in Simcoe, as in Perth and Toronto, is that they fail to vote as they petitioned. It is political cunning on the part of Mr. Rowell and his friends to say as little as possible on behalf of prohibition.

DELUDING THE PUBLIC.

HOW LONG will the voters of the country consent to be deluded by the professional politician and how long will they consent to accept ready-made political opinions from the paid campaign orator who flourishes in proportion as he misleads?

Mr. Chas. M. Bowman, chief Liberal whip in the Legislature, attempted in an address at Collingwood Friday night to score a point against the Government on the question of machine guns furnished the Allies in the earlier stages of the war. The sum of half a million dollars was appropriated for this purpose. A fraction of the amount was spent for machine guns and then no more were purchased for several months. The wily Mr. Bowman attempted to show indifference and lax business methods for this reason.

The facts in the case, as so many will recall if they make the effort, are that machine guns were not needed at that time, as the British Government so clearly intimated. Canadians who made private contributions for this purpose were told as much and their money was not used until the demand for this style of weapon revived.

Mr. Rowell on the same platform at Collingwood posed as the friend of the workingman. The wage-earners of Ontario cannot be deceived by these professions. They will remember the record of Mr. Rowell's party while in power, and that not one measure designed to benefit them was ever adopted. The Workmen's Compensation Act is the best recommendation that the Hearst Administration has when it comes to a question of the votes of labor.

Nearly Destroyed a Nation.

(New York World.)

France has, as Professor Willett, of Chicago, says, "gloriously disproved" that birth control makes a nation degenerate. Yet it nearly destroyed a nation. If from 1870 to 1900 the French birth rate had been equal to the German, Germany would never have attacked France in 1914.

UNDER THE HOME ROOF TREE

(Emma Gary Wallace.)

The very next time you go to a public entertainment, make a little study of the way the women folk about you have arranged their hair. It is decidedly interesting, and one does not have to think very hard to discover why some people look smart, even chic, while others appear heavy and dowdy. The arrangement of the hair is wonderfully important because it forms a setting for the face and continues the shoulder and neck lines in a becoming or unbecoming manner.

You will disover, even as I have, that the arrangement of the hair in itself may be good, and yet the general effect decidedly poor, when taken into consideration in conjunction with the lines of the body and the profile of the face. Photographers select their most artistic pictures for display purposes, and examination of such a collection will show how important it is that symmetry of the whole be observed.

Every woman should take time occasionally to sit down before her mirror, to do up her hair in several styles, and to study the effect from all angles with the aid of a second, or if possible, a third, mirror.

Those who have rather high-set shoulders and short necks will find that to dress the hair low in the back of the neck is to give an appearance little short of deformity. Just the spot on the back or top of the head where the hair will look best will depend entirely upon the general conformation of the skull and the tilt of the nose. If there is a tendency to a saucy retrousse, the effect is grotesque to have a protruding psyche on the back of the head. A soft coil at the top, a coronet style, or a fluffy, cap-like coiffure will be much better.

If the neck is long and slender, the face narrow and the forehead high, a soft coil in the back of the neck may be good, or it may increase the appearance of angularity. Study the head and shoulder lines with the hair dressed low, also with it done in a broad, easy style across the back of the head, just above the ears, so as to give apparent breadth.

The woman who is past her first youth must be exceedingly careful not to brush the hair back from her forehead too persistently or she will add years to her appearance by causing the hair to recede and by encouraging high, austere lines.

A "parting" on the top of the head is becoming only when the hair is so thick and fluffy that the first thought of baldness is not suggested. Young girls may part their hair with safety and it increases the look of youth, whereas women with thin hair must be careful not to show a wide parting from which the hair straggles away in a discouraged manner.

If the hair is combed hastily every morning and twisted into its accustomed position without any particular attention, it will soon become rough and harsh looking. In order to keep it soft and lustrous, it must be kept perfectly clean, regularly and gently brushed, and given the right tonic treatment when necessary.

Hair nets have their use, but if they are bound tightly over the coiffure so as to give a perfectly regular, not-a-hair-out-of-place look, the effect is sculptured and artificial.

Keep the hair in good condition; study the success or the failure of the hair arrangement of other people; experiment with your own hair, and decide on the style from the completed picture made from the waist up. Even a plain woman or girl will look distinguished if her hair is artistically dressed.

HIS EXCELLENCY'S GREETING

His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire sends the following New Year's greetings to the Boy Scouts of Canada:

"As your new Chief Scout for Canada, I desire to extend my warmest best wishes to the officers and members of the Boy Scouts' Association throughout Canada for the continued success and extension of this splendid movement and for a happy New Year.

"The Boy Scouts of Canada have already proved their worth alike in peace and in war, and I am looking forward to meeting you personally and seeing as much as I can of your work.

"(Sgd.) DEVONSHIRE."

His Excellency Receives Scouts.

The Boy Scouts of Canada were represented at His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire's New Year's levee. The Dominion Commissioner and members of the Executive Commissioner and members of the Executive Committee of the Canadian General Council attended, as did the president and members of the executive of Ottawa District Council, the district commissioner, scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters and the King's Scouts of Ottawa.

I WILL SERVE.

Dedicated to the National Service Registration Campaign.—
By "Patriot."

If my King and country need me,
I will serve;
Though to sacrifice they lead me,
I'll not serve;
For the sluggards and the slackers
Are the Germans' strongest backers;
They will get what they deserve—
I will serve.

If they want me in the trenches,
I will serve;
'Mid the shrapnel and the stenches,
I will serve;
For my country and my King
I will suffer anything;
And my service they deserve.
I will serve.

I'll not loaf while others toil,
I will serve;
Can I plan the foe to foil?
I will serve;
Power of muscle and of brain
Surely will the victory gain;
With more vigor, vim and nerve
I will serve.

None shall ever charge that I
Did not serve;
None shall taunt with "You're the guy
Would not serve!"
When a wounded man I meet
Limping down the busy street,
He'll not hint "You had cold feet!"
I will serve.

In the mill or in the field
I will serve.
Britons ne'er to foemen yield.
I will serve.
If I cannot man the guns
I can send supplies in tons,
Then to help defeat the Huns
I will serve.

In the hot munition shop
I will serve;
That the war may sooner stop
I will serve;
Lest on me should rest the guilt
For a brother's lifeblood spilt,
Glad I offer mind and nerve—
I will serve.

Aristoot Jigg, the immortal Athenian philosopher, sat leaning against the great wall of the ancient Greek city of Eddo, and thought sagely. (See Benno Zink's "Great Philosophers and What They Leaned Against.")

It was a perfect May day of the year 502 A.D., and Aristoot Jigg's ninety-third birthday.

"The birds fly," thought the philosopher. "They fly because they have wings. Men walk. They walk because they have legs. And the moral is: Use is excuse. I believe my right foot is falling asleep." (See Edgar Weep's "Infirmities of Great Thinkers.")

And he continued his reflections, thus: "Dogs bark before they bite. But a tax collector makes no sound as he creeps up to lay a hand on your shoulder. And the moral is: Nature is a good sport. My foot is sound asleep and painful."

And Aristoot Jigg jumped up and began prancing about with a peculiar motion to restore wakefulness to his foot. A passing player of the Jew's harp stopped and improvised music on his instrument to fit the philosopher's antics. And thus was born the dance known as the Jigg, or, more commonly, the jig.

THE HOUSE IS STILL.

(P. M. MacDonald in Canadian Magazine.)

The house rang through with noisy joys
From tender dawn till gentle night;
The floors were littered o'er with toys
And armies waging mimic fight.

There was no room where riot died;
The dust could find no place to sleep;
The stairs were his toboggan slide—
Down he careened with clamorous sweep.

But with the darkness came his rest,
And, when we stole to see our boy,
We kissed his hands upon his breast,
And said, "In sleep he can't annoy."

Now in the churchyard's kindly clay
His curls are wet with autumn's rain,
While we are pining for his play,
With mingled memories that pain.

And all the house is still, too still;
Night is like day and day like night—
Oh! could he but return and fill
Its placid gloom with stir and light.

No aged behaviour would we ask;
No studied silence deep and wise;
With thankful hearts in every task,
Our way would wend 'neath rapturous skies.

DOBRUDJA THE DESOLATE

THE reputation of General von Mackensen was made in the Russian and Serbian campaigns, in one of which he defeated an army that lacked munitions, while in the other he massacred a defenseless people. Observers now believe that he will bury his reputation in Dobrudja, where the Russians and Roumanians are now engaged in deadly grips with the Bulgars and Teutons, under the leadership of von Mackensen. As this district is so little known to Canadian readers, some facts about it must have a particularly timely interest.

This region is one of the most desolate in South-East Europe, and, in late summer and early autumn, certainly the most pestilential. So little known was it previous to its cession by Bulgaria to Roumania four years ago that the majority of British chartographers did not give even its name on their maps. Bounded on north and west by the Danube, and on the east by the Black Sea, the Dobrudja has for centuries been the refuge of evil-doers and the lawless, while in the last two generations many a conscript has fled from Roumania, Bulgaria, Russia, and Hungary to find freedom in the fastnesses of the marshes. The Dobrudja under the Bulgars was a kind of No Man's Land, for the authority held so farther than the gendarmes could shoot, they were very disinclined to go poking about in its extensive 'fen country' in the execution of the law and justice. In Roumania's hands, however, the Dobrudja has undergone changes. An effort to stay the floods from the Danube was in contemplation before the war, together with a scheme for draining the extensive lagoons west of the St. George's mouth of the river, east of Tshernavoda. For centuries the region has been an uncultivated desert, dotted here and there by wandering flocks and their herdsmen, whose cloaks of plaited reeds serve equally against the sun and rain. Some Tartar families—the surviving evidences of Turkish occupation—pitch their encampments in the highest spots, or make away in the unhealthy season to the rocky coast—a sorry chance from the land of their forefathers, the Crimea, from which they had fled at the time of Russian conquest.

Kostendji, to give the Dobrudja's seaport its old name, which stretches along a high headland running north-north-east into the Black Sea, has an open harbor, with bad anchorage. But under Roumanian auspices the place is becoming a fortified port of great importance. A few miles west of Kostendji there can be traced the east end of "The Canal of Constantius." The triangle formed by the Danube and the sea is so nearly complete that the distance from Kostendji to Tshernavoda, near the Danube end of the canal, can be walked on a good day in spring in eight to nine hours. By cutting this isthmus the Romans calculated on linking the Danube with the Black Sea so that they might avoid the shoals and sandbanks which more or less choke all the rivers' mouths, save the Sulina. While digging the canal they heaped up the earth taken from the vast trench upon the right bank, perhaps with the intention of using it as a means of defence. And to this day the folk of Tshernavoda term it "Trajan's Wall." The canal in their neighborhood, is still full of water, but it ultimately disappears among the marshes farther eastward.

One strange feature of this melancholy, waterlogged region of marshes and knolls are the numerous barrows or tumuli which rise from all parts of the coast wherever the Romans made entrenchments and camps. Many of them are so large as to give the appearance of natural hills. Some have thought that they mark the place of sepulchre of the officers and men killed in defensive warfare against the wild barbarians of the north. Others have conjectured that they form the burial-place of the slaves once engaged in the extensive works in this region.

It is interesting to note that tradition in the Dobrudja ascribes its generally uncultivated, desolate condition to the Russians during the war with Turkey, terminating in the Treaty of Adrianople, 1827. The Russian army when it withdrew not only reduced the few towns to a state of chaos, but, according to tradition, also let in the Danube, flooding the more northerly and westerly parts of the Dobrudja and rendering them fit only for the vultures and wild-fowl that are still so numerous there.

THIRSTY BABES SUFFER

Few Realize Why Infant Cries—For Older Children

A woman physician writes: It seldom occurs to mothers and nurses that a baby needs any other liquid than its ordinary diet contains. Hence one of the commonest sufferings of infants is that of thirst. In hot weather particularly this is a cause of a great deal of the digestive troubles from which young children suffer.

Every baby over a month old will be the better for a little plain water between meals. The water should be boiled and then let cool; keep it in a covered vessel and in a clean, cool place. Scald the vessel before putting in the drinking water. A teaspoonful of cold or slightly warmed water may be given several times a day to a child of one or two months; this quantity may be increased to two teaspoonfuls as the child grows older.

Instead of plain water one may give barley water or toast water. Fruit juice is also very wholesome for young children over two or three months old. A teaspoonful of strained grape juice or orange juice, slightly sweetened, may be given twice a day with excellent results. Another good way to give fruit to young children is to roast a ripe apple, well mash a portion of the pulp, mix it with a little cream, and give a teaspoonful of the mixture once or twice a day.

For children of an age when they have begun to run about, a good supply of water is absolutely essential. And as they grow older there should be no stinting of liquid. In summer—and, indeed, throughout the year—a child of three or four years, and thence onward, should be let drink as much plain water as it desires. Take care that the water is pure, that it is not iced or very cold, that the child does not drink immediately after violent exercise or when overheated, that he does not gulp down a large quantity rapidly; and, having taken these precautions, let him drink freely whenever he wants to drink.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

DISINFECTION.

DISINFECTION means the destruction of infective agents. It includes the various measures employed during the course of a communicable disease or after the patient has recovered or died. Examples of disinfection used in the course of an infectious or communicable disease are those employed in disinfecting sputum from open tuberculous cases, stools of typhoid, or cholera patients, or the secretions from the mouth and nose of a patient ill of diphtheria. It is especially important that the family be made familiar with the means of carrying on this form of disinfection. The tuberculous sputum and secretions from mouth and nose of diphtheria cases should be burned, the stools are held in vessels to which milk or lime has been added, and then buried a foot or two under ground, away from any source of water supply. Most important it is that the hands of nurses and attendants should be washed after each contact with the patient. Other members of the family should avoid kissing the sick person and the patient's food utensils should be boiled after each use.

On the recovery or death of the patient the room occupied by him should be thoroughly renovated and disinfected. Many people think that such disinfection means fumigation by the gases of sulphur or formaldehyde. Of much greater importance are removal of curtains and carpets, their exposure for a few days to outside air and sunlight, the scrubbing of floors and woodwork with hot water and soap, and the wiping of walls and ceiling with cloths wet in 1 in 20 carbolic acid solution, or 1 in 1000 bichloride of mercury solution. Fumigation would be of value in destroying infection in rooms if it were thoroughly carried out. In many cases it is so badly done that it is a useless expense, and is not advised by the Health Department unless carried out under the direct supervision of the M. O. H. In most cases it is not required. Many municipalities such as New York, Brooklyn, and Toronto have abandoned fumigation as a routine measure.

Other means such as those outlined are quite as effective and are comparatively inexpensive.

The Provincial Board issues a pamphlet giving full directions regarding disinfection. It is sent free to anyone who asks for it.

PNEUMONIA AND THE BABY.

Many mothers are afraid to let their babies out of the house after the first spell of cold weather. We know of children in our schools who are "sewed up" in their clothes when the first snow falls and remain sewed until the spring comes; but we know, too, that a considerable number of Ontario mothers keep their babies indoors all winter. Fresh air and sunlight are two important needs of the baby—and he needs them in the cold as well as in the warm weather.

The baby must have some fresh air every day. He may sleep outdoors in the dry days of winter and summer, if dressed warmly and sheltered from the wind. If necessary, a hot water bottle or a heated brick may be placed in the carriage. If the weather is bad or severely cold, dress the baby as for going out and place him in his carriage or crib in his room. Open the window, preferably one with the sun shining in and on the side of the house sheltered from the wind, and let the baby have his afternoon sleep in the fresh air.

The window in the baby's room should be left open at night—if only a little, even on the coldest nights. A baby who has plenty of fresh air is not liable to catch a cold when the slightest draft blows on him.

Do you know that during last year (1915) nine hundred and twenty-one (921) Ontario babies, one year and under, died from pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia? Pneumonia in the baby usually begins with a cold. Try to prevent your baby catching cold:—

Do not let the baby near people who have colds, because colds are spread by contact with those suffering from them.

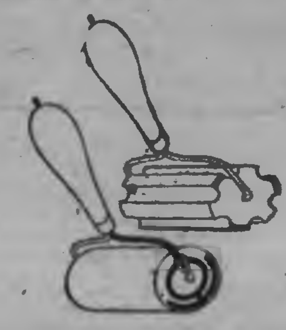
Never allow the baby to be kissed on the mouth.

Keep the baby out of drafts.

Do not let the baby play on the floor in winter. Remember the floor is the coldest (and usually the dirtiest) part of the room. The baby will be safer in his crib or in a large box or clothes-basket because the sides will protect him from drafts.

If the baby does catch cold, the best treatment is to give him a dose of castor oil. Put vaseline or lanoline in the nostrils, and rub it on the outside of the nose freely. Wrap him up warmly and give him plenty of fresh air and sunshine. Cold weather cannot hurt a baby if he is warmly dressed.

ELECTRIC MASSAGE ROLLS



Two massage rollers, so designed that they will stimulate the flesh over which they are rolled by continuous or intermittent electrical contact, have been patented. The feed wires pass through the handles of both types of rollers. One cylinder is deeply corrugated, alternate ridges being non-conducting; as it revolves over the skin it produces the intermittent electrical effect. In the other type electrical connection is controlled by the position of a thumb slide at the end of the cylinder. If it is placed in contact with a ring imbedded in the end, continuous current is supplied; if it is moved so as to be in line with a semi-circular band, parallel with the ring, contact is made during but half of each revolution of the roller.—Popular Mechanics.

Wreck's Sole Survivor

James Boyle, the sole survivor of the collision between the passenger boat Connemara and the collier Retriever off Greenore was the principal witness at the inquest at Kilkeel. He was still suffering from the effects of his experience and for some time was unable to proceed with his evidence. He told how the vessels collided and parted and how he got into a boat which twice capsized, but to which he managed to cling, eventually crawling ashore on his hands and knees.

Instead of Glass

Unbleached heavy cotton cloth may be used as a substitute for glass on hot beds and the material used for dressing it is three pints linseed oil, one ounce acetate of lead, and four ounces of white resin. Grind the acetate in a little oil, then add the resin and the rest of the oil. Melt in an iron kettle over a fire until it is well mixed and apply it to the cloth while warm.

Ship of Stone

A new type of ship, whose hull is entirely built of concrete except for the ribs, which are steel, has come from the shipyards of Christianiafjord. It is the first stone vessel ever floated, and its builders claim that it is much safer than vessels built of wood or steel.

The Strawberry Patch

Plowing in the fall allows the maximum amount of moisture to get into the strawberry soil and then frequent cultivation during the growing season retains it.

WAR'S KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

Bravery of Stretcher-bearers on the Battlefield

"Pass the word for stretcher bearers" They are waiting calmly, day and night, for some such cry as this. Two or three spring up with a stretcher, bandages, and stimulants, and make for the scene of action at the double. The sharp staccato of machine gun fire is everywhere. Bullets fly through the fire like locusts over a desert. In and out of this inferno men, British and German, dash and sway and fall. The enemy is erecting a wall of death from his guns behind our infantry. It is intended to stop the arrival of ammunition, reinforcements, food—and the stretcher-bearers.

But it does not stop them. Through the wall, with an utter disregard for their own lives, the medical men rush forward, drive through the waves of bullets, and pick out their cases. The stretchers are set down. Bandages are applied to broken limbs—all under appalling fire. The wounded man is placed very gently on the stretcher, and, as coolly and carefully as if the enemy did not exist, the bearers take up their burdens, and set out for the dressing stations. Often, as they walk on, a sliver of shell, a random bullet will kill the patient they carry. At other times a bearer will collapse, mortally hurt. Other bearers take his place and carry on as if nothing had happened. Still more often the rescuing soldier will be killed as he bandages the wounded. And sometimes a great shell will erase patient, bearers, and stretcher as a giant might erase a group of ants with his foot.

On a dark night in the midst of a desperate battle, a shell burst above a car bound for the dressing station with a cargo of patients. Bits of steel rained about the front of the machine, but did not seem to affect it. It continued steadily on its way. Only after the patients had been removed did the man sitting next the driver, in turning to comment on the close call they had received, notice his companion had collapsed over the wheel. They brought lanterns and looked him over. He was terribly wounded and nearly dead. That man was outwardly a little Cockney driver, but inside he was a splendid flower in the crown of the Knights Templar's chivalry.

"Duck Your Nut"

On his daily tour of inspection of the trenches in Gallipoli, General Birdwood one afternoon arrived at a short front line trench, a portion of the parapet of which had just been shot away. Some bombing was going on as "the soul of Anzac" was proceeding through the trench, when a "Cornstalk," who had just heaved his last quota of bombs across, caught sight of the General. Without a second's hesitation, he turned to him and bellowed like a bull, "D—— it, General, duck your blanky nut." And General Birdwood frankly admitted that he did "duck his nut."

CANADA'S THRIFTY CITIZENS

RECENT BOND SUBSCRIPTION GIVES CAUSE FOR OPTIMISM.

Certain revelations connected with the recent bond subscription of $200,000,000 in Canada where only $100,000,000 was asked, revelations no less pleasant than surprising, have done more toward enlightening Canadians with regard to the resources of their country than all the statistics compiled and published since the Dominion was formed. This over-subscription not only meant that Canada was able to take up $300,000,000 of war bonds within a twelvemonth, for it had already subscribed for one issue of $100,000,000, but that it was able to [illegible] it practically without the assistance of financial institutions. The banks had underwritten half of the second loan, or $50,000,000 of the issue, but when the books were closed it was found that the entire issue would not be sufficient to supply the individual, private, or small subscribers. It was seen at once that the thing to do was to let the public have the bonds; the banks could take care of themselves; they would have, in fact, just so much more ready money to put into business and industrial enterprises.

Another significant thing about the subscription was that the thrifty and saving class was reenforced by industrial and commercial corporations, that business men, in other words, had a surplus for patriotic purposes and investment. It is quite an unusual thing in Canada for those engaged in industrial and commercial pursuits to put money into bonds. Concerns of this character are oftener borrowers than lenders. They turn money over quickly, and investments in interest or dividend-paying securities are not in their line.

Canadian prosperity, it is true, has been brought about partly by war orders, but these constitute only a fraction of the nation's new industries. They have been most helpful in showing the country what it can do toward supplying its own needs. The war orders have tested the country's supply of raw material and the skill of its mechanics. When the war orders shall have stopped, Canada will be prepared to go on with the production of manufactured articles on a scale that it could not have attained in many years without the instruction and experience that have come with the demand for munitions. The war has cost Canada dearly, but the experience will not leave the country without some valuable compensation, especially in an enlarged knowledge of itself.

The English Sparrow.

The English sparrow has so few friends in Canada, where we have even talked seriously of taking steps to exterminate the bird, that it is interesting to find a kind word said on its behalf in "Our Dumb Animals," which makes the statement that one brood of hungry young sparrows destroyed 2,000 alfalfa weevils in a single day. Nor was this an isolated instance of usefulness on the part of this much-censured bird. There is a section of Hungary in which the farmers, after herculean efforts, succeeded in getting rid of what they regarded as a pest. At the end of five years they found themselves so overrun with insects that they exerted themselves to bring back the bird which they had driven away with such difficulty. Then, so the story runs, the insects disappeared. These instances would not be sufficient to prove the case for the English sparrow, but a consideration of another kind is brought forward as an argument against a campaign for its extermination. To most persons, all sparrows are English sparrows. At a distance, even an expert may be deceived. One who undertakes to rid the neighborhood of them, therefore, may destroy more of other birds than of them, and do a great deal more harm than good. The matter is evidently not to be disposed of in the usual offhand way.

The Ancient Water Wagon.

The water wagon, which has done such speedy traveling throughout Canada in recent years, started its journey up and down the continent long before our nation came into existence. An American historian offers proof of this assertion which was 236 years old last April. It is in the form of a petition to a royal governor signed by twelve men who were determined that the brewers' big horses shouldn't run over them:

"Where as, wee, ye inhabitants of ye neu Seated Towne near ye falls of Dellaware (called Crewcorne), finding ourselves aggrieved by ye Indians when drunk, informeth that we be and have been in great danger of our lives, of our houses burning, of our goods stealing, and of our Wives and Children affrighting. Insomuch that wee are afeard to go about our Lawful affairs, least when we come home we finde you and our concerns damaified.

"These things considered, wee doe humbly & jointly desire that the selling of brandy and strong liquors to ye Indians may be whollye suppressed, when, if done, wee hope wee shall live peaceably."

Nellie—That Clara Sharpe is just the meanest, most utterly selfish girl I ever saw. She never thinks of any one but herself.

Dora—Tell me about it.

Nellie—I ran in there the other evening for a few moments, and while I was there Mr. Spooner called. It wasn't long before he requested her to play. He's passionately fond of music, you know. Well, what do you think that girl did? She asked him to come to the piano and turn the music for her, so that I couldn't talk to him.

WHY PAPER IS DEAR

Forest Fires a Big Contributing Cause —Makes a Long Haul Necessary

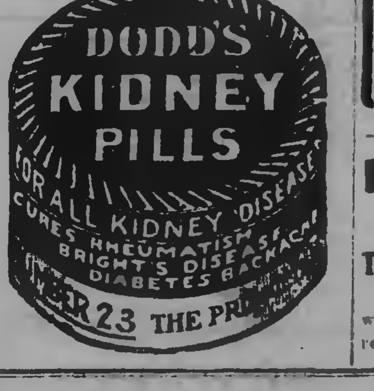
Independent of other causes operating to increase the price of paper to Canadian publishers, the constant destruction of spruce and balsam forests by preventable fires has played a serious role, says a bulletin by the Canadian Forestry Association. Without question, there is abundance of woods to meet all demands of paper mills, but abundance and accessibility are frequently two very different things. Transportation, distances between the woods and the mills is a factor of first importance, as not a few unsuccessful Canadian and American paper mills have been forced to realise. Every additional mile a paper mill is obliged to travel for logs, the cost of the paper products will reflect an advance.

E. H. Backus, President of the Minnesota and Ontario Paper Co. at Fort Francis, Ont., stated that the increasing inaccessibility of pulp limits from the mills is making paper dearer. Unlike small saw mills, the permanently located pulp mill cannot pack up its equipment and follow the retreating forest. Forest engineers are agreed, however, that with care in operating limits and thorough protection against fire, pulpwood forests can be perpetuated indefinitely; accessibility of supplies need be lessened very little.

Up to the present stage in Canada the lack of modern fire protection has reduced the near-at-hand bodies of pulp wood far more than the actual cut of logs. The Northern Ontario fires are an illustration of this fact. In the 1,200 square miles devastated were substantial quantities of paper making materials. In the same fire an Ontario paper company lost 400,000 cords of wood, ready piled in the mill yard. The forest fire record in Ontario and Quebec during ten years accounts for vastly more forest wealth than has passed into lumber and pulp.

Without doubt, other causes than unheeded fires were at the root of the paper price advances in war time, but it remains true that since the first paper factory in Canada began to operate, the fire fiend has been laying his tax on the paper consumer.

If wishes were automobiles, beggars might kick for airships.



VERY USEFUL BRUSHES

A brush with buttons tip mounted on a curved wire handle is much better than the usual shape for cleansing thoroughly the curved bowl of the toilet. A saw shaped, triangular brush mounted on a long handle is excellent for cleansing window shades, shutters and outer flat surfaces where the dust is lodged perpendicularly. A little spot brush with a round stubby head is just the thing to take stains out of clothing, upholstery or other fabrics. A flat, one-sided brush with a row of bristles lying on the bias is helpful in cleaning the iron work of a gas range and in getting around other crevices in metal work.

EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA RULED FOR MANY YEARS; KNEW MUCH SORROW

IT is sixty-eight years since the Countess Karolyi, whose son has fallen victim of the executions following the Hungarian revolt, thus cursed the young Emperor Francis Joseph: "May heaven and hell blast his happiness! May his family be exterminated! May he be smitten in the persons of those he loves! May his life be wrecked! May his children be brought to ruin!"

Rarely in human history has a curse been more completely fulfilled. Francis Joseph's brother, Maximilian, died before a firing squad in Mexico. His sister-in-law lost her reason. His only son perished in the shameful tragedy of Meyerling. His wife was murdered at Geneva. As for his other relatives, the tragedies and the follies of the archdukes have long been a European byword, and the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, two years ago was but the last in the long series of misfortunes that have followed Francis Joseph.

Francis Joseph, when he came to Schoenbrunn, found about him the memories of a Napoleonic occupation not yet remote; he has lived to the hour when a new Napoleonic struggle has convulsed the world. Francis Joseph was the last remaining figure of the Nineteenth Century. When he was young Metternich ruled in Vienna and strove to root up the ideas and the memories of the French Revolution. The great men of the fight against Napoleon were on earth. When he came to power the Revolution of 1848 was still going forward and men were striving to preserve and revive the liberties and ideals of the earlier and greater revolution.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH.

He was still young when Cavour unified Italy, when Bismarck created modern Germany. William I, Victoria, Louis Napoleon, Victor Emmanuel, these were his contemporaries, and they have all become pale shades. The world that he knew has vanished also. Republican institutions have returned to France, and the ideas that were hateful to all those he knew in youth continue to march.

Francis Joseph was not a great Emperor like Napoleon nor yet a great King like Louis XIV. He was a typical product of the Hapsburg family, whose reactionary ideas he shared and served. When he was young the theories of Metternich ruled, and he accepted them. He fought to prevent the unity of Italy and the rise of modern Germany. He sought to enslave the Balkans as his predecessors endeavored to enslave Italy. The war with Napoleon III. drove him out of Italy as far as Venetia; the war with Germany expelled him from Germany and from Venetia. From that moment onward Austria declined visibly; she was no longer one of the dominating voices in the European councils; she became more and more the vassal of that Prussia whose rise she had opposed so long in the Eighteenth Century.

To-day, when death has at last overtaken him, the first thought in all minds must be for the future. He was the centre about which gathered all that was national and independent in Austrian life. His family was older than the Hohenzollern, and there clung to it a dignity not yet acquired by the latest ruler of a house which was but a small German affair two centuries ago, when the Hapsburg princes mounted the throne of the Holy Roman Empire in regular rotation.

Will the passing of Francis Joseph be followed by the actual subordination in permanence of the Hapsburg to the Hohenzollern? Will Berlin joining hands with Budapest, reduce Vienna to a place of relative unimportance? Will an Allied victory in the future bring about that dissolution of the Austrian Empire so many times threatened, so often imminent? Already the meaning of an Allied victory is not hidden. Galicia, the Bukovina, Transylvania, Temesvar, Croatia and Slavonia, Dalmatia, Bosnia, and Herzegovina, Istria, and the Trentino, these are marked by the foes of Austria and beyond this lies the ever present threat of Hungarian secession.

Men will ask the world over whether the passing of Francis Joseph makes for peace or for war. Actually it is hard to see now how his death will affect the situation. The flames that are still mounting higher and higher are beyond the control of one man or many men; it is to be doubted if William II. himself could much influence the course of the gigantic struggle now.

Bluecher in the Hospital.

At the time of the Seven Years' war there was very little knowledge of surgery, and the surgeons were often no more than barbers, inexperienced and uneducated. They were commonly known as the "Company of Pain," a name that fitted them admirably.

Lieutenant Bluecher, afterward the famous field marshal, says Taegliche Rundschau, was wounded in the foot by a musket ball. At the hospital to which he was carried several surgeons began to probe the wound and cut promiscuously in its vicinity. Finally Bluecher inquired, in spite of the pain: "What sort of tailoring are you trying to do? The wound is large enough already, I should think!"

"We're looking for the bullet," answered one of the offended surgeons.

"Oh, oh!" cried Bluecher angrily. "Why didn't you tell me that before? I have it in my pocket." And with that he drew from his pocket the bullet, which he had extracted from the wound himself.

THE COST OF FORMER WARS

HUGE EXPENDITURE OF MONEY ON EUROPEAN WARS.

War cost Europe from the beginning of the nineteenth century up to August, 1914, about 65,000,000,000 francs, or not half of what the belligerent powers have already expended during the present conflict, according to statistics compiled by Edmond Thery, the French economist, and published in an article written to indicate the progression of the cost of war.

The fifteen years of war waged by Napoleon increased the public debt of France by 588,000,000 francs, while the Crimean war alone cost the Republic 1,860,000,000, according to Thery. Great Britain spent 1,550,00.000 in the Crimean, while that war cost Austria 343,000,000, and Turkey and Sardinia together 642,000,000 francs. France spent 650,000,000 francs on the Mexican war, he says, and 852,000,000 in the conflict against Austria for the liberation' of Italy. mark and Austria, spent about 2,000,-

Prussia in her wars against Den- 000,000 francs, while the German states and France together spent about 15,000,000,000 on the war of 1870, including 5,000,000,000 francs indemnity paid by France to Germany. The war of 1877-78 against Turkey cost Russia about 2,700,000,000 francs, while she spent 6,300,000,000 in the war with Japan as against 4,500,000,000 spent by Japan.

Every striker in a munitions works ought to be treated as a deserter on the field of battle.—Archdeacon Wilberforce.

COLONEL F. W. MARLOW, M.D.
Assistant Director of Medical Services in Canada, who recommended many important changes after an inspection of the Military Medical Service in Canada.

WHERE LIGHTNING STRIKES

Precautions to Take When in Open—Avoid Metals

Out of doors the most dangerous places during a thunderstorm are evidently in open fields, under isolated trees, and near wire fences. Small sheds and other shelters are almost equally as dangerous as isolated trees, especially if the sheds are in the open, away from larger buildings. Thick timber is undoubtedly the safest place to seek out of doors, for the reason that a single tree under which a person might take shelter in a forest area is not as likely to receive a stroke as a single object or a person in an open space of equal area.

Although it is not possible to guard completely against being struck by lightning, the risk may be minimized considerably by adopting a few simple precautions. In seeking shelter from the heavy rain which usually accompanies a storm, do not select a high and isolated tree. This is a good mark for the lightning. Safety may be found in a low-lying wood, where a great number of trees dissipate the electrical energy.

When a storm is imminent, move away from high ground to low ground do not open a metal-tipped umbrella and do not carry iron instruments Iron fences or galvanized metal buildings are extremely dangerous, and the general policy should be to get as close to the earth as possible and away from prominent and metallic objects which may make a track for the lightning. If in a house, keep on the ground floor and away from the chimney. But although all these precautions are wise, none of them can assure you absolute safety when in the path of an electrical storm.

German Strategy

Dummy sentinels are being used by the Germans along the Belgian frontier. Where the Germans had a soldier posted every hundred yards they have only one every thousand yards. In order to frighten away would-be smugglers and deserters, the Germans place dummy sentinels every fifty yards when night falls.

CRUELTY OF GERMAN NURSES

Refuse to Attend the British Wounded—Ugly Attitude Toward Neutrals.

Arguments with German women about the war are absolutely futile, writes D. Thomas Curtin of Boston. The allies scored successes on the western front and on the Carso. The German women, who after their own method follow the war very closely, will blindly believe that these defeats are tactical re-arrangements of positions dictated by the wisdom of the General Staff, and so long as no allied troops are upon German soil so long will the German populace believe in the invincibility of its army. I am speaking always of the middle and upper classes, who are on the whole, but with increasing exceptions, as intensely pro-war as the lower classes are anti-war.

The neglect and in some cases refusal of German nurses to attend the English wounded are a sign both of their own intensity of feeling in regard to the war and their entirely different mentality. Again and again I have heard German women say, "In the event of a successful German invasion of England the women will accompany the men and teach the women of England that war is war." Their remarks in regard to the women of my own country are equally offensive.

Indeed, States that Germany regards as neutral and who are treated by the officially controlled German press with a certain amount of respect are loathed by German women. Their attitude is that all who are not on their side are their enemies. American women who are making shells for the British, French, and Russians are just as much the enemies of Germany as the allied soldiers and sailors. One argument often used is that to be strictly neutral America should make no munitions at all, but it would not be so bad, say the Germans, if half the American ammunition went to Germany and half to the allies.

COSSACKS AND HORSES

HOW HORSES PLAY AN IMPORTANT PART IN WAR TACTICS.

Remarkable new battle tactics, never before seen in the history of warfare, are largely responsible for the great advance scored by the Russians. Their horses play no mean part in the performance. In a cavalry charge with lightning-like rapidity the Russian cavalrymen jump from their horses and throw themselves to the ground. Their animals have been carefully trained to lie down, too. With their bodies in a row, the horses serve as living barricades for the riders.

While the Cossacks open a hot carbine fire from behind their horses the infantry draws up. At the same time the reserves are set in motion, in eight, ten, twelve, and even fourteen successive waves. Another spectacular feat of the Cossacks, introduced in 1916, is to serve as an advance guard when rivers are to be crossed. Picked men, who are expert swimmers, leap from their horses and throw themselves into the water stark naked. They carry their arms and ammunition in bundles on their heads, or drag them on little rafts, while their faithful horses swim by their side.

Rats in Trenches

A new way to kill the rats which infest the trenches is reported by a South African officer writing from France. He says: "We found one of our men putting a bit of cheese on his bayonet and firing a rifle every time a rat started to eat it."

Faithful Pigeon

A General at the front thought he would like to examine personally one of the messages brought in by a carrier pigeon. This is what he read: "Look 'ere, Bill, I'm about fed up with looking after this bird!"

This war has taught us Churchmen that our religion is not so good as we thought it was.—Bishop of Wakefield.

"King of the Yser"

At a celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Yser, the Belgian Premier declared the Belgians were celebrating the anniversary of a battle which represented in their eyes the lustre of rams in the service of right. "We accepted," he said, "the war imposed upon us, and we shall continue it with a tenacious determination which nothing tires or checks." M. de Broqueville concluded with a eulogy of King Albert, whom legend, he declared, would adorn with the name of "King of the Yser," to incarnate in his likeness the virtues of courage, honor and endurance.

A house-to-house collection of gold and silver trinkets at Wimbledon realized $6,000 towards a motor hospital boat for Mesopotamia.

Not Used To It

In a letter home, A. G. Ross, a member of the British Royal Engineers in German East Africa, says: "The giraffes are causing more trouble to the telegraph than any other animals, as they go about at night, run into the wires, and down they come with the wire."

"GERMANY CANNOT WIN"

THEIR OFFICERS ADMITTED AND BLAMED BRITISH LEADERS.

"Thanks to Mr. Lloyd George, Sir Douglas Haig, and Sir William Robertson, I heard for the first time the admission by a German officer that Germany cannot win." This is a passage from the striking statement of Mr. D. Thomas Curtin, in a war lecture at His Majesty's Theatre. "A colonel," said Mr. Curtin, "talking to a major in an hotel—both had come from the Somme—said, 'We should have no illusions. We cannot win. The British are not what they were. They have guns, too many guns, and the general in charge seems to understand his business.'

"Sooner or later, Germany is going to be beaten," Mr. Curtin added, "but remember that this is a war between peoples. The Germans are using all their strength, and Great Britain should use all hers. If that is done you will reap the fruits of this tragic and wonderful time!"

OPPORTUNITIES IN INDIA BROUGHT ABOUT BY WAR

Newspaper Reading on Increase---Christians Permitted in the Army---High Caste Women Leave Their Homes and Make Supplies for Soldiers.

In the Anglican churches of the city yesterday, Rev. H. R. A. Haslam, M.A., of India, told of the opportunities now before the Christian nations for the furtherance of the Gospel in India. Mr. Haslam, who has spent thirteen years in missionary effort, and is home on furlough, preached at St. Luke's Church in the morning; he addressed the Sunday School of St. John's Church in the afternoon, and preached at All Saints Church in the evening.

In the course of his sermon in the evening he said: Give to the Red Cross, but don't leave out the blood-red cross of Jesus Christ. It must be lifted up out there as it must be lifted up at home. See to it that he Gospel is sent to India in this hour of opportunity.

Christians in Ranks

Mr. Haslam told of several changes brought about in India during the war, which made the spreading of Christianity easier and brought greater results than was the case before the war. One of his illustrations had to do with the changed condition relating to those people in India who had accepted Christianity. Hitherto they were in the same position as the outcasts not permitted to join the army. After war broke out permission was given by the commander-in-chief in India to raise three double companies of Christian soldiers. They fought so well and did such effective work that an application was made to raise a regiment of Christian soldiers. This new condition meant that a new status was given to the Christian.

Women of India

In September, 1914, for the first time in the history of India, wives of high-caste gentlemen came out of their homes and joined with the wives of British officers in preparing comforts for the troops. Mr. Haslam saw 300 cases of supplies which these women had prepared.

He gave the illustration to point out that it would mean that women missionaries would in the future be able to approach these women of India and enter their homes—something never permitted in the past, and a great hindrance to the missionary work being carried on by the men.

Read Newspapers

Another illustration was the reading of newspapers, which has very largely increased since the outbreak of war and meant much as a help to the missionaries in their urging upon the people of India the great benefits he had from reading, writing and arithmetic. The argument of the parent has been that his family must direct all their energies to getting enough to eat. "I have implicit faith that with the power of the Gospel in these homes the definite result will be a further breaking away from idalatry and heathenism and a closer approach to Christ" said Rev. Mr. Haslam.

The Hour of Opportunity

The text was Isiah's words: "Spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy staves. The preacher said he believed if ever in the world's history, God is calling us to a new life and a new vision, it is today. He had talked with the great leaders of thought in India and all were in accord in that this is the hour of hours to move and give the Gospel to the millions of India. It had been said that the war has been to India more than ten years of missionary service. The situation was a challenge to Christianity, to every congregation, to every individual, to bring Christ to the less favored peoples of the world, who are crying out for Him as never before.

Mr Haslam said 300,000 had gone from India, loyally and joyfully to fight the battles of right against might. When he walked the streets of Toronto and saw the number of young men who had not the manhood to fight for the cause of righteousness, in contrast to the 300,000 who had gone from India, he was heartily ashamed of the young men who are still holding back.

HUN CAMPS OF DEATH

Deliberate Spreading of Disease in Germany's Prison Compounds

Mme. Karen Bramson, writing in the Matin, says: Germany has deliberately organized the propagation of tuberculosis among prisoners of war. Referring to the camp at Cassel, a medical eye-witness writes: "I have observed that typhus has been introduced into the camp by Russian prisoners, and by a criminal order sent from Berlin they were mixed with the healthy French. To this order was attached the following observation: 'Frenchmen will thus have an opportunity of making the acquaintance of their beloved allies.'"

At Cassel the number of sick was 10,000, and the deaths numbered 4,000. The whole of the German medical staff deserted their posts, and food was introduced by a chute through the outer palings.

Dealing with the camp at Friedrichsteld, an eye-witness writes: "As though it were desired to spread tuberculosis purposely, those who were seriously ill were put into the same huts with the convalescents recovering from other maladies, whose weakened state constituted a condition specially liable for contagion."

Behind the official camps through which neutral visitors were conducted for inspection purposes, there are many thousands of young Russian, British and French prisoners who were quite healthy when first brought to the camps, but who have been tortured and starved in the prison workshops until they return to the hospitals sick, miserable, and incurable.

AN ENEMY TRIBUTE

A German Paper Writes in Favor of Lloyd-George

The Amsterdam correspondent of The Times says: The Dusseldorfer Generalanzeiger, discussing General Groner's appointment, says: "We must work and employ every minute. All hands behind the front, either unemployed or not yet employed on military work, will have to exert themselves to the utmost. Mr. Lloyd-George, the British Minister of Ammunition (sic), is an organizing genius of the first rank. He has achieved what no one thought possible. By dozens of speeches throughout the country he has shown the British laborers as well as rich men that everybody must lend a hand if Great Britain is not to sink from her historic position. Thus the English have overtaken our original superiority in artillery."

FATHERS OF CANADIAN HEROES MAKE APPEALS FOR RECRUITS

Dr. Edwards M.P. and Col. Ponton Point to the Path of Duty, Which Eligible Young Men Should Tread.

WOMEN URGED TO PURSUADE

Another Sunday night recruiting meeting has been held and it was successful in every way but one—the attendance of the eligible young men known to be in the city.

Dr. Edwards, of Cataraqui, and Col. Ponton, of Belleville, referred to their absence in their addresses, but sent the message to the absentees through the medium of the host of ladies who were present.

The ever popular 247th band (formerly the 93rd), under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes, delighted the gathering with splendid selections before and during the meeting. There is class to their music and enjoyment in every note of it.

The chair was occupied by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., and in opening the meeting he paid tribute to the 247th Batt. under Lieut-Col. Ackerman and his able staff of officers. Reference was made to the presence of the band which formerly belonged to the 93rd Batt., one of the best that Canada had sent out. The speaker appealed to the young men to gladden the hearts of the officers by enlisting.

The Commanding Officer

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman took the meeting into his confidence and gave a real insight into how he was making a canvass of the young eligible men of the city. Some were in doubt as to the information required by the officers making the canvass. The principle ones were: the address, the age, the occupation and reasons for not enlisting. It was not intended to embarrass or humiliate any man. If the questions were answered satisfactorily the questioned one would not be further troubled at any time. A great many men gave surprising answers to the officers and the number that had not thought of enlisting was just as surprising. When the canvass is completed the 247th will be in possession of information that, if conscription is resorted to, will enable the officers to go out and place their hand on every man who should be brought in. The men who thought themselves physically unfit were asked to come to the Armories, be examined and if rejected get the rejected button. The assistance of the citizens to the canvassing officers was requested.

Percy Luther

Recruiting Sergeant Percy Luther has appeared before many recruiting meetings on previous occasions, and again delighted the audience with a patriotic recitation entitled "Jean De Pus."

Uphold the Maple Leaf

Capt. M. Hamilton, the popular commander of A Company, praised the soldiers of Peterborough who had gone forth from the Armories to do duty for Canada since the outbreak of the war. He appealed for increased enlistment in the 247th Battalion, pointing out that the commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Ackerman, and Major O'Flynn were members of the "Iron Battalion," and the adjutant a member of the Princess Pats, and the other good officers were ready to train the men to go forth to fight and uphold the Maple Leaf. "Get into the game before conscription."

Dr. Edwards, M.P.

Dr. J. W. Edwards, M. P. for Frontenac, made a very strong appeal to the young men to get into khaki, and he gave reasons for appealing to them by pointing out that his oldest daughter was at Folkestone giving her services without cost to the Empire; her husband was somewhere in France; his only son was doing his bit; two of his nephews were at the front, and other relatives had gone, some of them having paid the supreme sacrifice, and he had offered his services to the Minister of Militia in any capacity.

This was not to be considered as a boast, but to give him some right to be present on the platform.

The speaker pointed out that two and a half years ago no one would have thought of the destruction of Louvain, of Rheims, the sinking of the Lusitania, etc. People would not think that such barabaric deeds were possible by the German nation and he was glad to say that since the war began not a single instance of barbarism would mar the future pages of history on our side. (Applause.)

The history of democracy as represented by Britain and her Allies as against military autocracy as represented by the Central Powers, was dwelt on.

The fight that the people of Great Britain had made for ages for the supremacy of democracy had guaranteed to the English-speaking world justice and freedom for all time. Every man, whether rich or poor, prince or peasant, was made to feel that he had a personal worth. Every man was as good as his neighbor if he behaved himself. As against this, the German people had been trained for generations for this jump at the throat of Europe. They had been taught a gospel of national hate in preference to the Gospel of Christ. Their personality was blotted out and each was merely a military number and taught that that is all he should be.

World Not Large Enough

The world was not large enough for these two principles to stand side by side. Germany's triumph over Denmark in 1864, over Austria in 1865 and over France in 1870, together with her remarkable commercial progress, had been impressed on the German people as reasons why Germany was destined to rule the world and the speaker pointed out that the war would not be won on the field of battle, but German ideals would have to be crushed out of the minds of the people, never to be heard of again.

The speaker then went over a review of the condition of the army and navy strength of the nations previous to the declaration of war, showing Germany's preparedness as against the Allies' unpreparedness, and yet Germany stated that the war was forced on her; this was utterly ridiculous. Germany saw a chance to realize her ambition for world domination and struck the blow, depending on Austria-Hungary to hold Russia in check while France was invaded and made to seek peace terms and then laugh at England. It came nearly succeeding, but a small army of British regulars at Mons in 1914 had halted the foe in a manner that will never be equalled by a similar number of men.

The Peace Talk

The peace talk in the papers came from where the war came from. We who did not want war, want peace; we will welcome it, but not while the hand that signs it for Germany is dripping with the blood of innocent victims. We talked peace when Germany wanted war, now we talk war when Germany wants peace, and is anxious for it.

Whether a man enlists or not must be decided by his own conscience. Every man of military age, physically fit, should honestly endeavor to arange his affairs so that he can enlist if possible. The British Empire was never so near destruction. Canada was nearer to slavery than in the days when a slave was bound to his master. It was the duty of Canadian men to maintain the honor of the flag, to uphold Christian civilization, to uphold the integrity of the British Empire on whose success depends the independence of Canadian wealth and commerce. The men of Canada should show gratitude to the Mother Country by enlisting as a reward for the protection furnished in the early days. Her danger is Canada's danger. You are not fighting for England, but fighting with England for Canada.

Praise for the Women

Dr. Edwards gave great praise to the Canadian women of whom there were 10,000 making shells for the men to fire. He appealed to the mothers, sisters, wives and sweethearts to impress on the men their duty. People had been heard to say that Canada was safe because the United States would not see Germany interfere here. These people forgot that the United States' honor went down when they let their own women and children die at the hands of the foe, and Wilson sent another note. Canada would not depend on that. Not on your life. "Safety first."

We must assume our full responsibility of imperial citizenship and enlist for the new Canada, born on the field of battle from the blood of Canadian heroes.

Col. Ponton

Col. Ponton of Belleville, president of the Veterans' Association and who has three sons in khaki, was given a warm reception. He referred to his personal knowledge of the officers of the 247th Batt.—Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Major O'Flynn—who had all come from the Bay of Quinte. Peterborough had sent many fine soldiers to fight in France for the Empire, and he also gave great praise to Major Canon Davidson, who is now in France.

He then started in for an appeal for more men by appealing to the better side of the women-folk. He remarked that there was a very small percentage of Peterborough's eligible 1,400 men present and asked the ladies to convey the message to them. It was great to be in the British brotherhood of soldiers. The speaker would rather be a dead soldier than a dead citizen. The great majority of the men who go to the front will return home and who would miss the welcome home? Just think of the march through London. This was the year of victory and when the boys come home the shirkers will find that they are undesirables in Canada.

The speaker displayed a bunch of bulletins taken from the London newspapers showing the credit given to the Canadians. Some of them were:—

Canadian retake lost trenches.—Daily Chronicle.

Gallant Canadians. The Ypres recovery.—The Globe.

Canadian battalions retake lost ground.—Westminster Gazette.

Canadian success at Ypres, the event of the day.—Pall Mall Gazette

Canadians recapture mile of trenches.—The Telegram.

Bravo, Maple Leaf Canadians.—The News.

A Novel Proposition

The speaker appealed to Peterborough to send some maple trees to England to be planted in hospital grounds and other places. Belleville had done so. He also suggested that the Council and Board of Education here close one of the large schools and turn it into a hospital for wounded soldiers. Belleville had done this. The school hours could be shortened and the scholars divided around.

Col. Ponton also displayed a number of posters appealing to the men to enlist and when he came to the one, "Canada expects every man to do his duty," referred to the bravery of Thompson and Armstrong, of Peterborough, members of the Cobourg Heavy Battery, who had stood by their guns until wounded or dead. The prompt action of Gordon Matthews, who captured a German mortar and turned it on the fleeing Germans, was lauded.

"Join the brave throng that goes marching along," was one of the appeals made by the speaker in closing.

The National Anthem closed the meeting.

CONTROLLING FOREST FIRES

MEASURES ARE NOW BEING TAKEN IN NORTHERN ONTARIO.

There are to be no more forest fires with their atendant loss of life in Northern Ontario if the Department of Lands, Forests, and Mines can prevent it. Last week an announcement was made by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson to an influential deputation organised by the Canadian Forestry Association that some time ago it had been decided to establish a special branch of the Department to look after fire prevention and fire control. This branch is to be under the direction of Mr. E. J. Zavitz, who has done much pioneer work in connection with forest conservation in recent years. He will bring to the work of this new branch the benefit of a wide experience in forestry.

Already much preliminary work has been done. Several hundred miles of telephone lines have been constructed through the sections where the best pine remains, and these have been augmented with a large number of lookout towers so that a watch can be kept over threatened country. Specially designed fire fighting apparatus has been placed at convenient points so that it can be conveyed by motor-boat, automobile, or wagon to any threatened spot.

This deals principally with fire prevention. The question of fire control offers more serious obstacles. One great source of danger has been the indiscriminate burning of brush and slash by settlers in the dry weather to clear their land. Nobody wants to place restrictions on the settlers, but Mr. Ferguson admitted at the time that he saw no other solution than to have this burning done only under permit. Experience in other places shows that this method of control once it was properly understood became popular both with the settler and lumberman, who were now applauding the new methods. By the permit system a fire ranger is on hand to superintend the burning, which is done under proper weather conditions, and the necessary apparatus is on hand to prevent the fire spreading into the bush.

The "Tanks" of Cyrus.

Apropos of the armored automobile of the British, the Figaro of Paris remarks that the first model of this kind of war automobile is found illustrated in the bas-reliefs of Khorsala and Nineveh; armed chariots used by the Greeks and the Trojans in the days of Agamemnon, and which were introduced by Cyrus in the armies of the Persians. Having at hand no gasoline, Cyrus had his chariots or his cars drawn by horses. Sylla at the Battle of Cheronea found means of defence against those armed chariots which for centuries had spread terror on battlefields. He armed his soldiers of the second line with poles divided into four sharpened points. These poles were planted on the ground on the advance of the armored chariots launched in an assault by Archilaus, Mithridates' commander. The first line of the Romans retired in the rear of this barrier against which the armed chariots in their impetuous assault were broken to pieces. Suddenly the light forces of Sylla hurled themselves forward; they surrounded the armed chariots, covering them with a cloud of arrows and a shower of stones. Few of these chariots could escape, amidst the cries of mockery of the Roman soldiers. "Polye," the writer of this article in the Figaro, says that in this third year of the war Hindenburg is not worth a Sylla, nor could the armies of the Teutons rival the Roman legions.

An Absent-minded Peer.

Among the many excellent stories which Mr. Leslie Ward, the famous cartoonist "Spy," tells in his Reminiscences are one or two concerning the absent-mindedness of Lord Crewe's father, the poet-peer, better known as Monckton-Milnes.

"I remember," says "Spy," "the eccentric lord coming into the club one evening looking tired and hungry. On the mantelpiece a white paper gleamed. It was a list of the Derby Lottery. Something stirred in his mind, which was far away on other subjects bent, and reminded him that he was hungry. He scanned the Lottery List . . . and at last he was heard to murmur in dissatisfied tones: 'Waiter, I don't see anything to eat here.'"

On another occasion, after a careful scrutiny of the actual menu, he ordered a herring.

Monckton-Milnes used to dine at the Athenaeum, and usually at the same table. Another member came rushing in one day to obtain a place for himself. But every seat was occupied save that reserved for Lord Crewe. "Tell him when he comes," said the would-be diner to the waiter as he sat down, "that he's dined!" It is to be supposed the waiter found the deception worth while, for when Lord Crewe arrived he was met with surprise and quiet expostulation. "You dined an hour ago, my lord," said the unscrupulous servant. "So I did," murmured the poor victim, as he retraced his steps.

PATCH ON SHIRT LEADS TO THE IDENTIFICATION OF REMAINS AS THOSE OF JAMES GORDON

Three weeks ago a charred body taken from the Quaker Oats ruins could not be identified, but at the time it was found the searchers were of the opinion that it might be that of James Gordon, owing to its being found in a spot directly underneath where Gordon would have been at work. There were parts of the body that could not be recovered at the time. On Saturday other parts were found at this spot and attached to one part was a piece of a heavy shirt showing a patch. Yesterday Mr. Frank Fairen, a half-brother of deceased, took the remnant to Mrs. Gordon, who positively identified it as part of a shirt which she had patched for her husband.

James Gordon was a very popular employe of the Quaker Oats Company, where he worked in the puffed rice department. In city life he was well known, having been born in Peterborough in 1875 in a house then located across from Victoria Park. For many years he was a member of the old volunteer fire brigade and later was employed as motorman on the street railway.

The remains will be taken to his late residence, 253 Stewart street, tomorrow afternoon, and the funeral will take place on Wednesday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

REMAINS OF A. McGEE ARE RECOVERED FROM FIRE RUINS; IDENTIFICATION BY HIS WATCH

The remains of Alphonse McGee, who perished in the Quaker Oats fire, were recovered from the ruins Saturday night. The skeleton was lying in a short distance from where the remains of an unidentified body had been found some days ago. There was no natural identification of the late Mr. McGee's remains possible, but his watch and chain were there in fairly good condition. The watch had stopped at 7:20.

The deceased was 21 years of age and was the son of Mrs. John McGee of Kinmount.

The remains will be taken to that village tomorrow morning for burial.

THIRD LINE TRENCHES OF FOE PENETRATED BY THE BRITISH

LONDON, Jan. 7.— Last night's official statement says: North of Beaumont Hamel we seized two hostile posts and beat off a counter-attack. In the afternoon we successfully raided the enemy's position east of Arras and entered their trenches over a wide front and penetrated to the third line. Many dugouts were bombed and destroyed and much damage done. In minor engagements since Christmas we have taken 240 prisoners.

G. A. GILLESPIE SELLS HIS LAND

LABOR PROBLEM INDUCES HIM TO GIVE UP FARMING.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., has sold his 130-acre farm on the Chemong road, to Mr. E. A. Sanderson from whom he purchased it four years ago, at which time Mr. Sanderson retired, building himself a home on the outskirts of the city. The reason Mr. Gillespie consented to sell is that he became tired of trying to secure labor to properly work the land. Mr. Sanderson was tired, too, but of his life of inactivity, and was anxious to get into the harness again. He has only one son, a youth of 13, to help him in his new undertaking.

The farm has been improved, both in the matter of buildings and cultivation, under Mr. Gillespie's management, and is worth several thousand dolars more than when he purchased it. He will have an auction sale of the stock in a few weeks.

FIRST GLIMPSE OF TANKS MADE GERMANS THINK THAT THEY SAW SATAN

THE German story of the first appearance of the "Tanks" on the battle line is given in the following article reproduced by The London Express from a German newspaper:

When the German outposts crept out of their dugouts in the mist of the morning of September 16 and stretched their necks to look for the English their blood was chilled in their veins. Two mysterious monsters were crawling towards them over the craters. Stunned as if an earthquake had burst around them, they all rubbed their eyes, which were fascinated by the fabulous creatures.

Their imaginations were still excited by the effects of the bombardment. It was no wonder, then, that imagination got the better of these sorely tried men, who knew well enough that the enemy would use every means to destroy our steel wall of fragile human bodies. These men no longer know what fear is. But here was some deviltry which the brain of man had invented, with powerful mechanical forces, a mystery which rooted one to the ground because the intelligence could not grasp it, a fate before which one felt helpless.

One stared and stared as if one had lost the power of one's limbs. The monsters approached slowly, wobbling, rolling, and rocking, but they approached. Nothing impeded them; a supernatural force seemed to impel them on. Someone in the trenches said: "The devil is coming," and the word was passed along the line like wildfire.

Suddenly tongues of flame leaped out of the armored sides of the iron caterpillar. Shells whistled over our heads, and the sound of machine guns filled the air. The mysterious creature had yielded its secret, and the men came back to their senses; their vigor and tenacity returned when the English infantry rolled up in waves behind the "devil's coaches."

The thirteen vehicles of the Motor Machine Gun Corps were landed at Le Havre on August 29, in order not to excite attention they were painted in dull colors and sent to the front by night. Their weight is so great that a railway wagon collapsed under them. They were placed at first behind the field artillery positions, and then brought up to the trenches.

On Sept. 16 two of these armored cars took part in the English infantry attack at Flers. Our machine guns and hand grenades rattled ineffectively from off their iron hides. As our communications with the rear had been cut, our artillery could not be called upon to aid us against the massed fire of these armored towers. They were thus able without difficulty to wipe out the remnants of the garrisons of the advanced shell craters. They then crossed the first German line to the village of Flers, and spent some time there.

After the English infantry had come up and taken possession of the village, they continued along the Ligny-Thilley road. In the meanwhile notice of their arrival had reached our rear positions. Well-aimed shots from our field guns put an end to their victorious career beyond the village of Flers. The crews were killed in the explosion of the petrol; a mechanic, who happened to be outside at the time, was taken prisoner.

The clumsy steel box with sides one inch thick has appeared in a different form between Combles and Thiepval. It has usually the shape of an egg, which moves on endless chains. In the front the chains jut a little beyond the body to enable the machine to cross trenches and shell holes. The machine is guided by a kind of tail, the wheels of which dig into the sides of the trench and shove it forward with a jerky motion.

The armored car with its crew of one officer and seven men, carries two six-pounder guns in turrets stuck on the sides like swallows' nests. There are also four to eight machine guns at loopholes which can be closed. It is lit inside by electricity. On good ground it has a maximum speed of five to seven miles, in soft ground torn up by shells at most one to two miles.

FEEDING THE BEES

Syrup made from the best grade of white granulated sugar is a safe substitute for honey in spring and summer and a desirable supplementary food for winter. For autumn feeding use two parts of sugar to one of water, in the interior of Canada, and two and a half parts sugar to one of water at the coast. To get the sugar to dissolve completely, the water must be hot, and if the syrup is made over the fire, the sugar must be added to the water in small quantities at a time and stirred constantly until dissolved, to prevent it from settling to the bottom of the vessel and burning. Burned sugar is very unwholesome for bees and would cause their death during winter. To prevent the syrup from granulating, a teaspoonful of tartaric acid may be added to every twenty pounds of sugar.

TWO "BRAINS" FOR ALL

The Right or Left Hand Decides Choice of Brain

Nature, according to a new theory, has given us two brains just as she has given us a pair of eyes, hands, and ears, which help each other to do the work of the body. Everyone has two brains, but he only uses one for intellectual purposes. If a man is right-handed he uses the left brain. The left-handed one uses the right brain. Which brain we are going to use is therefore decided by which hand we make use of first when we are babies. The brain which is not being used for the intellect helps the other to minister to the body. It also serves as an emergency brain in case of disease or accident. Sometimes memory or speech is destroyed by accident, and if the second brain is trained it may do the work of the other which has been destroyed. It is easier to train the brain in this way if the patient is under thirty years of age.

Evacuated Belgian Towns.

The Germans have recently evacuated several villages on the frontier between Belgium and Holland. According to Dutch papers the evacuation of Putte (North Brabant) caused great excitement and enthusiasm among the Belgians. About half past twelve o'clock, when the customary relief of the German guard in Belgian Putte was expected to take place, a warrant officer arrived with the information that if the relief did not arrive within two hours the existing guard was to be abolished. The warrant officer, according to the report of an escaped Belgian, went later to the guard house, and after removing the papers locked it up and departed with his men. Shortly afterwards a German officer arrived and removed the telephone communicating between the guard house and the blockhouse. The German flag, which was waving on the frontier, was then hauled down, its disappearance being greeted with loud applause from the Belgians on the Dutch side of the frontier. The German non-commissioned officer who hauled down the flag smiled at the demonstration, but the German soldiers who were with him were highly indignant. A couple of hours later the German sentry boxes were removed in a wagon, and Belgian Putte has since then been free of armed Germans, except that from time to time a small patrol from Stabroeck comes along patrolling the frontier. It is thought that the reason for this measure is partly to be found in the frequent recent desertions across the frontier. In the meantime at other Belgian frontier places the same measures have been gradually taken, Beiduinenhof, Huibergen, Esschen, and Piatuis being among the places evacuated.

A Voracious Snail.

A species of Mexican snail, of the family of Glandinidae, has acquired such a reputation for cannibalism that it is actually being considered as an importation to France to abate the plague of common snails with which the French farmer is afflicted. An adult Glandina is said to have eaten ten snails in twenty-four hours.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N.B.— Unauthorised publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

The sum of $25 was sent anonymously to Lieut.-Col. H. N. Wilson, of Kingston, the sender saying it had been stolen from the Militia Department.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

Lornie Rose, formerly of the junior Petes, is playing left wing for Sarnia intermediates. In the first home game he scored one goal and gave the pass to Hillman that netted another counter.

Harold Parker, who had been visiting in Pittsburg, arrived home a few hours before game time and, despite his lack of practice, jumped into the game. He took matters quite easily after the first time, although several times he uncorked some of his rushes that have won many a game for Hamilton clubs. After he found that the opposition was weak he contented himself with occasional flashes of form, allowing the wings to look after the scoring.—Hamilton Herald.

FLANNAGAN ON TO-NIGHT

For the Game With Intermediates at Cobourg.

Tonight the fans will have another opportunity of seeing the 247th Batt. team in action when they meet Cobourg intermediates at Brock Street rink. The game will be called at 8.25. Armstrong has a bad knee and will be unable to work out, but Flannagan will get a chance to perform in a full game.

The Soldiers' line-up will be:—

Goal—LeGros.
Defence—Halpin and Thornton
Rover—Flannagan
Centre—Quinn
Wings—Evans and Adams

SOME HEART BEATS

To live long and well, save your heart by conserving your heart beats. This may be done by avoiding extreme emotion and violent physical exertion and by sleeping long hours. The human heart beats from seventy to 150 times a minute, and each beat means work equivalent to raising a 2-pound weight 1 foot. If this does not seem like work, try to lift a 2-pound weight seventy to 150 times a minute.

Anything that quickens the heart's action increases its labor. Accurate tests have shown that a man riding a bicycle up a 10 per cent. grade for 2,904 feet in four minutes adds an amount of labor to his heart that would lift a ton and an eighth 1 foot.

Violent physical exertion of any kind quickens the heart beats. Strong emotion has the same effect. Intense anger may increase the heart's labor from 150 pounds per minute to 225 pounds. Under such a strain the heart of an animal has been known to literally break, causing almost instant death. According to a heart specialist, he who retires to bed at ten instead of twelve saves the heart 876,000 foot-pounds a year. Lying down one half-hour daily lessens its labors in the same period by 219,000 foot-pounds.

FIRST FLAG OF WORLD

Origin of the National Banners—Japan Heads List

The most ancient national flag in the world is either the dragon banner of China or the chrysanthemum flag of Japan. The former has been used from a very early period, and the latter is as old as the present dynasty in Japan, which is the oldest in the world. Amongst European national flags that of Denmark—a white St. George's cross on a red ground—is the most ancient, having been in use since 1219. No other flag has existed without change for anything like the same period as a national emblem, although there are Royal standards that are older. The Spanish national flag dates only from 1785, and the British flag, the Union Jack, was first bown in its present form after the union with Ireland in 1801. The Stars and Stripes, the national emblem of the United States, is older than the British, for it was first planned and ordered by Washington of Betsy Ross an upholsterer of Philadelphia, and formally adopted on June 14, 1777.

MANITOBA'S WEALTH

Great Natural Mineral Resources in Western Province

Sir William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, said: "The untapped natural resources of Manitoba will stagger the world." When he made this statement he must have had in his mind the very rich mineral resources of the province. Some years ago rumors began to drift into Winnipeg of gold finds being made in Northern Manitoba. Then startling reports of the richness of the finds round Rice Lake district came to hand, and the publicity given to the camp caused a great deal of interest.

As an example of what can be done in the mining industry, the Porcupine district of Ontario might be cited. This camp was unknown before 1903, and in seven years it put out nearly $19,000,000.

Our Merchantile Marine Service

FIGURES PROVE BRITAIN IS ABLE TO COPE WITH SUBMARINE PERIL.

The scarcity of British shipping is not due to decrease in tonnage so much as to the increased work to be done by the British mercantile marine as a result of the war. To feed and supply millions of men afloat and ashore in foreign lands, who are using up munitions of war as well as food on a prodigious scale, is a task that only Britain could face. Her gross loss of shipping since war broke out, according to Engineering, has been almost two million tons, with a carrying capacity of about three million tons dead weight. A considerable part of this loss has consisted of trawlers and small coasting vessels. Mr. Macnamara's statement that the net loss of vessels over 1,000 tons register suitable for foreign trading has been only 2½ per cent. indicates that all of the vessels in course of construction when war broke out to the order of foreign shipowners have been held by Britain for her own use.

Of steamships engaged or partly engaged in the foreign trade Britain had 4,461 in 1914, their tonnage being 11,640,000 tons. In her yards there were in 1914 858 steamships in course of construction, of 1,006,000 tons register. Most of them would be available for use by the spring of 1915. Since that time the larger yards have been very busy with naval work, and only the smaller have been adding to the mercantile tonnage. The total outturn of tonnage for the merchant marine, however, probably averages not less than 50,000 tons a month, and shipbuilding is now to be speeded up. The British navy is almost twice as strong as it was when war broke out, and the great Clyde and Tyne yards that have been building Britain's new super-Dreadnoughts will be able soon to turn their attention to making good the shortage in steamships suitable for the foreign trade and for transport purposes. On a pinch British yards can build over a million and a half tons of shipping a year, and that is more than German submarines can destroy day in and day out. The shipping situation is serious enough to warrant the adoption by the British Government of vigorous measures to lessen the volume of imports—especially of luxuries. It is not serious enough to give ground for the pessimistic suggestion that the war may be lost by the Allies, or at least may result in a draw, because of the failure of the British mercantile marine to do the work in transportation necessary to the maintenance of the Allied armies in the field and the civilian population of Britain.

Tokio-Yokohama Canal.

A long-needed improvement in Japanese coast navigation shortly to be undertaken is the Keibin canal between Yokohama and Tokio. It was in 1910 that Mr. Okada and twenty-nine promoters, all leading business men in Tokio and Yokohama, presented an application to Baron Sufu, then the governor of Kanagawa prefecture, for permission to build the canal, and a charter was granted the following year. The main reason for the canal is that the coast of Haneda is considered one of the most dangerous between the two cities and that the construction will guarantee the safety of water transportation between Yokohama and Tokio. According to their plan, the canal will cost $2,500,000, but would easily earn a dividend of ten per cent. The plan had lain dormant for nearly five years owing to the tightness of money, but when Mr. Osano, of the shipping line Toyo Kisen Kaisha, came forward with a canal plan somewhat similar, the Okada plan at once took active shape.—East and West News.

CANADA'S FISHERIES

PROF. PRINCE GIVES MANY FACTS IN BRIEF SPACE.

Prof. Prince, Director of Fisheries for the Dominion Government, addressed the Empire Club at Toronto on "The Waste and Conservation of Canadian Fisheries." He referred to the magnificent lakes and rivers in Canada—the colossal St. Lawrence, giant McKenzie (2,500 miles long), the Saskatchewan, including the Bow (1,200 miles), the Nelson (1,600 miles), the Peace and Churchill (each 1,000 miles), the Frazer (695 miles), the Ottawa, 685 miles), and 50 other noble rivers—the Restigouche, the St. John, the Miramichi, Saguenay, the Natashqwan, for scenery and salmon angling without rivals unless they be the lovely historic rivers of bonnie Scotland. Nearly 200,000 square miles of Canada is covered by fresh water. The annual value of Canada's fisheries is officially placed at $35,000,000, but the actual value much exceeds this, because enormous quantities of fish caught and used by Indians, Eskimos, mining and hunting camps, trappers, prospectors, lonely settlers, remote trading posts, etc., are not officially accounted for. Over 100,000 persons are engaged in fishing, curing, and handling fish; nearly 2,000 larger fishing vessels and 38,536 smaller craft, 11,097 being gasoline motor boats.

A bird's eye view of Canada's fisheries may be afforded by dividing the country into seven fishery divisions:

(1) Atlantic deep-sea fisheries, embracing the famous Cod banks, from which are taken cod, mackerel, haddock, halibut, herring, hake, seals, and whales of annual value of $12,000,000.

(2) The estuaries and inland waters of the Maritime Provinces and Quebec, producing lobsters, clams, oysters, salmon, shad, gaspereaux, striped bass, smelts, fresh water salmon, trout, lake trout, pickerel, etc., annual value $4,000,000.

(3) The Great Lakes and tributary waters, producing whitefish, pike, perch, black bass, maskinonge, catfish, etc., $3,000,000 annually.

(4) North-west waters, from Lake of the Woods to Lesser Slave Lake, producing whitefish, sturgeon, tullibee, pike, gold eye (an excellent fresh water herring), and caviare, value $1,000,000.

(5) Rocky Mountain Plateau, embracing little developed fisheries, including salmon, whitefish, trout, grayling, etc.

(6) Pacific Coast Fisheries, including the great salmon canning and curing industries, the immense halibut fisheries, black cod, etc., value $14,000,000.

(7) The Hudson Bay and Peri-Arctic division, embracing whale, walrus, sea-trout, herring, sturgeon, cod, salmon, etc.—the richest whale and walrus grounds in the world

Canada's fisheries have three features in which no other fisheries can equal them: (1) the purity and coolness of our waters, all being north of the 45th parallel, in which the best food and game fishes, the very aristocracy of the fish world, are native. (2) The cold winter conditions provide nature's own refrigeration, and facilitate transportation — (3) fish are everywhere; fishing can be carried on by those with the least capital, merely a boat, a net and baited hooks. The silvery legions of the sea and finny armies in lakes and rivers are amongst the most available, reliable, and lasting of our natural resources, unaffected by war.

C.P.R. CONSTRUCTION WORK in 1916

Completion of the Longest Tunnel in America

THE year 1916 has been an interesting one in the history of the Canadian Pacific Railway. It has been a year of progress, even though the Dominion is struggling in a great war. As compared with the previous year there has been a tremendous revival of trade. Several important works for which appropriations were made before the war, have been completed, the most important being the Connaught Tunnel through Mount MacDonald, in the Selkirk Mountains. The accomplishment of this task is a triumph of engineering and labor seldom equalled in the world's history. The tunnel is the longest double track tunnel in the Western hemisphere. The length is about 5 miles, the time in which the work was performed, in two and a half years, constituting a world's record. The number of men employed was about 600. The tunnel will mean the elimination of several miles of snow-sheds, will considerably reduce the distance connecting railway points, and affect a big grade reduction. The cost of the tunnel was $6,500,000. The amount of material taken from the bore is approximately 750,000 cubic yards, and weighs considerably over 1,500,000 tons. Much of the centre portion of the bore was through solid rock. The work has been carried out under the supervision of Mr. J. G. Sullivan, chief engineer of the Western Lines of the C. P. R.

Previous to this the longest railway tunnel on the American continent was the Hoosac Tunnel, 4¾ miles long, on the New York Central Railway line. The work of the Connaught Tunnel began in 1914, and has progressed steadily since that time. The contractors who had the work in hand applied an entirely new method in tunnel piercing, known as the "Pioneer Bore." It consists of an entirely separate tunnel driven in a line fifty feet parallel with the course of the main passage through the mountain.

The tunnel, which is 29 feet wide and 23 feet high, follows a straight line under Mount MacDonald, emerging in the Beaver Valley at a point about 1,000 feet below the present line. The eastern entrance is directly below Hermit, a station just east of Rogers Pass. The highest point reached in the tunnel is 3,795 feet above the sea level and 4,065 feet below the summit of MacDonald Peak. The passage through the mountains will have a grade of 1 per cent. up to the interior summit.

Previous to the war the C. P. R. annually spent from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 on the development of the West, and the excavation of the Connaught Tunnel during the period of hostilities shows that Canada is strong to advance at home as she is undoubtedly strong to fight abroad.

On July 17th, 1916, his Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, paid a visit to the tunnel and complimented the Canadian Pacific on the progress that the company was making. Then he baptized the new work "The Selkirk Tunnel." Some weeks later at the request of Lord Shaughnessy, His Royal Highness consented to have the tunned called after himself. Henceforth it is to be called "The Connaught Tunnel."

Improvements have been made to several stations along the Canadian Pacific, but the two notables are the new stations erected at Quebec and North Toronto. The latter on upper Yonge Street, was formally opened on June 14, when Mayor Church started the first train running between the new terminal and Montreal, and declared the station to be opened for traffic. Mayor Church congratulated the Canadian Pacific on its foresight and enterprise, dealt with the good relations that existed between Toronto and the company, and referred to the offer of the old station to the city, to be used as a market place. Amongst the speakers was Sir James Carroll, New Zealand, who, in expressing his felicitations, described the C. P. R. as a powerful factor in the Empire.

The new station at Quebec, which was opened on August 10th, is a triumph of modern railway station construction. The building has a central block and two wings, is akin to old French chateau style of architecture, and is admirably adapted to the quaintness of the old French-Canadian city. On the outside of the station building there is a pretty ground which in the summer time, when its shrubs and flowers are abloom, will be a beautiful set-off to the stately edifice. At the banquet, held on the occasion of the opening, Mr. A. D MacTier, General Manager of the Eastern Lines, presented a silver key, bearing the coat of arms of the city of Quebec to Mayor Lavigueur. It is interesting to note that the large window over the main entrance, which helps to light the ticket lobby, contains the arms of the seven great men of Canadian history, viz.:—Montmagny, the first Governor of Canada, 1636-1647; De Tracy, Viceroy of Canada, 1665; Beauharnois, Governor of Canada, 1726-1747; Montcalm and Wolfe, the famous French and English generals, whose names are familiar to all; Frontenac, Governor of Canada, 1672, and Talon, the first Intendant of New France, 1665-1672.

Recently the C. P. R. acquired the Lake Erie and Northern Railway, and by doing so brought their lines into touch with a flourishing and interesting territory in Western Ontario, running from Galt to Port Dover. The new line has connection with the Canadian Pacific main line at Galt and runs in conjunction with the G. P. & H. Railway, which gives access to Kitchener and intermediate points, as well as direct connection with Port Dover, Brantford and intermediate points. The district in which the L. E. & N. runs will benefit much by the new life which the C. P. R. is putting into the train service there. The transportation of the farming produce, so abundant in this part, will be facilitated, and tourists who wish to travel in the beautiful locality will find a convenient and satisfactory service.

During the year a new railway station was built at Brantford, as a result of an agreement between the C. P. R. and the Hamilton Railway. The new station is to be used by both. The building will be a pretty set off to the town, and a convenience to the travelling public, as well as for the business people in the neighborhood.

The Canadian Pacific Ocean Services had a busy and most successful year. On the Pacific the Empress of Russia and the Empress of Asia, two of the biggest C. P. R. vessels, which were released by the Admiralty, have returned to their usual routes between Vancouver and Hongkong.

The Canadian Pacific is spending $1,500,000 on the development of the port of Vancouver. Greater trade with Russia was one of the big ideas expounded in shipping circles during the later parts of the year. It was with a view towards developing trade with Russia that the C. P. R appointed Mr. Owen as their general agent at Vladivostock, where he will look after the handling of business.

During the summer improvement work has been carried out at the C. P. R. terminal at St. John, N.B., making it possible to handle freight in a more expeditious manner than in the past. The large piers in the course of erection last year have been completed, and many new tracks have been laid down, so that there is accommodation now at Sand Point for about 1,500 cars. Several new shipping berths which had been under construction during the year are now in use and at least 25 more ocean steamships can be handled in excess of the number that was handled at the port last winter.

Never a year passes without some alterations being made to the various hotels constituting the long chain which stretches from coast to coast owned and operated by the Canadian Pacific. The comfort and convenience of its patrons are ever in the minds of the management, and it is these factors which dominate all improvements.

At the Lake Louise a new kitchen has been completed which is one of the finest on the continent.

It is something like thirty years since the Canadian Pacific Ry. built its first hotel in Vancouver. Since that time various extensions and alterations have been made costing tremendous sums of money, and now the Hotel Vancouver stands one of the most magnificent hotels on the American Continent, and is complete with the exception of the new dining room, construction of which has to be postponed for the present.

The Algonquin Hotel, a very popular hostelry on the Atlantic coast, has been slightly altered, the office has been moved to the space formerly used as a drawing room, and the old office now forms an extension of the lounge, so that this splendid large room with its two fireplaces is now devoted exclusively to the comfort of the guests without interruption from the office routine. In 1917 there will be new quarters erected for the staff.

One of the most famous hotels in the world is the Banff Hotel, with its most picturesque surroundings in the heart of the Canadian Pacific Rocky Mountains—the delight of the tourist. Here the C. P. R. has built a new boiler house, and a "Helps' Dormitory." This was quite a large work, and a valuable acquisition to the stately hostelry.

The decision of Lord Shaughnessy to provide, through the department of Natural Resources of the C. P. R., farm homes for many of the returned soldiers, is a further proof of his desire that those who take part in the war will have recognition of their services. The extent and magnitude of the work of preparing 1,000 farms will be realized when it is noted that it involves: Building 1,000 houses, building 1,000 barns, constructing 1,300 miles of fence, digging 1,000 wells, breaking and cultivating 30,000 acres. The buildings will require about 20,000,000 feet of lumber to erect. The preparation of the farms will entail an expenditure of about $3,500,000.

Early in the year Lord Shaughnessy decided that Dominion-wide organization should be formed for scientific research in connection with Canada's vast metal, hydro-electric and chemical resources, which would ultimately result in the practical application to industry of many minerals heretofore neglected or exported to other countries. During the year the C. P. R. proceeded to mobilize the best brains in the country, and to utilize them in the manner which the President, and, indeed, the country at large, deems desirable. Arthur D. Little, Ltd., the Canadian branch of the well known Boston organization of analytical chemists, have been commissioned to put the idea into practical effect.

The C. P. R. has given more men to the army since the beginning of the war than any other concern in Canada, and large numbers of employees continue to join. The total number of the C. P. R. men enlisted is something like 7,000 and the number of killed who have appeared on the honor roll is 170, the number of wounded 403. Early in the year Colonel F. S. Meighen, a director of the C. P. R., was made a Brigadier-General, and he is now doing invaluable work overseas. Many officials occupy important commands at the front.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Government has given authority to permit the use of domestic or imported spirits for the manufacture in bond of a chemical product known as "neo-diarsenol."

Sixteen hundrded packed the Academy of Music at Halifax, where Premier Murray, Hon. Mr. Hazen and R. P. Bennett, M.P., addressed a National Service meeting.

Eastern Ontario Dairymen adopted a resolution emphatically protesting against any weakening of the prohibition of importation and manufacture of oleomargarine.

The National Service meeting at the Imperial Theatre, St. John, N.B., was beyond question one of the biggest and most enthusiastic meetings held there since the beginning of the war.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Routley accompanied their daughter, Miss Frances Routley, as far as Toronto on her way to California, today.

Mr. Herbert Webb, son of Rev. J. R. Webb, returned to McMaster University today.

Mr. K. F. Routley left this afternoon for Toronto.

Miss Annetta Peever returned to Victoria University, Toronto, today.

Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, librarian at the Public Library, will leave shortly for a trip of inspection of other libraries in the province. He will visit Toronto, Guelph, Galt, Kitchener and other places before his return and will report the result of his visits to the Board.

Mr. H. C. Stabler has returned from Lassioade, where he attended the funeral of his brother, who died suddenly.

There is no change in the condition of Dr. R. F. Morrow, who is seriously ill at Nicholl's Hospital.

Major Harry Frost is now stationed at Crowborough, Sussex, Eng. Mrs. Frost is with him.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer, chairman of the Patriotic League, entertained Dr. Edwards and Col. Ponton at his home on Weller St. A number of invited guests met the distinguished visitors.

Miss Edith McQuaig of Picton is the guest of Mrs. C. H. Ackerman, Park street.

Nursing Sister Mrs. (Dr.) T. H. Bell reached the city on Saturday and was the guest of the Misses Denne, Water Street North, over Sunday. Mrs. Bell went to Kingston today for a short visit. Mrs. Bell has spent considerable time nursing, in several theatres of war.

The afternoon tea held by the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., at the Empress Hotel on Saturday afternoon was most successful. The members of the chapter who assisted were the Misses Hill, Miss Hatton, Miss Margaret Eastwood, Miss Robena Cummings, Miss Maizie Armstrong and Miss Jessie Spence, who were attired in black and white. Among the callers were Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. A. H. Stratton, Mrs. T. F. Matthews, Col. and Mrs. Ackerman, Miss McQuaig, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. OBITUARY

E. W. ELCOMBE

E. W. Elcombe, who came to Peterborough from Maidstone, Kent, Eng., 34 years ago, and lived at 227 McDonnel Street, died at Nicholls Hospital this morning, aged 50 years. Deceased was well and favorably known, having held positions in several fruit and grocery stores of the city. For twelve years he was in business at Campbellford.

Always an enthusiast in the militia, he had been a member of the 57th Regiment since coming to Peterborough and at the time of his death held the ranks of staff sergeant. He was a member of Lansdowne Lodge, S.O.E., and a past president. He also had served as secretary and as district deputy of the lodge.

Deceased was married to Josephine Greer, eldest daughter of the late W. G. Greer, of Dundalk, formerly of Otonabee. He leaves three sons and five daughters, viz: (Rev.) Sergt. Clarence, 182th Batt.; Corp. Harold V., 4th Reserve Brigade; and Frederick at home; Lena, Georgia, Lulu, Audrey and Olive at home.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 to Little Lake Cemetery, under the auspices of the Sons of England. Rev. R. G. Peever and Rev. Benj. Greatrix will officiate at the house and at the grave.

ALICE E. CROLY

Alice E. Croley, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Croly, of New York, and formerly of Peterborough, died in New York on Saturday. The remains were brought to this city and the funeral took place from the Murray Street Baptist Church to the Little Lake Cemetery this afternoon.

MRS. S. R. PERCY

At the residence of her daughter, Mrs. I. Sanderson, 900 Bloor St. W., Toronto, Mary J. Percy, wife of Stephen R. Percy, 336 Aylmer Street, Peterborough, died suddenly on Friday, Jan. 5, in her 70th year.

MRS. EDWARD TROMBLEY.

Mrs. Edward Trombley passed away at the House of Providence at 10:15 this morning in her 88th year. She is survived by two brothers, John, of the city, and Napoleon, of Hamilton, and one sister, Mrs. F. Growlow, of Hamilton.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and cemetery.

MRS. R. BYERS DEAD.

Mrs. Robert Byers, a pioneer resident of Cavan township, died on Sunday morning. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon.

THOMAS LAPLANTE.

Thomas LaPlante, for many years bailiff of the Division Court here, died this afternoon at his residence, 230 Rubidge street.

The funeral will be held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

A MEMORIAL WINDOW FOR ALL SAINTS'

WILL BE DEDICATED NEXT SUNDAY, CHURCH'S ANNIVERSARY.

At All Saint's Church next Sunday a memorial window in memory of the late Benjamin Cooney, for many years a member of the church, will be dedicated.

The window, provided for by the will of the late Mr. Cooney, will be placed in the chancel this week.

The anniversary of the completion of the church will be observed next Sunday. Rev. Griffith Thomas of Wycliffe College, Toronto, will preach at both services.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Norwegian steamship Lupar, the British schooner Brenda and the Russian schooner Schemel are reported sunk.

Fire caused $43,000 damage at the G.T.R. freight office and sheds in Hamilton.

COUNCIL PUT IN WORKING

nection at Port Hope if found advisable.

Senatorship

I think this Council, with the citizens, should do everything in their power to induce the Government to honor Peterborough and district by appointing one or two representatives to the Senate.

Trades and Labor

My attention has been frequently called by ratepayers, and especially by the Trades and Labor Council, to the present ward system of holding our municipal elections. I have thought it worth while to direct your attention to this matter so that if you think it desirable to suggest any change it would have your careful consideration.

Mayor Congratulated

Ald. Stratton, in moving that the items in the address be referred to the committees interested, congratulated the Mayor on his re-election to the chief magistrate's chair. The people appreciated his services and the interest that the mayor had taken in everything that was of interest to the people. He also congratulated His Worship on the concise manner in which his address had dealt with the different departments. If the members of the committees were ready and willing to take an active part in the work, a successful and helpful year could be looked forward to. Ald. Stratton thanked the Mayor for his kindly remarks regarding his chairmanship of the 1916 Finance Committee and it would be necessary to keep a careful hold on the expenditures for the year in order to keep the rate as low as consistent with good business.

Police Department

There was one matter that should be looked into at once and that was the police department. The Police Commissioners should be interviewed at an early date and asked to hold the membership of the force down and not employ a single man more than was required. It might be possible to take two or three of them over to the fire department.

The fire department, said Ald. Stratton, should not be run short-handed. It should be manned to the fullest extent and not run in a manner that would be a detriment to the best interests of the city.

Ald. Dobbin seconded the motion, which carried.

Lights for Rinks

Ald. Dobbin fathered a resolution asking the Peterborough Utilities Commission to place the necessary lights at the municipal skating rinks.

More Sand

Ald. Langford thought that three well-paid officials of the city should be able to see that the streets of the city were properly sanded. Yesterday they were a disgrace. The aldermen should not have to nag at them all the time.

Mayor Duffus felt sure that the City Engineer would look after it if notified.

Ald. McIntyre confessed that the streets of the city were bad yesterday. He had left orders that plenty of sand be used.

Ald Duncan stated that the police complained that the merchants swept the sand off as soon as it was put on.

Ald. Weir and Smith advocated getting an opinion from Montreal and Ottawa regarding a machine that would roughen the ice, and this was decided on.

Mayor Duffus was voted the usual grant of $500, payable quarterly, and was also authorized to send deputations to other places when necessary and the expenses will be paid on his certificate.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF TRINITY CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Scott of Belleville the Special Preacher.

GREECE GETS 48 HOURS TO COMPLY WITH ENTENTE DEMANDS

Spanish Cabinet Resigns --- German Socialists Demand Peace at Once

PRINCIPAL OBJECT OF CONFERENCE REALIZED

Allies Decided to Accentuate Still Further the Co-ordination of Their Efforts.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 9.— Premier Briand on his return from Rome said: All the chiefs of the Allies' Governments decided to maintain the strictest reserve as to the character and scope of the decisions reached at the conference. I may say, however, that during the discussions we found an absolute agreement existed among the Allies. We decided to accentuate still further the co-ordination of our efforts. Such was the principle object of the conference, and it has been realized."

GREECE LINED UP WITH WILSON

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ATHENS, January 9.—The official reply of the Greek government to President Wilson's peace note was today handed to the American minister at Athens. The reply associates Greece heartily with the President's effort in behalf of peace.

CASUALTIES AMONG BRITISH OFFICERS 53,122 FOR THE WAR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 9.—Casualty lists show that in October the British lost 4,378 officers, of whom 1,459 were killed, 2,736 wounded, and 183 missing. In November the total was 2,305, of whom 806 were killed, 1,366 wounded and 133 missing.

The total losses among officers since the beginning of the war is 53,122, of whom 15,696 were killed or died of wounds, 33,970 were wounded and 34,567 are missing.

LIFE CRUSHED OUT BY WAGON AT NEIGHBOR'S

LATE E. F. CARVER WAS HELPING TO LOAD HAY.

RELATIVES HERE.

Particulars of the tragic death of E. F. Carver at Caledonia have been received. He was pinned to a doorpost when the wagon he was helping to load with hay swerved at the doorway of the barn. Deceased was helping John MacLean, a neighbor, to load hay and when the wagon swerved he was crushed to death.

The late Mr. Carver had lived in Caledonia for sixteen years. He is survived by his father and mother, his wife and two children, Dorothy and Welma. He also leaves one brother, Bruce Carver, at home, and two sisters, Mrs. Frank Ward, Waterford, and Mrs. Martin Whaley, at home. He was 37 years old, and a member of Unity Church, Caledonia. Peterborough was the town of his birth. The deceased was well known and highly thought of in the district.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon to Unity Church and Unity Cemetery.

S. D. Carver, of North Monag-Leslie and Hary Carver of this city an uncle of the deceased, and Messrs. han, and Osway Carver of this city, were in attendance at the funeral.

TWO MORE NORWEGIAN VESSELS DESTROYED.

One Known Sunk; the Other Believed Lost.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 8. — Lloyd's announce the sinking of the Norwegian steamer Markland and it is believed the Norwegian steamer Borgholm has also been sunk.

It is also announced that the French steamer Alphonse Conseil, the British steamer Lesbian and the Japanese steamer Chinto Maru have been sunk.

GERMANY IS IN THE THROES OF FOOD RIOTS

DISEASE DUE TO UNDERFEEDING IS REPORTED.

MANY INFANTS DIE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 9. — News items from all parts of Germany report disturbances and food riots. An outbreak of disease is reported, due to underfeeding, and a big increase in infantile mortality, due to the milk shortage.

Provision dealers require supplies rather than to advertise their goods for sale.

IS NOW SECOND IN COMMAND OF THE 247th BATT.

MAJOR O'FLYNN OFFICIALLY PROMOTED.

CLARINA RECRUIT.

Major O'Flynn has received his official promotion as second in commandof the 247th Batt.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman went to Millbrook at noon today to look over the prospects for recruits in the village. There are many men there on the verge of getting into khaki and a talk from the O.C. will no doubt act as a balance weight on the right side.

Pte. James Watson Salte..., of Clarina, passed the medical board last night and has been attested to the 247th.

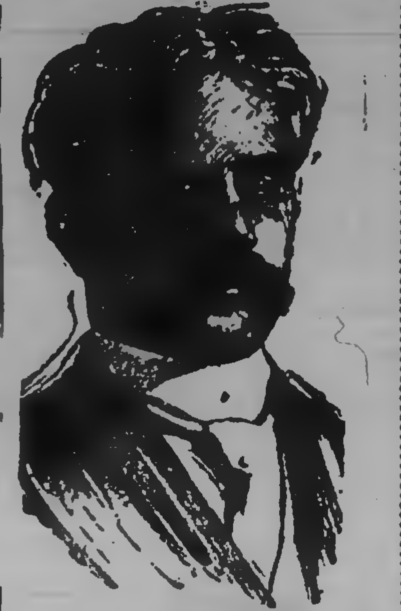
Today's orders have the following: Qualifications—Pte. R. Ray, A Co., Lance-Corp. J. Willis have been awarded qualification certificates, as per district orders No. 20, Jan. 6, for Colt and Lewis guns.

Rev. Dr. Daniel Strachen has resigned from the pastorate of Rosedale Presbyterian Church, Toronto.

SIR ROBERT'S APPEAL

"The war is not yet won. It can be won only by throwing into the balance the full power of our Empire. Defeat means such disaster as no one of us can fully realize. Upon each of us there rests an individual responsibility to do his part. The nation's power is but the sum of individual service, effort and devotion. From the ruined cities and desolated provinces of France and of Belgium, from hundreds of thousands of the civil population of those countries led into practical slavery by the enemy, from the men in the trenches and those now awaiting their call to the front, and from the graves of those who have made the supreme sacrifice, there comes an appeal most eloquent, moving and compelling, that this service, effort and devotion shall be unsparingly given, that the call of right shall be made triumphant, and that all the sacrifice of the past two years shall not be in vain.

(Signed) R. L. BORDEN.



MAKING UP FOR TWO BROTHERS

PTE. L. H. ELLIOTT IN THE FRONT LINE USING BULLETS ON GERMANS.

Mr. Robert Elliott, 195 Reid St., has received a card from his son, Pte. L. H. Elliott, of the 21st Batt., now in France. Pte. Elliott states that he is in good health and working nineteen hours out of the twenty-four and at the time of writing he was suffering from a cold. "I am in the front line getting a few Fritzies, making up for my poor brothers, and I can't get too many," writes Pte. Elliott.

The brothers referred to are the late Russell Elliott, who was shot by a sentry at Kingston, and Pte. W. W. Elliott, who died from wounds in France. Another brother, Gordon Elliott, is in England working as a harnessmaker. He was turned down in England after enlisting in Canada.

QUAKER OATS MILL HANDS FOR SUDBURY

TWO EMPLOYES INJURED IN FIRE LEAVE HOSPITAL.

The Quaker Oats Co. will send to Sudbury tomorrow ten of their mill hands to work in the mill there that the company have leased. The mill is all ready for operation and if the grain is on hand when the men arrive there, operations to turn out the famous products of the company will begin at once.

The necessary office staff and foremen are already on the scene and have everything in readiness for the arrival of the mill men.

The company have not yet decided as to whether they will fit up the old McAllister Mill, but have had it inspected and reported on as to its suitability for the work that is most urgent.

Injured Leave Hospital

Michael Caccavelli of Elm St., one of the employees who was severely burned in the fire, has so far recovered that he was down town today and was welcomed by many of his friends.

Mauro Gardini of Parnell St., who has been in St. Joseph's Hospital since the fire, was allowed to go to his home this morning.

Trinity Church Choir

Will meet for rehearsal tonight at 8 o'clock in the church. Every member is requested to be present. Those assisting from other choirs please note.

HEAVY SHOWING OF PRIZE BIRDS AT POULTRY SHOW

Annual Exhibits Are Being Held at Market Hall.

The annual exhibition of poultry and pet stock opened this morning in the market building under the auspices of the Peterborough Poultry Association. Every train that arrived in the city last night and this morning had shipments from the most noted provincial poultry men and it kept the express men busy getting the coops to the market hall.

There are over 1,400 entries this year as compared with 900 last year, and Superintendent George Paxman is having a busy time getting the exhibits properly arranged, tagged and cooped. Some of the exhibits are prize winners at the Guelph show. The local exhibitors feel proud of their birds and their entries are not small ones. H. Lush has 148 birds on show; Archie Brault has 21 White Wyandottes and there are others.

Special Classes

Some of the special classes are worthy of special mention. In the single-combed Black Minorcas, 41 birds are to be judged. In the open class for White Wyandottes an entry list of 64 is to be seen, while in the sales class there is a very large entry list of every variety, so that persons desiring to improve their flocks will have no trouble in selecting new blood of the highest class.

The entry list was larger than it was expected and through the kindness of Mr. McRae of Norwood, the association was loaned the Government coops which were stored at Norwood.

Miss Yates Here

Miss Yates, of the Agricultural Department, is on hand, and will give morning and afternoon demonstrations of killing and plucking. This is always an interesting feature of the show, particularly to the farmers' ladies who raise fowl for table use only.

The judging will be in charge of Mr. Geo. Robertson of Ottawa, who is recognized as one of the best in the Dominion. He had charge of the judging of single-combed White Leghorns at Guelph, where the class entry was 1,600.

The exhibition of bantams, rabbits and pigeons is of especial interest to the children.

The exhibition will continue on Wednesday and Thursday and will be open to the public afternoon and evening.

ULTIMATUM TO THE GREEK GOV'T.

Forty-eight Hours to Meet Demands of Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

He is survied by his widow, one son and one daughter.

RUSSIANS PREPARE GREAT OFFENSIVE

Well Equipped With Munitions and Backed By Large Reserves.

ARTILLERY FIRE VIOLENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Russians are preparing to launch a great new offensive in the Riga sector, according to a Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co.

Russian troops are said to be equipped with great quantities of munitions and backed by large reserves.

Near Milau and south of Riga, artillery fire has now become extremely violent on both sides.

The weather is frosty and clear.

GERMANS FAIL IN RAID

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Janhary 9.—North of the River Ois, after a bombardment last night, the Germans attempted unsuccessfully to raid a French trench north of Ribecourt, the war office announced today.

On the rest of the front calm prevailed during the night.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS MAKE DEMAND ON CHANCELLOR FOR PEACE AT ONCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 9.—German social democrats are circulating petitions to be sent to the German chancellor, demanding that Germany give up all plans of conquest and make peace at once.

ANXIETY IN BRITAIN OVER THE BALKANS

ASSURANCES FROW ITALY OF VIGOROUS PROSECUTION OF THE WAR.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A cable to the Tribune from London says:—

For the first time in the war, real anxiety is being manifested in Britain over the situation in the Balkans. Public opinion is now divided between the Macedonian problem and the new loan, both of which have a bearing on the question of an early settlement of hostilities.

Rumors that King Constantine of Greece is planning an open attack on Gen. Sarrail's forces created alarm in some quarters, though in others confidence was expressed that the Allies could hold the situation well in hand.

It is believed Lloyd George and Brant have received assurances from Italy that she will prosecute the war vigorously until the Central Powers are ready to make concessions satisfactory to all the Allies.

ANOTHER NOMINATION IN ENNISMORE TWP.

Mr. James Sullivan, who was elected to a seat on the council of Ennismore, has not qualified for the office, and another nomination will be held on Jan 15th.

W. H. Bowlby, M.A., K.C., the oldest Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace in Ontario, appointed by the first Government of the Province in 1867, died at his home in Kitchener, of acute inndigestion and pneumonia.

GASTINE CO. IS ON THE LOOKOUT FOR LOCATION

WOULD ERECT A 5-STOREY FIREPROOF PLANT.

EMPLOY 100 HANDS.

Mr. R. G. Johnston of 265 Burnham St., Ashburnham, who is the local representative of the Gastine Co., of New Jersy, is in receipt of a letter from the company in reference to the railway facilities and other information that large manufacturing concerns require when they contemplate building a branch in Canada.

This firm do a large Canadian business but so far have only been shipping in direct from their American plants. What they would require is a lot about 100 feet frontage with a depth about 60 to 65 feet. On this the company would build a five story fire-proof building and would employ over 100 hands, principally women and girls.

The product of the company is used greatly by auto owners, who fined that gastrine saves the gasoline bill. They intend building plants in other countries.

SEEKS DAMAGES FROM CITY FOR LOSS OF HORSE

Alan Preston has issued a writ against the city for damages sustained in the loss of a horse last fall.

The particulars of the case are that a team of horses which Preston was driving ran away from the Peterborough Canal Co. and collided with a gas tank near the Peterborough gas plant, injuring one of the horses so badly that it had to be shot.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry are plaintiff's solicitors.

SIXTEEN YEARS ago Mr. T. F. Matthews was elected chairman of the old Board of Water Commissioners and has been re-elected every successive year up to yesterday, when the same honor was conferred upon him by his colleagues on the Utilities Commission, into which the former board has developed. The public, as well as Mr. Matthews, are to be congratulated upon the selection. The work done by the Commission in the past, the high state of efficiency that has been attained by careful business management, is the best possible testimony to the administration. The Commission start the New Year with new opportunities before them, and yet greater things are expected of them. In these expectations the ratepayers will not be disappointed. Harmony in their conduct of affairs has been one reason why so much has been accomplished in the past.

AID FOR THE PATRIOTIC LEAGUE.

A LOCAL PAPER during the last few days has been flooded with letters signed by such assumed names as "Soldier' Wife," "Another Soldier's Wife," "A Mother of a Soldier," and the like, all complaining of injustice in the matter of distributing the Patriotic Fund. One letter of this nature excites a general spirit of discontent amongt he beneficiaries and encourages others to give voice to their imaginary grievances.

One woman, who has a son at he front, wrote, complaining that she received nothing from the Fund. According to the laws under which the society works, she is not entitled to any help. Her husband is still with her and is working steadily at fair wages. The son who is in the service, her only child, has assigned her $10 a month from his pay. She keeps boarders besides, and is quite comfortably situated.

These facts were ascertaned by some patriotic ladies who volunteered to investigate, fearing that there might be some just cause for complaint. No member of the Patriotic League, not even Mr. F. H. Dobbin himself, could arrive at the truth of such a case so readily and so satisfactorily. It requires one woman to deal with another when household affairs or any description of family matters are the issue.

Then why not appoint officially a number of patriotic lady workers to look up such complaints? They have no real authority now to investigate, but, if they had their work could be carried on to better advantage. No one could then insinuate that they were interfering in a matter that did not concern them. Such an auxiliary to the League would relieve the executive officer of a considerable part of the annoyance to which he is constantly subjected.

The public as a rule realise the sacrifice that has been made by women whose sons, husbands or brothers are at the front. When their sole support is gone, the Fund takes the place as the provider for the family. From a material standpoint only, these families are better off than they were before the war, in a majority of cases. If the head of the family was a laboring man, for example, there was sure to be lost time through lack of work, bad weather or sickness, and a consequent loss of income. There is none of that now. The maintenance allowance from the Government, the assigned pay, and the allowance from the Patriotic Fund, never fail by so much as a single day.

The rules of the Fund are well defined, and, although they have been explained again and again, do not appear to be clearly understood even by those most directly interested. If a woman without children has a husband at the front, she receives no assistance from the Fund if she is able to earn her own living. A newly married woman is not put on the list, either, so long as she is childless.

FOR THE HONOR OF CANADA.

SIR CHARLES DAVIDSON, in his report as commissioner to enquire into alleged dishonest dealings in connection with war contracts, says it gives him great pride as a Canadian to be able to assert that the results of his labors lead him to the belief that the public service is not tainted with grievous malfeasance.

The Liberal press, that made the most of every case of alleged graft, that clamored for the report that they openly insinuated would bring discredit on the Government, have been answered and rebuked. Let them, if they are above partisanship, join in giving the same currency to the finding of Sir Charles Davidson, gratifying as it is to every patriot, that they did to their own slanders on the Administration and its agents.

THE MIGHTY HAVE FALLEN.

"THE HONOR of the United States went down with the Lusitania. The Americans cannot take care of their own women and children; then why should Canada depend upon them for help in the event of a German invasion?" said Dr. Edwards, M.P., at the recruiting meeting Sunday night.

The statement, introduced to support the line of argument which the doctor was pursuing, was perfectly true. It is a matter for regret that such an assertion was justifiable when applied to a neighbor with which Canada has lived in peace for the past century, a nation of one hundred meillion people, commercially great and not without creditable records in its history. But in the past four years, thanks to a weakling for a president, with a subservient majority at his back, the glory of the United States as a nation among the other civilized powers has departed.

It was not always thus with the big republic. The true Americans, those who were animated with the sentiment that made their nation possible, grappled with the people of the South, those scions of an effete European aristocracy, and drove the curse of human slavery from the land. In all the four years' struggle the North fought according to rules of warfare laid down by itself and which have since been incorporated in the international code.

When Cuba and the other colonies cried for aid to be freed from the persecution of Spain, that appeal was answered, and the defeated European power was left rather better off than sh was before the war. The republic was not reimbursed by so much as a dollar in the way of indemnity, and not a foot of conquered territory was added permanently to her possessions.

That was a record of which any nation might well be proud, but it is a record which has been shattered by the events of the past four years. Any yet the real Americans are on the side of the Allies today, those Americans who shed their blood to save their land from the reproach of slavery. The elading citizens in public or private life, the influential journals, are all for the cause of civilization. They said as much by their votes two months ago, when Wilson was saved from defeat by the ballots of the people in the South, in whose blood there is still the taint of treason, and in the West, a section without corporate existence at the time of the Civil War and since settled by immigrants largely from the very countries with which civilisation is now fighting.

The honor of the United States may have sunk, the mighty may have to all appearances fallen, but there is yet hope. A minority with principles founded on truth and justice will yet overcome the majority that survives by force alone.

THE END MAY BE NEAR.

THE END OF THE WAR may be nearer than even the most optimistic hope, and peace, conclusive and honorable, at hand. The most gratifying news contained in the war despatches yesterday was a well-founded rumor to the effect that Austria-Hungary is near collapse and that the quarrel between the new emperor and the Kaiser is too serious to be patched up.

It is said that Austria compelled Germany to offer to open peace negotiations with the Allies. If this is true, it accounts for the blustering tone in which the offer was made and which led to its rejection. The Austrians were evidently sincere in their demands for a cessation of hostilities. If they pull out of the conflict and make a separate peace, as it is rumored they will do, Germany cannot hope to carry on the war alone, but would in a short time be compelled to accept such terms as the Allies dictated.

The Kaiser, in his last message to his soldiers, discloses his real object in offering to discuss peace. He knew his advances would be rejected, and by this move he hoped to convince his army and his people that the Allies alone are responsible for all subsequent bloodshed.

CABINET CHANGES.

THE OFFICE of Postmaster-General has been filled for years by a member of the French-Canadian race and representative from Quebec. It was so in the latter days when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in power, and up to yesterday Premier Borden had appointed two French-Canadians in succession to the position. It was to be expected that the position held by the late Hon. T. Chase Casgrain would be filled by the appointment of a compatriot in order to preserve the balance of cabinet representation. Premier Borden evidently believes in the promotion system in his cabinet appointments. Two of the old members have been shfted into better positions, and Speaker Albert Sevigny has been advanced to the position of Minister of Inland Revenue, a shuffle which will appeal to the public as a businesslike move on the part of the Government.

TALK OF NEW DRIVE.

THE GERMANS threaten the neutral nations as well as the Allies with n weforms of frightfulness unless the terms of peace she is ready to offer are accepted. The Matin of Paris is printing a series of articles written by a neutral who was in Berlin on Christmas Day and who says the Germans are plannng a colossal offensive against France, to begin with the capture of Basle and Hunigen on the German border. Two million men are to be used in this drive.

No one will be surprised if Germany should decide on such a step. The nation that invaded neutral Belgium is capable of following out the same program with Switzerland, but if she does violate the peace of the sturdy little republic, Germany will find that she has another and a powerful adversary with whom to reckon.

THE TRENT CANAL.

THE LETHBRIDGE HERALD quotes the following editorial paragraph from The Review:

> When Capt. Burnham returns from Europe he will find important public work awaiting him. It is proposed to have a deputation, headed by Mayor Duffus, Capt. Burnham, M.P., J. A. Sexsmith, M.P. for East Peterborough, these with any other influential citizens who may care to join, to proceed to Ottawa to induce the Government to open the Trent Canal to Lake Ontario during the coming season.

Upon this The Herald comments:

> This deputation ought to be shown the door. The Trent Valley Canal is a waste of money in peace times, and both parties are responsible for the waste so far, but to continue the ditch during war time would be an outrage.

Our Western contemporary fails to note the fact that the Trent Canal has had in the past a use peculiarly its own. It was for years a rich source of income for the Liberal party and furnished them with the munitions required in many a campaign.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

AS FOR THE SLACKER, his voice is still for peace on any terms.

• • • •

HOW ARE THOSE New Year's resolutions standing the wear and tear?

• • • •

THE MAN who refuses to fill in his National Service card is not a factor in the man-power of Canada, anyway.

• • • •

IT IS EVIDENT that England expects every woman, too, to do her duty, but to confine herself strictly to that.

• • • •

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that Bernard Shaw proposes to write a play with Mrs. Cornwallis-West as the heroine. It is too bad that the British Constitution does not forbid the infliction of cruel and unusual punishments.

THAT DAY IS COMING

In the life of every Canadian woman whose husband is "Somewhere in France" there is yet to be one or two outstanding days:

The day the telegram arrives telling of the breadwinner's death or wounding.

Or, the day the breadwinner comes home, safe and sound, to again take up the duty of winning the family bread.

Against these two days—one of pain, one of joy—it is equally the duty of the wife to save. If the husband is lost, the task of supporting the family falls on the wife; if he is saved, the burden of supporting the family until he is again earning money will fall on the wife's savings.

It is the duty—the proud duty—of the Canadian Patriotic Fund to help the woman make provision for either of these inevitable days. Are you doing your part to make it possible for the Fund to do its duty?

FREAK STYLES ARE PROMISED IN MEN'S GARMENTS NEXT SEASON

This will be a year of sartorial surprises.

Not for the female of the species, who is past surprise but for the male, who is face to face with another great crisis.

Another epoch of "freak" clothing looms ahead.

It all depends, say local retailres of men's clothes, on what the style committee of the National Association of Clothing Designers decides to recommend at the annual meeting on Thursday and Friday of this week.

It has been a busy time for the style committee. Reams of paper have been covered with the designs of clothing that will adorn the backs of the flower of Peterborough manhood next autumn.

French designers, it is said, are too busy making army uniforms to send over an dictorial designs. And not only women, but men, are going to take advantage of the little Mar*tian diversion to effect a few new* styles of their own.

Trench Overcoat

First comes the "trench overcoat." That is a certainy. No one knows just what the trench overcoat looks like, but it is said to be a "swell garment, fitting like a glove, and showing the fine figure to the best effect." It is further declared that the trench overcoat is a cross between numerous other coats that have sprung up and fallen back in the last two seasons.

Who can forget these creations with the big buttons ornamenting the fronts, and large patch pockets on the sides? One student of efficiency has them listed, with the time of their coming into popularity until the time of their expiring. It is interesting. One ca nlook over the list and see how hopelessly old-fashioned his clothes are.

For instance, remember the balmasaans? Then therd were those flaring coat skirts that were all the rage for a while. Later came pinchbeck models, in both coats and suits.

But here's the latest. It's an advance tip, and was wired to a local firm by a buyer who is "watching 'em close." Shoulders on suits and overcoats are not going to be padded next fall! This is almost an assured fact.

A few tailors claim that they heard this news some time ago. For the sake of the tall, raw-boned youth who rarely visits the summer bathing beaches, they may lobby at the convention and get a little padding put in the shoulder. If this fails, in justice to their bony-shouldered customers they will be forced to depart somewhat from the 1917 rules of Father Fashion.

So, gentlemen, who have the facts. The committee on style is now in session. Its recommendations will go to the Canadian clothing manufacturers and the finisher products will come to the retail stores.

Then it's up to us. Let the "freak" clothes arrive. We are at least propared for the shock.

PRESS OPINIONS THE WORLD OVER

The Only Terms of Peace
(Irish Times.)

Mr. Lloyd George will speak for the whole country and his answer will be the answer of his immediate predecessor in office, more than ever after Germany's confession of impending defeat. Our Government will be resolved not to sheathe the sword until the military domination of Prussia has been fully and finally destroyed. These were and are Britain's only terms of peace.

The World is Not Deceived
(Newcastle Daily Chronicle.)

Germany has thrown up the sponge. It is not unexpected to us. We are only surprised that the operation was not performed a little sooner. We are quite aware, of course, that the sponge has been thrown up under circumstances carefully stage-managed in order to represent the surrender as something quite different. What we are asked to believe, and what many Germans may indeed believe, is that the victor, surfeited of victory, of his magnanimity proposes to permit the vanquished to escape from a worse fate—that Germany is anxious to preserve to the world what is left of its civilisation, let those who believe in German magnanimity and in the Hun's respect for civilization be deceived. The civilized world is not.

Adjustment Towards England
(Chicago Tribune.)

England's ownership of many islands in the Caribbean cannot be considered alarming. We have been adjusting ourselves to England and England has been adjusting herself to us for so many years that an open break is almost unthinkable. But England has no ambitions in this continent which we cannot satisfy to our own benefit. Such is not the case with other European nations. Their invasion of the Caribbean would be evidence of ambition to extend their influence into our preserves. The purchase of the Danish West Indies should be completed at once. It will remove a probable source of friction in our international relations.

Outward Sign of the Spirit
(L'Echo de Paris.)

Mr. Lloyd George's position in politics is not that of a politician, but of an apostle. What, in crisis after crisis, has placed him above Parliamentary combinations, and has now brought him to the front rank over the head of paltry cliques, is the old spirit of the Briton. He speaks to the country, and carries it with him, and the strong support of the masses gives him strength to smash lobby intrigues. People say the secret of his success is eloquence, courage, and so on. . . . Quite so; these are the outward forms of action, but these forms would be nothing if they were not the outward sign of the spirit of a proud race, moulded for generations by strict moral discipline. Character makes the man.

Wales Does Not Favor Peace
(Western Mail (Cardiff)

It is an armistice which the Kaiser and his satellites now desire, they ask for time to heal their wounds and restore their fighting energies, and when the recuperative process had been sufficiently advanced the peace of Europe would be broken once more, and with greater wantonness, treachery and ruthlessness than in the shameful days of 1914. There is not the slightest reason for thinking that he Kaiser is more wishful for peace and neighborliness than he was two and a half years ago. His immediate purpose is to rally the disaffected masses of his own countrymen. Disappointment, mortification and semi-starvation have inspired a widespread desire for peace, and peace at any price among the masses of the German people.

THE KITCHENER TROUBLE

The trouble at Kitchener is attracting atention even in the mighty New York, and The Sun of that city has devoted considerable space to the discussion. Saturday it published the following letter from a reader in Buffalo, whose name bespeaks his nationality:—

Editor Sun: Now that the famous controversy regarding Berlin, Canada, and the change of name to Kitchener has reached New York through The Sun, it may be enlightening to the inhabitants thereof that the project of changing the name of the town was originally an Irish idea, and as it took shape first among the French citizens of the town the name was intended to be changed to Napoleon, which was highly appropriate under all circumstances and would have gone through but someone not necessarily from Canada noted an incongruity.

Fate thus willed otherwise; yet the new name is considered of bad omen, so the name of Napoleon may yet be found on the map of Waterloo county when these Berliners follow out certain inclinations which originally obtained when this change of name matter was regarded.

PRESIDENTIAL EXPLANATIONS

(With apologies to Southey.)

A grandsire sat beside his door
When came to him at close of day
His little grandchild, Sammykin,
To show a paper found at play.
"Ah," cried the sire in conemplation,
"It is a famous explanation!

"Long years ago a President
Believed that he could stop a war,
And so he wrote a note, and then
A note to tell what that was for.
And then there followed in rotation
An explanation explanation.

"He wrote and wrote and wrote and wrote;
By every mail he had them sent,
And since he didn't know himself
No others found out what he meant.
But each time some with adulation
Acclaimed the famous explanation.

"I find them often hereabout
And use them to wrap up the cheese."
"And is that al the good they were?"
Cried Sammykin upon his knees.
"Ah," cried the sire in admiration,
"It is a famous explanation."

Some men brag about their wives as if they wanted to sell them.

GARDENING FOR BEAUTY

FLOWERS AND WOMEN AND CHILDREN PROPERLY ASSOCIATED.

Everyone knows the healing qualities of the soil. The sting of the bee and many other insects will be drawn out in less time by a mud plaster than by any of our latest known antiseptics. All the animals instinctively turn to the soil to cure their ills. Hogs bury themselves in it to heal skin trouble and rid themselves of vermin by soil baths. Handling soil is good for any one, and women are taking more and more to the occupations that mean a living from the soil. Cultivating flowers and small fruits are foremost among the things women are undertaking. Several colleges to teach women floriculture have come into existence because of this.

Flowers and children are always associated, and the cultivation of either should be a woman's pride. Beside the health-giving properties of handling the soil is the interest created in planting the seed and watching its unfoldment. It is quieting also to the nerves to attend plants—they are always responding to your care and giving each a return on the labor and time expended that the pleasure is only known by those who love them and work for them. Any woman who is run down, grown morose, and has lost her grip will find a new world open for her by cultivating plants. The daily revelation that is changing from start to ending of each season will keep her from mental depression, and the life with the beautiful will reflect itself from her countenance. It is a beauty tonic—this cultivation of flowers.

Many Kinds of Brushes

There is a brush about ten inches long by one-half an inch wide than which none is better to clean wicker furniture, baseboard moldings, the backs of pictures and other ungettable places. A decanter brush with a curved goose neck shape is indispensable in cleaning milk bottles, baby bottles, cruets and pitchers. A button brush with a stiff, pointed tip is unexcelled for dislodging the dirt from under mattras buttons, chair seats and other indented portions.

The man who dyes his whiskers and the woman who bleaches her hair seldom tell anybody but themselves.

NEED MORE FAT IN DIET

MOST PEOPLE GET TOO LITTLE—SOME OF THE REASONS.

"Jack Sprat could eat no fat," says the nursery rhyme. A great many people have a prejudice against the fat of meats, and an issue of the London Lancet—perhaps the most important medical journal published—shows why they are wrong. Many minor ills of the body would be avoided if only care were taken to include a sufficiency of fat in the diet. Fat, we know, is about the most compact form of fuel which we possess, while it exercises a favorable effect upon the processes of the intestinal tract. In excessively cold countries a rich fatty diet is indespensable for fat is the only fat substance which will rapidly replace the heat lost by the body, and travellers in the Arctic regions have related that they can only be kept warm and comfortable by a generous supply of fatty foods, in comparison with which the effect of extra clothing was inappreciable.

The tendency of to-day in many quarters is to exclude as much as possible the fatty portions of animal foods. Pieces of fat are carefully cut off the slice of ham, mutton, or beef, and only the lean parts are eaten. Indeed, for some unaccountable reasons the eating of fat is regarded by not a few as positively vulgar. Such an attitude, of course, displays an ignorance of physological facts. Cold feet, hands, fingers, ears and chilblains would in many instances be avoided under a generous diet of fatty foods. A digestible fat favors nutrition considerably; it spares much waste of the tissue-forming elements of food.

When lean meat alone is given large quantities are required in order that nutrition and waste may balance one another, but if fat be added the demand for flesh is less. Besides, therefore, giving an advantage in regard to making good the repair of the body, the use of it is economical from the point of view of dollars and cents. The absorption of large quantities of fatless meat again tends to overload the blood with nitrogenous waste products. In anaemic persons the partaking of an easily digested fat is commonly followed by the best results, nutrition is greatly improved, and the condition of the blood is often restored to normal. It is well known, again, that easily absorbable fats, such as butter, cream, cod liver oil, bacon fat and dripping, are especially valuable to sufferers from wasting diseases.

The introduction of the old fashioned and well prepared suet pudding into the diet is in perfect accordance with scientific teaching, and from the dietetic point of view, especially in the feeding of young growing people, does probably a really beneficial service to the country.

SEASON AND FLAVOR

Use of Various Herbs Is a Nice Art to Develop

To know how properly to season and flavor the various dishes cooked is an art, and one that is learned almost wholly from experience, practice, and experimenting. Even in the use of such common things as salt and pepper one must learn from experience the proper amount to use or the food will not be edible. The object of seasoning and flavoring our food is to give it a pleasant taste. We are so constituted that we cannot enjoy anything if it is used in excess. So the wise cook uses only just enough seasoning or flavoring to make one long for more.

Every herb as well as flavoring has a definite place in cookery. This makes it possible to season the various dishes prepared so they will not all taste alike. The home-grown herbs are better than those bought in cans. So if at all possible, grow your own herbs. Sage is commonly used in seasoning dressings and sausage, but if a leaf or two is minced fine and sprinkled over the roast pork it will give a new flavor to it which is a pleasant change. Sage should never be used in dressing that is to go in a baked fish or oyster dressing, as it kills the flavor. A tiny bit of Marjoram and basil or savory, thyme and balm can be added to the dressing for fish instead of sage. Sage is also used with goose and duck, as these are among the heavy meats.

Cottage Pudding

Mix one cup of flour with half a cup of sugar, the same of milk, one egg and a teaspoon of baking powder. Bake in a quick oven. For the foam sauce boil a cup and a half of water with half a cup of sugar, and just before serving, beat in the stiffly beaten white of one egg.

GUNS! GUNS! GUNS!

Fodder For These Monsters Fills Acres of Fields

A correspondent writing from the front says: Never before has there been brought together such a concentration of artillery of all calibres. There are guns everywhere. I am writing for the moment of those behind the lines, which have not yet been brought up, as there is no room for them on an already crowded battlefield. They lie in the fields in droves like cattle; you see them like huge, many-colored snakes on the railway lines, or moving to the front on motor lorries. Some are returning for rest and repair; others are being pushed forward to take their place. Many are yet lying idle, with their huge mouths gaping hungrily toward the Rhine and the Meuse. There are 14-inch, 12-inch, 9-inch, and every conceivable inch down to the still favorite 75's. And the meals for these monsters. The fodder for these monsters fills acres of fields, and comes fro mevery corner of the earth. Yet they cannot be carried too quickly to the front. This monstrous Armageddon consumes millions a week. He cannot be fed too fast. Now as he hungers so is he fed, and hence the wail of the German General Staff from Berlin.

FASHION HINTS

This dainty lace jacket, high in the back and falling in a waterfall effect in front, is one of the standard neckwear models.

HOW TO BOIL A HAM

Cover a 12-pound ham with cold water. Bring to a boil, then simmer for four hours. Remove from kettle. Remove the rind by lifting it up at the thick end of the ham without injuring the fat, and carefully pulling off. (Save this to boil with cabbage or a boiled dinner). Rub in a teaspoon of brown sugar and one of dry mustard. Bake for one hour, basting often with one tablespoon cider vinegar to one cup of water.

Finally sprinkle with one teaspoon brown sugar and one-half cup very fine bread crumbs. Stick two dozen whole cloves into the fat and bake until brown, about one-half hour, Serve hot for the first meal, garnished with radishes and parsley.

EYES IN THE SKY

WAR LIFE AS SEEN FROM A DIRIGIBLE BALEOON.

An Englishman writes: They are among the "common objects of the front," the big captive "sausage" balloons which each side sends up so that it can watch the other, and which are used chiefly for checking and correcting the aim of artillery fire. In all languages the slang name for them seems to be the same. Their appearance is so irresistibly suggestive. The French call them "saucisses," the Russians "Kolbasa."

There is no kind of bombardment so trying as bombardment from the air, bombardment by Zeppelin or areoplane bombs. Nor is there any method of keeping people under observation so uncanny and sinister as that which places observers above them in these captive balloons. You may know quite well, when you cross an open space within range of fire, that you are being watched through periscopes from artillery observation points on the ground or in trees by industrious scouts with field glasses; you do not feel any uneasiness. But when you look up at the "sausage" shining in the sunshine three or four miles away, and know that there are eyes in it which can see you and report your movements to the nearest battery, you begin to be uncomfortable. They have so much the advantage of you, those eyes in the sky. You feel helpless and indignant. You get away from their field of vision as quickly as you can.

CHOICE OF OFFICERS

Which Profession Supplies Best Officers?—Sergeant Decides on Actors

"Actors make the best officers," declared a British drill sergeant. "First of all, they know how to give the word of command, a very important consideration. They are never shy or self-conscious, and they impress the men with their personality. Give me an educated actor and I will recommend you a good officer.

"Schoolmasters make the best non-commissioned officers. Business men I have found rather difficult. They are intelligent enough, but they are not what you may call adaptable." A staff officer endorsed the sergeant's views, with qualifications. "Professions calling for the exercise of imagination and observation do, generally speaking, provide first class officers," he said. "Two officers on trench service constantly distinguished themselves by keen observation. They were invariably the first to notice any change in the enemy's dispositions and both were Fleet street journalists. Natural resource rather than trained intelligence counts on active service, and, while this faculty may be possessed by men in all professions, it is more often found among journalists, barristers, and, of course, engineers, whom I place in a class apart."

Separating Postage Stamps

In damp weather, or by careless placing, postage stamps sometimes stick together. When this happens, place them on a newspaper in a hot oven for a few moments. As soon as the stamps get hot the glue dies and by pressing between the finger it is readily broken and the stamps may be easily separated without the least damage.

Aviator's Altar

An altar has been erected on the flying field at Hendon made entirely of parts of broken aeroplanes. It was built by the fliers themselves and stands in a little sanctuary in the Church of England recreation hut.

If you have a horseshoe nailed over the door and it doesn't fall on you, it's lucky.

TWO LONG YEARS HE SUFFERED

"Fruit-a-tives" Made Him Feel As If Walking On Air

ORILLIA, ONT., Nov. 28th. 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. One day I saw your sign which read "Fruit-a-tives make you feel like walking on air." This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends".

GOLD IN ESKIMOLAND

Used For Bullets, Says Explorer From Canadian Arctics

Christian Leden, the Norwegian explorer and ethnologist, who jumped from the snow huts of the Eskimos to the Waldorf-Astoria—"some contrast," he said—brought back from the great Canadian barren grounds northwest of Hudson Bay native tales of vast gold deposits and petroleum fields in unexplored regions north of the Arctic circle.

"I did not see the gold," he said. "Native friends of mine told me about it, but they did not know it was gold. They were returning from a hunting trip of 700 or 800 miles with some specimens for me, but their dogs died and they had to throw what I believe to be gold away. They told me of a ledge where the metal dropped off in pieces, and from what they said I should judge the veins must have been very rich. One of them had a harpoon, the point of which was made of the yellow metal. They told me also of an Eskimo who used in his gun bullets that he had hammered out of gold."

As for the petroleum, Mr. Leden said, the Eskimos objected seriously to the smell of the oil, although they were accustomed to strong odors. Eskimos, he explained, never take a bath. He declined to give an idea of the locality of the gold deposits other than to say: "It would have taken me two years more to have gone where the gold is." Mr. Leden travelled with tribes of Eskimos for three years, principally to study the native music, which was neither major nor minor key.

SAVING BY-PRODUCTS

"Until British industry has banished its prejudice against cheap production it will compete with Germany on unequal terms," said Mr. Frederic William Wile at the Woolwich Chamber of Commerce, speaking on "The War After the War." "I am not a trade expert, but authorities who know both British and German industrial conditions assure me that the German concentration on reducing cost of production was perhaps the primary secret of their trade conquests.

"Two cardinal principles are invoked by them—the rigid avoidance of wastage of raw materials, which is said to be notorious in many British works, and the employment of highly trained staffs who devote their lives to devising fresh methods of getting every possible ounce of value from rawstuffs. Germany is able to manufacture more cheaply than Britain in many branches because of the extent to which she has exhausted the 'by-product' possibilities of such raw materials as coal."

known as the enfant terrible of the French army.

Even the summer girl doesn't trifle with a milionaire's heart.

THIS DAMP WEATHER

PRECAUTIONS TO BE TAKEN BY THE HOUSEWIFE.

A little while ago two young housewives were condoling with each other over the prolonged season of humidity and dampness.

"We can't get a single bureau drawer closed," said one. "And last night when I wanted to get out the very best table linen I own for an unexpected dinner guest, we couldn't get the linen drawer open, and instead of showing off my best, we had to use paper napkins."

"We're in a worse state," said the other. "Finally after much pulling I got a bureau drawer all the way out, and now I keep it propped up on two chairs because I can't get it in again."

Summer dampness is really hard to guard against. It is sure to come every year. The weather is too warm to permit fires which might restore the house to a comfortable dryness, and as the dampness is only temporary not very much can be done to furniture or inside fixtures. It is a temptation to have the spreading drawers and doors planed off a little, but to do so is a mistake for the return of heat and dry weather will cause them to shrink back to their normal proportions. If they are planed off now they will let in most unpleasant draughts and dust later.

Perhaps no one thing about damp weather is more distressing than the condition it inflicts on the salt cellar. If the salt cellar or shakers are emptied after each meal and thoroughly dried in a warming oven, and refilled just before the next meal, the salt will still be moist and sticky when it is used. One of the hotels at the seashore where dampness is inevitable keeps inverted water glasses over the salt dishes. Of course it is a little bit inconvenient to lift up a glass whenever you wish to get a spoonful of salt, but the results do make for dryness. Grains of uncooked rice can be mixed with salt used in shakers with rather satisfactory results.

Probably the fact that there is much greater humidity in England than in this country in part accounts for the fact that open cellars are always used there and that "salt shakers" are regarded as a decided Americanism. The obvious advantage of shakers is that in them the salt is kept free from dust and contact with the air, but in times of dampness one is tempted to use the English cellars, from which salt may be taken by means of a salt spoon so much more easily than it can be shaken out when it has absorbed a good share of moisture.

Looking for Shirkers.

The dragnet of military authorities to catch men attempting to evade military service was a few days ago extended to Marylebone Station, one of the great London terminals. As the passengers poured out from incoming trains military and civil police sorted the crowds, and passing men obviously over military age marched the suspects into a corral. When batches of thirty were collected in the corral they were marched through the streets guarded by constables to the police station. Top-hatted city men they were for the most part and many were able to satisfy the authorities at once as to their right to be at large. These were allowed to go to their offices. Others who were not carrying their papers were allowed to telephone their offices and homes, and during the morning relief parties with the necessary papers arrived at the police station. At noon there were still about fifty men detained, some in the policemen's canteen, others in the waiting-rooms, and one by one these were released as they satisfied the authorities by their names and addresses. Others were taken and the local police communicated with. If the particulars were found correct these were also released pending inquiries.

The morning trains to Marylebone bring many city men to work and many protests were raised against the delays caused. Several newspapers publish articles declaring against these methods, which The Star and Daily News liken to German Zabernism.

Pewter-Nosed Shell.

Lt. R. C. Edmunds is home from the front. He brought with him an interesting series of battle-front souvenirs, including a German steel helmet, gas respirator, and an assortment of shell parts. A significant feature of the display is the new pewter-nosed shell, which the Lieutenant says was being freely used by the Germans when he left France. It was taking the place of the steel and brass-nosed shells, and is evidently the result of necessary economy in the use of the harder and more precious metals.

Lieut. Edmunds is a Huntsville boy, who gave up a position at the Ottawa Mint to enlist as a private. His promotion was earned in the trenches. He was wounded in eight places by shrapnel, and is home on furlough. Mrs. Edmunds accompanies him.

When the "Corpse" Walked.

Sir John Henniker Heaton used to preface a favorite story of his by explaining how, at Monte Carlo, when the body of a suicide was found in the grounds attached to the Casino, the officials always put money in his pocket so that it should not be said that poverty through gambling had caused his death.

One day a man rose from the tables muttering "Ruined! Ruined!" went outside, let off a revolver, and fell to the ground.

The officials pushed banknotes into his pockets at once. Soon after the corpse got up and returned to the rooms, using the official money in a further attempt to break the bank.

HABITS OF SEAGULLS

NOT TO BE EASILY "GULLED," THOUGH NAME IMPLIES SAME.

The name Gull is a misnomer for no bird is less gullible, and few combine such interest, grace and sagacity. Gulls possess marvellous powers of flight and are indeed the living model of the mondern monoplane. The German aviators called their machines taube (meaning pigeon), but it is not the pigeon but the gull they imitated. The relative size of wing and body, the gliding motion, is exclusively that of the gull.

Scientists can only partly explain their flight where in the strongest gale, they glide against the wind with never a perceptible movement of their outstretched wings. As the kite is kept up by wind pressure, so it must be with the gull, a slight upward movement of the wings causes it to rise. This is followed by a long gradual slant downwards, in which it gathers momentum for soaring heavenward again. Many species are represented under this general term, varying much in color, size, and habits. One species, the Skua, in habits partakes more of the nature of the hawks, he is a genuine plunderer, a pirate in fact, living solely on the hard gotten gains of others.

The Skuas are exclusively seabirds, never leaving the ocean as other gulls do in search of food. The ordinary gull is, however, very tame and becomes fearless of man when not molested. In London, the largest city in the world, the gull is quite at home. At any of the bridges over the Thames or in the parks near the river a flock of gulls can be collected in a few minutes by throwing bread into the water. At London Bridge one of the busiest thoroughfares, the gulls delight many a crowd, and bring a touch of brightness into lives, lived amidst the murk and gloom of winter fogs. Poised on the wing about the parapet, they are adepts at catching the food thrown them, while some of the tamer ones will snatch a morsel from the hand.

CARE OF HARNESS

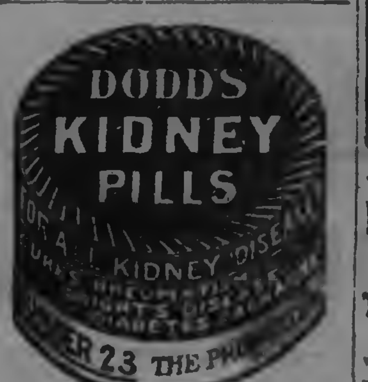
Neat's Foot Oil Best Leather Protector

Leather goods of any kind are expensive. You can greatly prolong the life and usefulness of such goods by proper care in keeping them free of mud and by frequent oiling. Mud is more destructive to leather than moderate wear; water is even more destructive. Therefore, one of the main things to be observed in the care of harness is to keep it clean and the pores filled with the proper ingredients to increase the pliableness, and at the same time render the leather impervious to water. Any leather which freely takes in water soon becomes brittle, and its usefulness is thereby greatly impaired. Before oiling harness unbuckle every strap and wash it clean with warm, soft water, in which there is a little castile soap, using a sponge or cloth, and when it is nearly dry apply the oil. Vegetable oils, with the exception of castor oil, being hardening in their effect, should not be applied to harness. Neat's foot oil is considered one of the very best leather protectors that can be used. It is necessary that the leather be slightly dampened before applying the oil, so that it will penetrate. One quart of neat'sfoot oil, four ounces of beef tallow and three tablespoonfuls of lampblack make an excellent dressing for harness.

CATS AND DOGS DOOMED

It is contended that there is enough meat wasted on dogs every day in London to feed thousands of poor people. Big dogs costing $1.50 and $1.75 a week to keep are owned by people who are helping to keep up the price of food. In London alone there are nearly 180,000 dogs, and in Greater London, which includes the County of London, there are more than a quarter of a million, all needing food every day, all helping to keep up the price of food. There are no statistics relating to cats, but it is a fair estimate to reckon that in the 1,500,000 families resident in London and Greater London there are at least 750,000 cats. Cats and dogs in this great area of human habitation number at least 1,000,000. How much money is spent on their maintenance it is impossible to say. Bread, meat, and milk consumed by them every day must be of considerable proportions. If out of the 750,000 cats half of them got a saucer of milk each day—a matter of a quarter of a pint—they would lap up 12,000 gallons of milk daily, costing $6,000 a day, or over $40,000 a week. These 12,000 gallons of milk would give a pint of vital food to over 90,000 poor children; they would ensure more thon a quart of milk each day for every necessitous child fed by the London County Council.

And the printing press is responsible for many of the revolutions of the world.



Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries of the veins and head, producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish, and miserable, your meals sour, and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it drunk before breakfast for a while will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation, or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick, and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

Australian Politics.

The dramatic sequel of the conscription fight in Australia is the split of the Parliamentary Labor Party, the expulsion of Premier Hughes by the anti-conscription majority, and the reconstruction of the Cabinet. The radical majority of the old party now calls itself the Official Labor Party; the Government branch may take what title it pleases, and will have to carry on the administration with the assistance of the one-time opposition Liberals. For a long time a cleavage has been evident between the industrial and the political sections of the Labor Party. The former, intent upon advanced labor measures and clamoring for even the abolition of the Upper House, has been irritated by the Ministry's tardy response; the latter has gone slow upon everything but the conscription measure. One aspect of the affair will reassure Australia. The fear has been expressed that the present Ministry regarded itself as answerable to the Labor Caucus rather than to Parliament, but it is plain that Hughes will submit to no dictation from it.

There Are Some.

"I just adore western men," gushed the girl who had never been west of Hoboken. "You are all so big and bluff and hearty."

"Well, when it comes to that," replied the westerner, "I've seen some pretty big bluffs right here in New York city."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Wrong Beliefs.

Hosts of young men are reckless because they believe that by and by they can be what they will. Hosts of old men are hopeless because it seems impossible that they can ever be anything but what they are. Both are wrong.—Phillips Brooks.

THE GREAT WORLD-WAR IN THE LIGHT OF SCRIPTURE.

"The Great World War in the Light of Scripture" was the subject of Pastor Doner's address at Bethany Tabernacle Sunday night. He admitted in his opening remarks that he was so full of his subject that he scarcely knew where to begin. His purpose was to give a panoramic outline of the great universal war, from its causes to its consequence, and in order to do this he would be obliged to present it as a continued theme.

He said: "War began in heaven. Men have learned the strategy of war from the devil and the angelic rebels. All world wars since man's military history began are but incidents of the great universal conflict incessantly raging. The real belligerents in this stupendous struggle are God and Satan, with men and angels supporting either side according to their choice. When Lucifer rebelled against Jehovah, war began. God punished his wicked conspiracy with drastic reprisal, resulting in his expulsion from the mount of God and his eternal degradation.

See Isaiah 14: 12-17; Ezekiel 28: 14-19.

"Since then he has been and still is the 'Prince of the power of the air,' and though his headquarters are in the aerial heavens, he is vigorously operating in the earth, recruiting his armies from men of every nation.

"No event of history ever disclosed such unparalleled patience as was exercised by His Divine Majesty while permitting the insolent insubordination of men and demons for four thousand years.

"Then, as if to stagger the angels of heaven, He executed a supreme stroke of diplomacy in sending His only Son as His Royal Ambassador to earth. This matchless kindness was met with earth's characteristic revenge and hate and found expression in the cry of Matthew 21: 38. 'Come, let us kill Him.' After long years of plotting, they succeeded in effecting the murder of the Royal Prince, but their triumph and exultation were short-lived. He arose a victor over hell and death and the devil and his legions realized the conflict had only really begun.

"Being recalled at this time to the King's palace in the homeland, the Hero of Calvary has since then been sitting upon the throne of His Royal Father, where, in intimate counsel, a marvellous plan is being developed for the government of the earth.

"Following the recall of the ambassadorial Prince, the Holy Spirit, Who is the third person in the Imperial Counsel, was appointed to the important duty of Consul General and Chief of Staff, and immediately delegated to the earth. See Hebrews 1: 1-2, Psalms 2: 7-9, Acts 2: 32-36.

"Under his skilful direction, an army of astounding magnitude and magnificent equipment is being rapidly mobilised in preparation for the great coming crisis known in scriptural decree as the Armageddon. See Rev. 16: 16; Rev. 19. The present conflict in Europe, believed by many to be the Armageddon of Scripture, is not to be compared with that day. It cannot be Armageddon. Armageddon will terminate earth's wars. It will immediately introduce the purple and gold of the Millennium. Its locality, nationality, purpose and magnitude will be entirely diverse from the present struggle. Poor, blind world, little do you dream how dreadful the scenes of the day of slaughter when Heaven's Regent comes to earth to reign. Any peace that might be effected now or at the close of hostilities in Europe cannot be permanent. There can be no real abiding peace until the Prince of Peace returns. This is not His hour. It is the day of His patience and preparation. He will come, and then will be the day of His power. Psalms 110:3.

"Meanwhile, His saints who fight the battle aginst sin are exhorted to take courage in remembering that, though our arsenal is in the heavens, not a single soldier has ever been allowed to run short of supplies or suffer defeat when orders have been observed. Our equipment is absolutely up to the minute. God is never behind the times. We have a wireless field system known to us as prayer, that is indeed a working marvel. Our messages, when according to code, go through. Our aerial guard is indefatigable and invulnerable. The holy-watchers never sleep nor fail nor are they affected by the weather. Our supremacy in the air is indisputable and we are sure to win."

Note.—Next address will describe the actual battle of Armageddon and the capture of the Devil, followed by his imprisonment in the bottomless pit for a thousand years.

SMALL MATTERS THAT GRIP THE PUBLIC MIND

At the first week of the new year it is well to collect the items which now grip the minds of those who strive for national advance. Here are a few of them:—

Hod long Sir Wilfrid Laurier will talk on the debate on the speech from the throne.

Who will win the hockey honors.

The best kind of skates to buy.

What movie show will next be here.

Who invented the Ross rifle.

Whether that husky young man will take a tumble and enlist.

Will laymen overcome the habit of writing sermons.

Will there be an election or another extension.

What will the ground hog do.

Will the Examiner ever admit that there is no Canadian nickel finding its way to Germany.

Shall the police force be reduced.

Various other matters of more or less importance that sidetrack public interest from the big problem of the war.

WILL RESUME CLARKE INQUEST

LAD DIED AFTER EATING CANNED GOODS.

EMPTY CAN MISSING.

The adjourned inquest into the death of Howard Clarke, who died under suspicious circumstances at his home on Park street last month, will be held this evening in the police court room. It was believed the boy had been poisoned as a result of eating canned tomatoes, and Coroner Greer, who was notified, empannelled a jury and ordered a post-mortem examination, which was performed by Drs. Eastwood and McCulloch.

No trace of the can from which the tomatoes were taken has been found.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT BYERS

Death claimed one of the pioneer residents of Cavan Township at an early hour Sunday morning, Jan. 7, in the person of Mrs. Robert Byers, who passed away after a short illness.

Mrs. Byers, always a very active woman, had been in fairly good health until the past year. On Christmas Day she seemed particularly well, but the day after became ill, and though she rallied for a short time she took another bad turn about one o'clock and shortly after passed peacefully away.

The late Mrs. Byers was in her 78th year, being born Oct. 31, 1839. In February, 1860, she was married to Mr. Robert Byers, and with her husband went to live on their farm in Cavan Township, on the boundary road between Manvers and Cavan Townships. At that time the land in that district was covered with forest and sparsely settled and many war he hardships they endured in the ensuing years in clearing their farm. Her husband, who survives her is in his 81st year. Four daughters, Mrs. Sarah Faills, Millbrook; Mrs. J. A. Perry, 316 Maitland Ave., City; Mrs. Joseph Ingram, 304 Pearl Ave., City; and Mrs. D. S. Cairns, Bethany; three sons, Messrs. Wm. Byers, Bethany; Amos Byers, on the homestead; and Pte. Milton V. Byers, with the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles, France; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren also survive.

Pte. Milton Byers, the youngest son, enlisted in Calgary and was unable to get home to see his parents before going overseas.

The funeral took place this afternoon.

IS CANADA ON THE BRINK OF A GENERAL ELECTION?

Rumors at Ottawa That Sir Wilfrid Will Not Consent to Another Extension---War Work Will be Paralyzed.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 9. — The gossip at the Capital is all to the effect that Sir Wilfrid Laurier intends to refuse a further extension to the Borden Government. If so, then, of course there is nothing for it but a general election.

Already the statement to that effec has begun to paralyze plans for a recruiting campaign. A general election will tie up for at least three months, at a most critical time, the plans of the people of Canada concerning the future man-power of the Canadian forces at the front. Members who might be much better employed will have to rush to their constituencies. This applies, of course, to both sides of politics.

But why two sides of politics at a time like this? Does Sir Wilfrid imagine that the results of Canada's work at the front could be better? And it is results that count. No doubt, as in all the allied countries, some things could be improved upon, and they are improved upon as time goes on.

But the sending forward of our men to the front, Canadian finance, Canadian munition work—in a word, all that pertains to the efficient conduct of our share of the war—has been done, and mighty well done.

To refuse an extension, therefore, is merely partisan politics, and Liberals from one end of Canada to the other should protest against an election.

ROBERT PARKER FOUND GUILTY OF MURDERING HIS NEIGHBOR.

IS 77 YEARS OLD.

HAS SPENT SEVEN YEARS BEHIND WALLS OF THE PRISON.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 9. — Robert Parker, who was on Oct. 7th, 1910, found guilty of the murder of his neighbor William Masters and whose sentence to be hung was afterwards commuted to life imprisonment, was this morning released from Kingston Penitentiary.

He was released on the solicitation of friends through the good offices of Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P. Parker will go west, where he will in future reside with his son.

The crime of which Parker was adjudged guilty was one of the most memorable in the annals of this county.

William Masters, the man who was murdered, was 73 years of age. His humble home was in the neighborhood known as "Porto Rico," a mile or so south of Tweed on the road leading to Belleville. Here a number of families, in somewhat humble circumstances, had their place of abode, their occupations being market gardening, bee raising [illegible] and general work.

Mr. Masters was a laboring man, who cultivated a small garden and worked occasionally by day for nearby farmers.

On the morning of the murder Masters arose quite early and, after breakfast went down an unfrequented sideroad at some distance from his home. Here he engaged himself in gathering up scattered wood in the form of broken sticks, limbs, knots, etc. He came back home, got his horse and wagon ready and drove away to bring home the load of wood. He secured the load and was on his way home, picking up pieces as he went along.

About 11 o'clock in the forenoon the horse pulled up to his house with the load of wood and the lines dragging on the ground. Mrs. Masters went to the door and expected to see Mr. Masters. She waited a minute or two, then went to the gate and looked down the road. She returned to the house and suggested that her son, William, go and se if he could see his father. He did so and continued down the sideroad about three-quarters of a mile from their home an foand the old man lying face downwards on the roadside. Young Master was under the impression that his father had fainted, as he suffered from occasional fainting spells. But a hasty examination revealed the fact that he was dead. No blood was to be seen and the young man did not yet suspect that has father had been murdered. He hastened back home, notified the neighbors and sent for Dr. Farrell, the coroner at Tweed.

The coroner ordered the body removed to the house. It was ascertained that death had been caused by a rifle bullet of 44 calibre. The ball entered the right side, passed clean through the body and lodged in the lining of the coat.

The jury was summoned and they went to the scene of the tragedy. The murdered chose a good spot for committing the deed. The road where the shooting took place was not open for public travel. It led to the Moira, where the river forms a big bay and there is much swamp and low land in the vicinity. The assassin must have been at some little distance from the victim and therefore must have taken very careful aim.

Owing to the fact that there had been bitter altercations beween Masters and Parker suspicions were directed towards the latter, and at the instance of County Crown Attorney Anderson a warrant was issued for Parker's arrest.

The murder was committed on Friady, April 8. On Saturday night of the same week Parker, accompanied by his brother-in-law, William Ferguson, of Moneymore, drove into Tweed and gave himself up to County Constable Andrew Wilson.

At the same time he denied any knowledge of the shooting and stoutly maintained his innocence. He was placed in the Tweed lockup, given a preliminary hearing before the local magistrate and sent to the county jail to await the trial at the Fall Assizes.

The Trial

On the 4th day of October following, the trial opened here, with Sir William Mulock as the presiding judge. Mr. Peter White, K.C., one of Canada's ablest counsel, was the Crown prosecutor. The prisoner was most skilfully defended by Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C. It was brought out in the evidence that the prisoner had been seen on the morning of the tragedy carrying a gun. The bullet recovered was of the same calibre as Parker's rifle. Parker was put in the box in his own behalf and still strongly protested his innocence. Both judge and jury, however, considered the weight of testimony pointing towards guilt as being too great and he was therefore sentenced on the night of October 7th to be hanged on December 3rd.

Before the sentence could be carried out the appeal of frinds succeeded and a commutation to sentence for life was secured.

Parker was at the time of his trial 71 years of age. He is now therefore 77 years old and has spent nearly seven years in prison.

FAST GROWTH OF WESTERN CANADA

Winnipeg land in pioneer days was the cheapest thing in the province. Early settlers acquired all they desired for a song. Property that sold for a few dollars, to-day is worth many thousands. A glimpse at the history of early property owners and the land they occupied is interesting.

First of the pioneers who acquired real estate was Andrew McDermot, sturdy Irishman. He was a merchant farmer, horse trader and cattle dealer. He engrossed the freighting business, acted as the company's right-hand man in all contracts and public undertakings, speculated in houses and land, built mills, encouraged manufacturers, and later commenced forming a little colony, of which he was head.

First Post Office, 1870

In the early days A. G. R. Bannatyne was the postmaster. The first building entirely devoted to the purposes of the post office was used in 1870. It was a log building and was situated nearly opposite the Hotel du Canada. It is recorded as an event of considerable importance that in June, '71, the postmaster "had boxes arranged in the post office, for the use of merchants and others."

The carrying of the mail was undertaken in 1871 by an American stage company. The stage arrived for the first time on the 11th of September of that year. The arrival of the stage was a great event. One had the feeling that it was something like the clouds opening and letting in a rift of light. Sometimes in winter the stage was blocked.

The telegraph was instituted in 1871 and the rates were very high, namely, upwards of $2 for ten words to Toronto, yet it was greatly used. The first connection was made with the American lines by way of Pembina. This took place on Nov. 20, 1871.

The fact that in the old days there was little demand for farm products had led to non-production, and a consequent scarcity as soon as population increased. The necessity for shelter led to buildings being erected, but in the spring of '71 rough lumber sold at $70 per thousand, and poor lumber it was at that; dressed lumber was $100 a thousand.

Hudson Bay "Blankets"

For many years the Hudson's Bay company had been the medium for carrying on the business of the country. One of the most interesting features of their monetary system was the paper money known as Hudson's Bay "blankets," much larger than our bills, and like the bank notes in Britain. These were of the denominations of five pounds, one pound, five shillings and one shilling and to Canadians especially that of the smallest value was a great curiosity indeed.

CROWDING HENS

It is not so much the number of hens that are in a flock when outdoors that causes disease, as it is the number that must share the room indoors. Fowls on range or in runs will take care of themselves during the day, as far as crowding is concerned, but it is at night when they crowd on the roosts, or when they are compelled to stay indoors on account of bad weather that causes the trouble. However where a large number of hens are kept in a limited yard, the latter must be kept as clean as possible, and should be plowed up several times a year. It is always best to have a double run so that when the fowls are occupying the one, the other can be sown to a green crop as, for instance, rye and this green crop will draw out all the impurities of the soil.

HOW BULLETS TRAVEL

There are many cases in which the course of the bullet has been most extraordinary. For instance, a soldier was shot in the knee, and the bullet could not be traced. The patient made very slow progress, and presently developed complications. He complained of pain in the abdomen. Eventually the bullet was found to have travelled up the limb and lodged in the pelvis. Had the bullet not been discovered and extracted, the man would probably have died in great pain.

Another instance of the vagaries of bullets, but without so happy an ending as the previous one, is that of a soldier who was shot in the face, and the bullet was found under the skin at the back of his head. It had travelled round the head and deprived the poor fellow of his sight. Many cases have been observed in which bullets have entered one side of the face passed right through the nasal cavities without injuring them, and gone out again on the other side of the face.

FEEDING THE BELGIANS

On Rejected German Bread—Lying Films Sent to Neutrals

In a London lecture Mr. D. Thomas Curtin was particularly amusing in his account of the manner in which the German Government uses the controlled and subservient press so as to divert public opinion and keep alive the general belief that England was deliberately responsible for the war. He gave one illuminating example of the method employed to influence neutral opinion. A kinematograph film circulated throughout the world purported to show the distribution of bread to the inhabitants of conquered Belgium. It was designed to show the world the tender care of the Germans for the people whose territory the necessities of war had compelled them to occupy. But the film did not disclose the fact that the bread used for those picture purposes was rejected army bread too bad to be eaten by the German troops.

Banker's $40,000 a Year

A solicitor protested at Kingston (England) Tribunal that it was not in the national interest to take a man receiving $4,000 a year and put him to the task of picking up waste paper in a barrack yard. The mayor said a member of the tribunal had a friend who had from $40,000 to $50,000 a year. He was compelled to join up and was drawing a lance-corporal's pay.

Hugh McCulloch, president of the Goldie & McCulloch Co. Ltd., and one of the most prominent residents of Galt, died in his 61st year.

Beau Brummel of Hawks.

He is the Beau Brummel of the North American hawks, among which he is conceded to be the handsomest as well as the smallest. He's the sparrow hawk and breeds throughout the United States, Canada and northern Mexico.

He stands around on telegraph poles disporting a salt and pepper vest, with a red and black long tailed coat, and all the other hawks are envious of his appearance and smart toggery.

Few birds eat such a variety of food as the sparrow hawk, who is the true American falcon. Grasshoppers, crickets, terrestrial beetles and caterpillars make up more than half his subsistence, while field mice, house mice and shrews cover 25 per cent of his annual supply. The balance of the food includes birds, reptiles and spiders.

In agricultural districts where new ground is being broken the sparrow hawk becomes quite tame, even alighting for a moment under the horses in his effort to seize a worm or an insect. —Philadelphia North American.

Frozen Peaches.

Peel and slice one dozen fine ripe peaches, sweeten generously, put them into the freezer with the unbeaten whites of three eggs, pack in ice and salt and freeze.

SOLDIERS SCORED TWENTY-THREE COUNTERS TO COBOURG'S QUINTET

Visitors Put up Lively Argument all Along the Way and Had Many Shots Blocked---First Period 8-2; Second Period 17-3.

With every player up and doing in an effort to show the fans just how good they were, the 247th Batt. Intermediates scored against Cobourg here last night to the extent of 23 goals. The visitors got 5. The Lakeshore lads showed surprisingly good form and there were spots in the contest when the locals had to extend every muscle to keep the opposition back. The quintet of tallies registered by Cobourg fails to show the team in its proper strength, as they played well together—better, in fact, than the locals—and in the first period they sent through a dozen or more shots on the Soldiers' goaler and only his fast work held their scoring down to a low figure. Individually, also, the visitors displayed speedy skating, all kinds of tricks and a willingness to go the limit to match their skill against the more experienced soldiers. Prominent in the first period was Gliddon, one of the veterans of the Cobourg hockey club. He handled the puck effectively, and shot hard and accurately, and it was no fault of his that more scores were not registered. Frank Barrie, formerly of the local juniors, and Mercantile League, who is working at a munitions plant at Cobourg, played a neat game at left wing, combining in plays with his teammates and often getting in a shot on the nets. He was opposed to Jack Adams, the Soldiers' stellar boards man, and his showing therefore was all the more pleasing to the fans. Maher, a recruit from the junior ranks, did well against Armstrong, and Fox at right wing finally got his wish when, in the last minute of play, he shot the rubber past LeGros for the fifth Cobourg goal and the last counter of the night.

Drumm played a hard game on defence, contributing some fast stick handling and rushing, as did also Payne, his neighbor. The old boy, who in the palmy days of the game in Cobourg, was one of the best in the pastime, did great work last night and at all times played according to Hoyle. Bulger in the nets did his best work in the second period. His was not a particularly popular job, the way the Soldiers were attacking, and more experienced netmen might not have done so well. Altogether the visitors' performance was worthy of Cobourg. It should be remembered that Cobourg has been playing the greater game on the battlefields of France, where the majority of her best hockey players have been doing their bit. One hundred defeats would mean nothing against Cobourg. Theirs is the honor of having sent their athletes into the war—some of them never to return.

Great is Armstrong

On the Soldiers' line-up every man played hard, consistant and effective hockey, but the palm goes to Armstrong, who in last night's game performed up to all expectations. The big fellow worked at rover, filling the bill to a nicety. He is in the play all the time and apparently sees no occasion for turning a hockey game into a back woodsman's chopping bee. The fans had a good look at Flanagan, who performed at centre. He and Armstrong are a great pair and as team work develops will add considerable more strength to the team. He showed a tendency to explode, under trying conditions, a natural failure of many players, and he raised a laugh all round when he went after Gliddon in a maner not in accordance with the rule book.

Jack Adams played a clever and goal-producing game, his fast work around the enemy nets finding favor with the fans. A great battle may be expected when Adams hooks up with a player of like calibre. He scored 5 goals and assisted in others. On the other side of the ice, Evans never played a better game. The local lad tore off rushes last night as good as any on the ice and was always willing to work in combination. On the defence, Halpin and Thornton gave a good account of themselves, the former rushing frequently on several occasions the rink length, and shooting well. He combined nicely and one score credited to Thornton, was on his pass after a long rush.

Ladies Curling Club

A meeting of the ladies' curling club is called for tomorrow (Wednesday) at 10.30 a.m. Members are urged to be present as business of importance is to be discussed.

Economy is a hard road to travel but it leads to the land of wealth.

Shots on the Netting

The game was held up till nine o'clock by the non-arrival of a referee, the anouncement made to the crowd by Major O'Flynn being taken good-naturedly. J. P. Bond, who finally took on the task, had been appointed by the O.H.A. but instructions to that effect failed to reach him. Major O'Flynn, who is managing the team, promises no repetition.

The Intermediates will play the return game with Lindsay tomorrow night. Cap. Simpson promises a strengthened team, which will be good news to the Soldiers.

Percy Bond used good judgment throughout the game and frowned down on any signs of the players running wild. At that there were few penalties.

The absence of the 247th band from the rink last night is explained in an order issued yesterday by the A.D.C.M. for the inoculation of the battalion. The bandsmen were treated first and were therefore out of commission.

Doug. McGuire, of the Cobourg Post, who accompanied the team, felt the big score coming, but he was tickled over the fine showing of the Lakeshore boys. "We're only in the game to keep it going," said Doug. "All the old boys are over in France."

The Petes last night scored two goals in thirty seconds. In the opening of the second period, Halpin strolled forth, passed to Armstrong, who scored in 15 secs. Armstrong notched another following the face-off.

"Grand-dad" Payne gave the Soldiers their twenty-third tally when, in going after the disc at the mouth of his own goal, the rubber flopped behind the post.

TANKARD AND DISTRICT RINKS ARE HELD UP

First Schedule Games Played at the Curling Rink.

The Peterborough curlers are all hoping that the weather man will be generous and hand out good ice temperature for the next two weeks as two of the important district competitions are billed to be played in that time.

The group contest for the Ontario Tankard is set to be played in Peterborough during the week comencing Tuesday, Jan. 16.

The group for the District Cup competition is called to be played in Lindsay during the week commencing Tuesday, Jan. 23.

So far there has not been much chance for the curlers to practice as the ice has only been keen enough on two occasions for a real try out. The members selected to represent this city have not yet played a game together.

Inter-rink Scores

The first inter-rink curling matches for the 1917 season were held at the curling rink last night and the games were well contested.

CUBS WIN FROM DODGERS BY SCORE OF 5 TO 4.

LAST NIGHT'S GAMES.

The Junior Collegiate Ball League is away to a splendid start. In two games played, both were well contested. The Cubs sprung a surprise on the Dodgers by winning with a much-weaened team. The game was very close, however, with the score 5-4.

In the basketball game the Braves won from the Giants.

Last night, in the Senior Employed Boys' League, the Athletics fought hard to hold first place, but were defeated by the Tigers in a hot game, the final score being 7-6. Harold Copp, captain of the winning team, secured six of the seven points. In the last game McLeod's Indians won by a big score from the Senators who were without the services of their best men. The score was 20-3. On Thursday night and Saturday morning the 60-yards potato race will be run off, and as the scores of each boy count, every member of the teams should be on hand. A prize will be given for the best score in the all-around handicap in the six events, handicaps to be based on performances during the last four months.

JUNIOR O.H.A. AT RINK TO-NIGHT

The junior O.H.A. players will step out on Brock Street rink tonight to show their wares against the fast Bowmanville sewen. The game will be called at 8.15.

The juniors have had a fairly good period of traing and will go into the game prepared to give the visitors a good contest.

The Junior Employed Boys organized a six-team league on Friday night, and will begin their schedule this week.

A Pioneer and His Successor

W. R. BAKER

E. ALEXANDER

OVER half a century of service, as Lord Shaughnessy said in announcing the retirement of Mr. W. R. Baker from the secretaryship of the Canadian Pacific Railway, entitles any man to well earned rest and recreation. Fifty years ago the C. P. R. was still only a dream, but he was even then connected in a subconscious way with the road, for the Allan Line, whose services Mr. Baker entered in 1865, has since been absorbed by the younger company, and the Allans took active part in the agitation for the building of the transcontinental railway.

Walter Reginald Baker, who was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1852, was only thirteen years of age when he came to Canada. He entered the Allan Line service, and remained there until 1873 when he was appointed local freight and passenger agent of the Canada Central Railway at Ottawa. This railway, which was absorbed by the C. P. R. in 1881, had been incorporated in 1861 to build a railway from Lake Huron to Ottawa via. Pembroke and Arnprior, and from Ottawa to Montreal. A further connection with the idea of a transcontinental railway occurs in his appointment in the same year as joint secretary with M. de Bellefeuille of the original Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the charter of which reverted to the Canadian Government. Mr. Baker, however, temporarily left railway life in 1874 to become A.D.C. and private secretary to the Marquis of Dufferin, Governor-General of Canada. From 1878 to 1881, he was assistant secretary to the Treasury Board at Ottawa, but when the famous Syndicate took up the work of completing the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway he left the Government service and joined this great enterprise as assistant to the general superintendent and local treasurer of the Western Division at Winnipeg. He was thus one of the actual pioneers of the C. P. R., arriving at Winnipeg on the last day of February, 1881, in the special sleeping car, which also brought up from St. Paul A. B. Stickney, General Superintendent of the Western Division; William Harder, Assistant Traffic Manager; C. O. Butterfield, Master Mechanic, and Joel May, Superintendent. Three of these were identified more or less with the St. Paul interests, whereas Mr. Baker represented the interests at Montreal. On this occasion they crossed the Red River on a pile bridge, a permanent structure not yet having been completed. Winnipeg at that time had a population of just about 7,000, and the work of building up the railway was commenced under distinctly primitive conditions. These were pioneering days in the West, and the C. P. R. officials, owing to a fire which drove them out of their proper quarters, at one time had to do their business at the corner of Portage Avenue and Fort Street, in the basement of a church, otherwise used as a Sunday School. In 1888 Mr. Baker had two promotions, first as purchasing agent, then as assistant to the general manager. The Manitoba and North Western Railway, originally an enterprise of the Allans and absorbed by the C. P. R., in 1900, knew him as general superintendent from 1883 to 1892, when he became general manager. "His assistance," said Lord Shaughnessy, "in straightening out the affairs of the acquired property was of material value, and his other duties, many of them of an important and confidential character, were performed with singular zeal and intelligence."

During 1900 and 1901 Mr. Baker filled the important position of executive agent of the C. P. R., to the great satisfaction of the people of Western Canada. He had always been prominent in sporting circles, and on leaving Winnipeg was made honorary life member of three clubs with which he had been closely identified, the Winnipeg Cricket Club, the Assiniboine Curling Club and the Winnipeg Golf Club. Coming to Montreal in 1901 Mr. Baker, however, frequently had the opportunity of meeting his many friends in the West. His finished courtesy and charming personality gave him a unique position in the Company, quite apart from the responsible executive offices which he held as Assistant to the Vice-President (1901-05), Assistant to the President (1905-08), and Secretary of the Company and Assistant to the President (1908-1916). The royal train, on the occasion of the several visits of the Prince and Princess of Wales (now King and Queen of England), Prince Arthur of Connaught, Prince Fushimi, and the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General, were always entrusted to his charge with the result that he is a C.V.O. and holds many valued orders, such as that of the order of the Sacred Treasure, bestowed by the Emperor of Japan, while he is also an Esquire of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

By a curious coincidence, Mr. Ernest Alexander, who succeeds Mr. Baker, is also a native of Yorkshire. Another point he has in common with his predecessor, namely, a keen appreciation of pictures, shown by his membership of the Arts Club of Montreal. Mr. Alexander is also a member of St. James's Club, Kanawaki Golf Club, and the Montreal Curling Club. He was quite a lad when he came to Canada, spending most of his early days in Hamilton, Ontario, where he went to school, and then entered service with the Grand Trunk Railway Company. In 1893 he became secretary to Sir William (then Mr.) Van Horne, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway. When Sir William was succeeded by Mr. (now Lord) Shaughnessy, Mr. Alexander remained in the president's office, continuing in various capacities until July 2nd, 1903, when he was appointed to fill the office of assistant treasurer. On August 30th, 1912, he was made assistant secretary of the Company, and his portfolio as secretary began on January 1st, 1917.

SOME NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS

(Laura Jean Libbey.)

Some of the resolutions the young man makes are: That he will marry, God willing, while the New Year is yet in it's swadling clothes, so to speak. That he will keep the young girl he has been calling on for the last twelvemonth no longer in suspense. That he will save up enough money to start housekeeping on his own hook instead of being a permanent guest of father-in-law. That he will stop sending bouquets of choice flowers to the stage beauties he admires and stop flirting with the pretty cashier in the restaurant where he takes his midday lunches. That he will not wine and dine with the fascinating young widows on his calling list. That he will not borrow any more cash from his dear old mother and forget to pay it back. That he will choose for companions only young men whom he considers worthy to be introduced to his sister. That he will not tell his dad he went to visit a sick friend when he was at a stag racket. That he won't ruin his health with highballs and midnight larks while the town sleeps. That he will not bet on another man's game. That he will leave off his favorite nightcap—gin fizz—and take a glass of clear, cold water. That he will cut down his extravagance, getting his old clothes pressed instead of enriching the tailor by buying new ones.

These and a thousand other resolutions the average young man makes. He keeps them, too, for an entire week. If he stuck to his pledges he'd be a model man. His like wouldn't be found, at least on this mundane sphere. He'd be too good for it. In making good resolves to turn over a new leaf a woman knows how far she can go, while vacillating man goes as far as he can.

He's only human. He shouldn't be blamed too much if he trips and falls over some little stumbling block of resolve, which he had well nigh forgotten. With a wife by his side he can defy temptation and the average turmoils which block his prosperity. What's the use of a young man's making New Year resolutions if he doesn't intend to exert himself to keep them? It's like the young man who resolved to quit smoking. He laid in a large stock of his favorite brands of cigars and cigarettes. The force of habit was stronger than memory. He bought at wholesale and smoked at wholesale rate. His resolve never occurred to him until he was on his last cigar and faced a long spell of sickness as the result. A wise old philosopher once said: "He who breaks a worthy New Year resolution has cast pearls to the winds." It is equaly unsatisfactory to press upon the average young man resolutions he will almost surely fail to keep.

Mr. John G. Kent was elected to the Presidency of the Toronto Board of Trade.

RAT POISON PLACED ON BREAD PROBABLY CAUSED HOWARD CLARKE'S DEATH

One of Two Pieces of Poisoned Bread Placed in House and Can Which Contained Tomato Soup Are Missing.

Mother Tells Jury of Her Son's Fatal Illness.

Your jury appointed to inquire into the death of Howard Clarke, find that he died at the home of his parents in the city of Peterborough on Dec. 22, 1916, and that, according to the evidence, deceased came to his death from arsenical poisoning from some source which your jury has not been able to determine, but there is a strong presumption that he obtained it from rat poisin placed on bread for mice.

Such was the verdict of the jury at the coroner's inquest last night to find out if possible the cause of the death of the boy. The evidence of Dr. McCulloch, who was the Clarke family physician, and one of the doctors who performed the post-mortem examination, was surprising and brought forth quite clearly that death was caused not by ptomaine poisoning from a tomato soup can, but from arsenic.

When Coroner Greer had called the inquiry to order the following jurors answered to their names: W. J. Stacey (foreman), J. E. Firth, H. P. Beal, W. Menzies, A. Brown, S. Houlihan, T. Borland, R. J. Sutherland, W. Lytle, A. Guerin, J. Malane, E. White.

Mother's Story

Mrs. Clarke, the mother of the boy, was the first witness called and her delicate condition and apparent worry over the bereavement caused expressions of sympathy from all. Her story of the happenings at her home on Friday, Dec. 22. was clear and connected. It was the first day of the boy's Christmas holidays and he had slept late in the morning and when he got up about 10.15 she had prepared some tomato soup for him from a can which she had purchased at the grocery store. After emptying the can she had placed it on a stove outside where it would be handy to throw into the garbage can. The child went out and came back to the house and remained for a while until the witness came downstairs, when she sent him to the grocery store. After drinking some cocoa he left the house but shortly came back and complained of being sick in his stomach, and later vomited. This did not seem to alarm the mother as the boy had partaken of an exceptionally large meal the night before. After complaining of his stomach being heavy the child had periods of drowsiness until 4 o'clock, when he woke up and told his mother that he felt better, but still complained of his stomach. The witness wanted to call the doctor then but the boy did not want her to do so. About six o'clock a peculiar appearance came on he boy's face; his eyes looked bad and he asked if his father would soon be home. When Mr. Clarke arrived he went to the store and got a bottle of Nerviline and a dose was given to the lad. He slept after that and Mr. Clarke after a while went to the doctor's to report the boy's condition. After he was gone witness noticed the half-open condition of the boy's eyes and not being able to get any answer to her questions, Mrs. Torrance, a neighbor, was called in and at once an urgent call was sent for the doctor, who after arriving told her that the boy was dead. She had later on told Dr. McCulloch about placing rat poison in a closet downstairs. It was mixed in jam and placed on small pieces of bread. She had warned the boy not to go near the closet and he did not have any occasion to go there, but might have gone for his picture books.

To Crown Attorney Hatton Mrs. Clarke stated that she had not been able to find the can and had not seen the missing piece of bread since.

One Piece Gone

E. T. Clarke, the father, told of coming home from his work on the night in question and of going to the store to get Nerviline but not being able to get it got Tucker's Balm, which was similar and for the same purpose. The boy had vomited up the first dose which was given in water, but retained the second one, which was given in milk. He also told of going to the doctor's and being there when the hurry telephone call came in from his home for the doctor. The child was as healthy as the average boy of his age, always ate well.

After the doctor had come downstairs he told witness about the poison and when they looked in the closet only one piece of the bread with the poisoned jam was found. There was no trace of the other piece, not even a crumb. The poison used was Rough on Rats, which was kept in a corner of the sideboard. Witness had looked for the soup can but had failed to find it.

Doctor's Evidence

Dr. Malcolm McCulloch related how he had responded to an urgent call to the Clarke home. The boy presented all the appearance of being dead and he temporised the condition owing to Mrs. Clarke's condition. Eventually he broke the news to her. He told Clarke that it would be impossible to issue a death certificate without notifying the coroner, which he did. While endeavoring to get a clue to the cause of death, Mrs. Clarke told him of putting the rat poison in the closet downstairs on two pieces of bread. He went down and looked in the closet but only found one piece, on a ladies' hat box. It was on a piece of paper—about one-quarter slice of bread with jam on it. He took charge of it. Diligent search was made for the other piece, but not the slightest trace could be found. There was a small rat hole in the closet, but not large enough for the piece of bread to pass through.

The post mortem examination showed the internal organs very much inflamed and congested from some irritant. The stomach and other organs had been removed and sent to Toronto for analysis and he had just received a report by telephone that arsenic in quantity had been found in the viscera and that the jam on the bread contained arsenic.

Dr. McCulloch in reply to Coroner Greer stated that the symptoms showed arsenic poisoning and he was sure that the child came to death from an overdose of arsenic. The time of death after taking would depend on the dose. A large quantitq is not so dangerous as the stomach would reject it. If not enough taken to cause rejection the system would be gradually paralysed. He had been the Clarke family physician for four or five years and knew the boy well. The lad was healthy and about two weeks previous had been to the office to get medicine. Mrs. Clarke, the doctor said, was very fond of her child.

To the jury Dr. McCulloch stated that arsenic poisoning was not a sudden death. In small doses it took months.

This concluded the evidence and after a short review by the coroner the jury retired and returned the verdict as above.

RUSSIANS GIVE UP THEIR POSITIONS, BERLIN REPORT

Retreat Before Von Mackensen Behind Sereth River.

Enemy Repulsed in Kasino River Region.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Rain has interfered with activities on the Franco-Belgian front, army headquarters announces.

Eastern front— Front of Prince Leopold: Stronger Russian attacks south-west of Riga and numerous advances by smalled detachments between the coast and Lake Narocz were again attempted yesterday without success.

Regarding operations on the Roumanian front, the statement says: Russians and Roumanians vainly tried to recapture height positions on both sides of Suchitsa Valley taken from them. Counter-attacks launched with strong forces failed with most sanguinary losses. The enemy was pushed back further north and south of the Kasino Valley. In engagements of the past two days, six officers, 900 men and three machine guns fell into our hands.

FOOTING ON PUTNA BANK

Army group of Von Mackensen: North of Foshani we suceeded in gaining a footing on the left bank of the Putna. Between Fokshani and Fundeni we forced the defeated enemy to give up his positions behind the Putna and retreat behind the Sereth. Prisoners to the number of 550 were brought in. At the mouth of the Rimnik Sarat we maintained against several hostile thrusts progress we had achieved by an attack. Night attacks on the Strama front were repulsed, says the report from the Macedonian front.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 10.—Repulse of repeated Teutonic attacks on the Russian lines along the Moldavian frontier, notably in Kasino River region, is announced in today's War Office report as follows:—

"Repeated enemy attacks against one of the heights north of the village of Slomiki were frustrated by our fire and counter-attacks.

During Monday evening and Tuesday morning the enemy delivered eight attacks on one of the heights north of Kasino River. All attacks were repulsed.

Capt. Garnet Greer Assistant to Deputy Director, Medical Dept. 4th Division

CAPT. GARNET GREER
Son of Dr. T. N. Greer, of Aylmer street.

A cable from London says: Major J. S. Jenkins, deputy-director of the medical department of the fourth division, met a German officer prisoner from the recent Somme fighting who stated that he was a graduate of the faculty of science of McGill University. He said he failed to understand why England and Germany were fighting. His conversation revealed much antipathy between the senior and junior German officers.

Major Jenkins' assistant, Captain George Garnet Greer, who has just been awarded the Military Cross, belongs to Peterborough. He was formerly with the Toronto General Hospital. The decoration was given him for caring for wounded under heavy shell fire on the Somme.

BRITISH CRUISER SENDS RAIDER TO THE BOTTOM

HIGH GRADE BIRDS MAKE DECISIONS DIFFICULT

One Guelph Winner Not Placed at Local Show.

The Peterborough Poultry Association exhibition in the Market Hall was well attended last night and today. The splendid entries in all classes brought forth words of praise from visitors who delight in seeing fowl of merit. George Robertson of Ottawa, who is in charge of the judging, has his hands full in coming to a decision in some of the varieties. For instance, one cockerel in the Dark Brahma class which took second prize at Guelph was not even placed at the local exhibition, and as each line of coops is passed upon the same hard judging is in evidence.

Miss Yates gave exhibitions of killing and plucking chickens both last night and this afternoon. She will continue her lecture and demonstrating this evening and tomorrow.

Despite the hard competition from outside exhibitors, the local poultry fanciers are not without a fair share of the red ribbons.

A few of the exhibitors are James Baptie of Springville, splendid pens of ducks; Victor Suggitt, Valentia, Ont., fine specimens of Houdans; W. W. Lord, of Campbellcroft, exhibits in nearly every class; his exhibit of Silver Campines is fine. Wilbert G. Griffith, of Wilfred, Ont., has some splendid specimens of signle-combed White Lenghorns. John Clancy of this city has several exhibits. He was a prize winner in the Anconas. Curtis Bros., Warkworth, also have fine exhibits of Anconas and other poultry. W. W. Lord, Campbellcroft, is one of the exhibitors of Indian Runner ducks, which are attracting much attention. W. J. Crowhurst, of Port Hope, has numerous exhibits of ducks and geese. Curtis Bros., of Norham, have real fine specimens of Aylesbury Ducks and Black Spanish Hens. S. J. Cox, of Colborne, is an exhibitor of turkeys and Toulouse geese. Thos. Bottrell & Son of Bowmanville have an exhibit of game Bantams that are much admired.

H. T. Lush of Peterborough is one of the largest exhibitors at the show. Other exhibitors are:

F. L. Walsh, Warkworth.
E. S. Waite, Belleville.
C. H. Bartow, Peterborough.
W. J. Munroe, Grafton
E. T. Thompson, Belleville.
Sam Jordan, Peterborough.
Thos. Northey, Oshawa.

Sam Oke has a very creditable exhibit of dressed fowl and fancy table eggs.

Judging will be continued this evening.

LATE JOHN KEMP LEFT LEGACIES TO RELATIVES

Made His Will After Being Injured At Fire.

Application has been made to the surrogate court of the county of Peterborough for the probate of the last will and testament of the late John C. Kemp, one of the victims of the Quaker Oats fire. The will, which was made on the day of the disaster, disposes of an estate of $5,495, divided as follows: Real estate $2000; insurance and cash on hand $1422.86, mortgages $1600, furniture $400, book debts and notes $59. The will bequeaths:

To my executors, hereinafter named in trust for the persons and purposes herein stated:

I will and direct my said executors to give and transfer to my son-in-law, Wm. McMillen, my dwelling house and lot where I reside, and my household goods, furniture and furnishings.

I will and direct my said executors to apply the money secured by insurance on my life in the Canadian Order of Foresters in and towards the payment of the mortgage on the property of my brother, Thomas Kemp, and if the same shall not be sufficient for that purpose, that the balance of such mortgage shall be paid by my executors out of other money belonging to me.

Legacies to Relatives.

I will and direct my said executors to pay the following legacies as soon as conveniently may be after my death, that is to say:

To my brother Lance Tapley Kemp the sum of $200;

To Martha McMillen, wife of said Wm. McMillen, the sum of $200;

To Elizabeth Kemp, wife of my brother, Thomas Kemp, $200;

To Etta Kemp, daughter of my brother, Wm. Kemp, $200;

To Elsie Johnston, daughter of Charles Johnston, $100;

The remainder to be divided to the above legatees in proportion to their respective legacies.

The will appoints Charles Curtis of Otonabee and Henry McCall of Douro as executors.

JURORS' FEES GIVEN TO HELP CHILDREN

The members of the Coroner's jury for the Howard Clarke inquest, by motion authorized their foreman to collect the money due them for their services and to divide it equally between the Children's Aid Society and St. Vincent's Orphanage.

ENTENTE REPLY TO PRESIDENT

SENSATIONAL DOCUMENT READY FOR HIM.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The well-known journalist, Marcel Hutin, says the reply of the Entente to President Wilson's peace note will be "ultra sensational," and that its delivery to the President is imminent. It will be published as soon as the President has had an opportunity to examine it.

LLOYD GEORGE RIGHT MAN IN RIGHT PLACE

ITALIAN WAR COMMISSIONER SAYS COUNCIL MOST SUCCESSFUL OF WAR.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.— A News agency despatch from Rome quotes War Commissioner Bisslati Bergamaschi, a member of the Italian Cabinet, as saying: "The recent Allied council at Rome must be considered one of the most successful of the war. I am fully convinced from Premier Lloyd George's electric personality, adamantine character and quick and unerring decision, that he is the right man in the right place at this present decisive phase of the war.

"Representatives of all the Allied nations derived from the meeting a new strength and faith in victory, the Italians especially. It confirmed the realization of their national aspirations."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 10, 1917

THE MAYOR AND THE FIRE CHIEF.

IN HIS ANNUAL ADDRESS to Council last Monday, Mayor Duffus, no doubt with the sole object of advancing the interests of the city, recommended that a first-class assistant fire chief be engaged, one able to take the place of the chief at any time, and that the latter should not take part in any public function, no matter how commendable, but should devote himself to the duties for the performance of which he is paid by the city.

Whatever may have been in the executive mind when these recommendations were made, the impression might be created that the present assistant chief is not altogether efficient and that the head of the brigade is indifferent in the matter of giving the city the full benefit of his services. Mayor Duffus has been in municipal life for the past seven years, and if any member of the Council understands the working of the various departments under the control of the aldermen he certainly should.

To take up first the case of the present assistant chief, no one has ever seriously questioned his efficiency or his ability to take complete control in th absence of his superior. Assistant Chief Jamieson is a man of many parts, and has earned his salary many times over as a carpenter and machinist at fire headquarters, saving the city hundreds of dollars in these capacities alone. The manufacturers, at least, appreciated his services when they made him and Chief Howard the recipients of substantial and timely favors last spring.

Mayor Duffus has held his present position for over a year. In that time he has surely learned that Chief Howard never left the firehall to canvass for the Patriotic Fund or to take part in any other public work outside of his official duties without first asking the consent of the Mayor and the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Chief Howard never leaves headquarters, even to attend church, without writing on the blackboard just where he is to be found. He is constantly in touch with the other members of the brigade and can be summoned at any time. If he is absent, and a telephone call comes for him, the name of the person at the other end of the line is noted and reported to him on his return.

If there is in Peterborough any department where the management and discipline is better or more up-to-date business methods are employed, where the various rooms are kept more neatly than the firehall, then such department is entitled to the palm.

Chief Howard, it is true, has always taken an active interest in public affairs, a right which should not be denied any citizen of standing. The brigade he handles ranks high with the Underwriters' Association, and its efficiency would scarcely be greater if Chief Howard were made a virtual prisoner and chained to his office between calls.

If the department is to be improved, the necessity lies in a direction other than this particular one indicated by the Mayor.

STREET NAMES AND NUMBERS.

ONE OF THE FIRST THINGS a stranger notices as lacking in this city is the absence of street names at the corners. These names are, of course, cut into the cement sidewalks, but cannot be read during the winter season on account of the snow. Houses are not numbered consecutively, either, in a great many cases. Even on the main thoroughfare of the city a man looking for a particular number is often confused by the irregularity, and all of these conditions make it a matter of some difficulty for any person new to the city to find his way around or to any particular locality in the winter season.

The new Council can easily make improvements in these matters, and any changes would be welcomed by the people, who, as well as strangers, have always noted these particular drawbacks.

WILL THE COMPANY REBUILD?

NEARLY SIX HUNDRED people were thrown out of work through the destruction of the Quaker Oats plant by fire. On a conservative estimate, this means that at least 1,800 residents of the city, men, women and children, depended upon that industry for a livelihood, a number sufficient to populate a village by themselves. The catastrophe befel the community at the beginning of winter, and there would have been considerable suffering among those thrown out of work but for the unusual demand for labor which now prevails owing to the war. The munificence of the company, too, in dealing with their former employes went a long way toward warding off anything like suffering among them.

Do the people of Peterborough realize what it would mean to this city if the Quaker Oats Company decided not to rebuild here, but to locate in some other place? When the war is over and labor conditions return to the normal, the loss would be more keenly felt, and if the majority of the former employes left with the company for the new field, the falling off in the population would be a serious matter.

Every inducement should be offered the company to rebuild their plant in this city, and if the new high bridge at Hunter street is one of the conditions upon which they insist, in order to get transportation by water when the Trent Canal is opened to Lake Ontario, then the bridge should be built and every other reasonable concession granted.

THE LIBERAL campaigners in West Simcoe are blaming the Hearst Government for the forest fires in New Ontario last summer. So far, no genius with a touch of originality has thought to fasten upon the Conservative party responsibility for the Quaker Oats fire.

LOST TIME.

A READER of the St. Thomas Times saw an article in the New York Sun that stated that twelve million one hundred and seventy-three thousand four hundred and twenty-eight working hours are lost each day throughout the civilized world, shaking fountain pens so they will make a mark. Being evidently of a philosophical cast of mind, this set the St. Thomas man thinking, and he wrote his home paper as follows:

> If so much time is lost in shaking fountain pens, can you tell us how much is lost in dotting i's and crossing t's, and how much time, labor, waste of paper and ink in writing long, hard words which could be replaced by short, simple ones, and which a vast majority of the people do not understand? We little know how much good is lost from the latter source, both through pulpit and press. As I heard a little girl say to her mother when she was reading her Sunday school paper: "Mamma, I do wish they would write small words in our paper so we could tell what the stories mean."
>
> ANTI-WASTE.

We take it that the daily duties of "Anti-Waste" do not place him on intimate terms with the handwriting of the masses. If they did he would agree with any copy reader on a newspaper staff that the crossing of t's and the dotting of i's has become a much-neglected, if not an altogther lost, art.

But the other complaint which "Anti-Waste" registers is justified. He should remember, however, that many a man has gained a reputation as an orator by simply talking over the heads of his mystified but nevertheless admiring hearers. The old Scotch lady, after listening to a discourse one hour long and abounding in resounding periods that bristled with formidable words, confided to another worshipper that she had been much gratified, but when asked if she understood what the good man said, disdainfully replied, "Wad I hae the presumption?"

"Anti-Waste" need not despair. The style of speech and literature to which he objects is going out of date. Like many a foible in feminine fashion, it has had its day. No speaker or writer can long hope to pose as a man of erudition because he can dismay his audience with a long procession of many-storeyed words. The castle on the hill may be imposing, but the average cottage suffices for the plain people.

In this busy age people require condensed information. Clear statements are what appeal to them rather than sentences that puzzle and words that confuse. The man who makes a display of his knowledge of the classical derivatives, especially among those less academically endowed than himself, is now regarded as only a trifle less snobbish than the Dives who, finding himself addressing a throng of Lazaruses, would boast of or in any way make a vulgar display of his worldly possessions.

Sprinkling Latin or other foreign pharses through speech or writing designed for the common people is no longer regarded as a light offence.

TIGHTENING UP PROHIBITION.

THE STATES in the American Republic that have adopted prohibition have labored under the same disadvantages as beset the dry provinces in Canada—the importation of liquor from wet territories, nullifying to a considerable extent the operation of the law. The right of the Interstate Commerce Commission, a body with the same authority as our Dominion Railway Board, to prohibit this inter-state traffic was always questioned.

The matter was finally threshed out in the courts, and a decision just handed down by the highest tribunal in the land disposes of the question for all time.

Liquor cannot be sent from a wet to a dry state. If a state decrees that the private or personal use of liquor is illegal, then such a law will be upheld by the courts. Any state may now prohibit the possession, receipt, sale and use of intoxicating liquor, and will not be bothered by the question of importations. Liquor can be made contraband, an article in which no citizen has any property rights, and which will subject to fine or imprisonment any man in whose possession it is found, provided the state law so decrees. A number of states have already adopted such drastic measures.

The finding of the United States Supreme Court should interest the prohibitionists of Canada and have an effect on temperance legislatures here, as the federation of states is after all very much on the same plan as our own union of provinces.

THE TAXES ON NICKEL.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL LUCAS, campaigning in West Simcoe, has punctured the last nickel bubble blown into existence by the Liberal party. The latter have asserted time and again that the company mining nickel in Ontario pay a tax of only $40,000 a year, or about one-tenth of what would generally be regarded as a fair rate.

The facts are that the $40,000 was the old tax levied when the company undertook the work, and was granted to them as an inducement. They have paid no taxes for the past two years because the Government refuses to accept the old rate. The nickel commission is drawing up a new schedule, which will be ready when the Legislature meets. The nickel company will be required to pay a tax in proportion to their output not only in the future but for the years 1915 and 1916.

Both in the matter of the tax question and the export to Germany scare, the Opposition have fallen down in their attempt to make capital out of this issue.

WHAT NATIONAL SERVICE MEANS

National Service means every unit citizen contributing his or her best and biggest for the service of the aggregate citizen—each for all and all for each. No man does his "bit" unless he does his best. Canada at one time stepped into the battle ranks because it was a fair and honorable thing to do. Britain was attacked, and we rallied to her standard; it was right that we should We heard the stir of the British lion across the seas and her justly angry whelps gathered to aid her. But now it is more than a mere matetr of choice or of sentiment; it is a matter of necessity, for not only Britain, but the Empire, is in danger. Aye, even in destress. And, more than that, our very civilization, the product of ages, is being shattered and sundered. Let every man squarely realize our great danger, and let him say to our Government, "Convince yourself as to what action is necessary; take it boldly, and I will see you through." Conscription is not before us, but something far nobler than that. I mean voluntary service. For one willing and devoted soldier is worth a dozen men driven to the colors. It is that proud distinction that has made Canadian clerks, law students, University men, ministers, lawyers, bankers, farmers and workmen in a few months better soldiers than grizzled veterans on the field of compulsion. Let party politics vanish, for the enemy of human liberty must be crushed. The house is on fire. We cannot meditate any longer. We must act. We cannot argue under shell fire. We must decide. We cannot hesitate while the torpedo crushes in the bulwarks of liberty. We must move. Register! Register! Register! Let us know our moral power, our will power, our practically patriotic power—in one word, our man power—and then we will know what we should do with it and how best to apply it. Our resources are really so vast that they are incalculable. Let us know them, organize them, focus them upon one fixed point, and that one is to defend the liberties of the world, and show that in the year 1917 the filthy flood of organized and equipped barbarism was turned back and overwhelmed in its own foul sources.

HOW TO AVOID PNEUMONIA

Health Officer Price issues a warning against pneumonia, says the Detroit Free Press. This warning is an annual affair, annually needed and annually suffered to go unheeded by a large number of victims.

The doctor gives some advice concerning the way to avoid the disease. Get fresh air. Cultivate regular habits, plenty of sleep, wholesome food, outdoor exercise. Avoid crowds, excessive fatigue and alcohol. Some of the advise is easily taken. Fresh air is free. Regular habits are generally within the reach of anyone who really desires to acquire them. Wholesome food isn't necessarily expensive food; in fact, some of the most costly diets are the least healthful. Outdoor exercise can be secured by the employment of a little will power. And no one is obliged to indulge in alcohol.

But the avoidance of crowds isn't so easy, particularly for people who must ride in street cars, or, indeed, for any person who dislikes making a hermit of himself, and almost everyone occasionally finds himself face to face with conditions which force him into excessive fatigue. The dangers of the two unavoidable conditions are minimised, however, by the observance of the other rules of health and conduct, and a man who is in good condition can stand association with crowds and can now and then keep going to the point of complete weariness without really endangering himself.

The individual of average strength who lives reasonably has little to fear from pneumonia if he observes as much of the health officer's advice as is feasible and then does one other thing; catches the cold that has caught him and throttles it while it is young.

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

A good story against himself is told by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

When he was a curate at Thirlford he conducted a Sunday School class in a neighboring parish.

The subject was King Solomon, and after the lesson he catechised the children.

"Tell me, boys," he said, "what was the difference between Solomon and other men?"

There was no answer.

"Come, come," said the future primate, "was there any difference for instance, between King Solomon and myself?"

A small hand went up and a tiny voice replied:

"Please, sir, Solomon was wise."

Mr. Roosevelt, in delivering a campaign speech recently, told a story showing that the average American has at all times a pretty good conceit of himself, a trait that is also very apparent among the rising generation of young Americans.

A schoolboy was asked:

"Who was the first man?"

"George Washington," he replied.

"Nonsense," said the teacher. "What makes you say that?"

"Because," replied the boy, repeating a well-known quotation, "he was 'First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen.'"

"That may be," commented the teacher, "but nevertheless Adam was the first man."

"Oh," retorted the boy with fine contempt, "if you're talking about foreigners——"

The Hon. T. Chase Casgrain only assumed Cabinet rank about a year and a half ago, says the St. John Telegraph. Previous to that time he practiced his profession as a lawyer in Montreal. He was an American by birth, having been born in Detroit sixty-four years ago, but came with his parents as a lad to Quebec where he was educated at Laval. For some years he was in the Quebec Legislature, being Attorney-General of the province for five years and also a member of the House of Comons for a short period prior to 1896. For nearly twenty years he was out of politics, devoting his time to his legal work and temperance reforms. The late Mr. Casgrain was an unusually broad minded and tolerant man. He was a Conservative of the old school, but fair to his political opponents and also unusually tolerant in all racial and religious questions.

Col. W. N. Ponton, of Belleville, who was one of the speakers at the recruiting meeting at the Armories Sunday night, writes The Reveiw ordering a number of copies of Monday's paper containing the report of the meeting and in his letter says:—

Your excellent report of the meeting on Sunday night is very pleasing to those whose privilege it was to take part in it. I do hope that the men of Peterborough and vicinity at this crisis of our fate, will not delay too long until the haunting words, "Too late" are written over their portals.

Your editorial comments supplement and give point to the speeches and should bear fruit.

THE WIFE MEN LIKE

She is the little woman who does her best to please everybody, especially her husband. She looks after her relations, has a pleasant smile for her neighbors, and isn't short-tempered when called downstairs to answer a canvasser or asked to exchange a fern for an odd pair of boots.

Her husband likes her because she runs up no debts. When he arrives home in the evening the dinner is always ready. This makes him happy and pleasant to other people. His friends would do anything to please her because she entertains in such a quiet, sensible fashion. She makes everybody feel at home in her house, whether they come from next door or a hundred miles away. There are no storms or quarrels where this wife is.

Her Method

Two ladies on the other side of the border were holding a stairhead confab one morning on the troubles of life, and husbands in particular.

"I dinna wonder at some puir wives having to help themselves out of their husbands' trouser pockets," remarked one.

"I canna say I like them underhand ways myself," responded the second matron. "I jist turn ma man's breches doonside up and help masel' off the carpet."

Turn About

Smith got married. The evening of his first pay day he gave his bride $14 of the $15 salary and kept only $1 for himself.

But the second pay-day Smith gave his wife $1 and kept $14 himself.

"Why, John," she cried in injured tones, "how on earth do you think I can manage for a whole week on a paltry dollar?"

"Darned if I know," he answered. "I had a rotten time myself last week. It's your turn now."

Helping Jack Out

Recently Jack had a motor car accident at a lonely spot on the road where he found it impossible to reach a telephone to notify his wife.

Now it happened that he was happily married, very domesticated, and not accustomed to staying out at night. So at midnight his wife became very nervous and dispatched the following telegram to five of her husband's best friends:

"Jack hasn't come home. Am worried. Is he spending the night with you?"

Soon after this Jack arrived home and explained the cause of his delay. While he was talking a boy brought in five answers to her telegrams, all worded thus:

"Yes. Jack is spending the night with me."

WOMAN'S CLAIM FOR ALIMONY NOT ALLOWED

DOMICILE OF MARRIED COUPLE IS IN FRANCE.

ACTION ENTERED HERE.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—Can a wife institute proceedings in separation as to bed and board and claim alimony from that husband before the Canadian tribunals, when the domicile of the couple is in France? Such was the question that had to be decided by the Court of Review. Mr. Justice Lamothe, sitting in Superior Court, had dismissed such an action on an exception taken by the husband-defendant. The Court of Review, Mr. Acting Chief Archibald dissenting, confirmed that judgment.

The facts of the case are the following: Mrs. Kathryn Irwin, wife of Clarence Alphonse Gagnon, has sued the latter in separation, and has asked that he be ordered to pay her the sum of $75 per month. The defendant objected to the action on the ground that it should not have been instituted here, as the common domicile of he couple was in Paris, France, where the defendant practised as an artist. This exception was maintained in the Superior Court and the case dismissed.

Both the wife and the husband were born in Montreal, where they received their education. In 1904, Mr. Gagnon went to Paris to complete his studies. It was then that he met his future wife, who was visiting France with her family. They were married later, and although making frequent visits to Canada, the common domicile of the parties was in Paris. When the case was first instituted, the plaintiff was living with her brother, at St. Rose, in the district of Montreal.

ECLIPSES THIS YEAR

The year 1917 promises to be a busy one in astronomical circles. In the first place, there are to be six eclipses, besides that of the moon Monday morning. Two of them will be of the moon, four of the sun. Unfortunately, however, the series does not include a total eclipse of the sun.

The other eclipses of the year will be a partial one of the sun on June 19, a total one of the moon on July 4, a partial one of the sun on July 18, an annular eclipse of the sun on Dec. 14, and a total eclipse of the moon on Dec. 28. None of these except the last will be visible in this section.

SECURING OF EXEMPTIONS

ENGLISH LAWYERS WORK WITH FARMERS AND TOWNSMEN.

The workings of the conscription tribunals are discussed by a special correspondent of the London Daily Mail as follows: The result of my fortnight's tour among the northern tribunals has been more than disheartening. It has been heartbreaking. Almost everywhere I have found the wheels of the machinery clogged. There has been neither co-ordination nor concentration. Muddle and chicanery are rampant, and the courts are for the most part family parties, with the farmer as host and autocrat in the rural areas, while the townsman rules the roost in the urban districts, with his town and the comforts of it to consider first, and the urgent needs of the nation a very bad second.

One of the worst scandals of all is the insidious nibbling of the local solicitor, who, with his suave tongue and his cunning marshalling of what he calls "points of law," scores off the harassed members of the tribunal every time, bringing off the most flagrant coups. His principal work may not be confined to the actual court. A very great deal of his business is "chamber work," where he holds consultations and advises slackers, at a fee of $10.50 a time, how to go about their work of bamboozling the tribunal.

That Pretty Mouth

An exercise for beautifying the lips and making them facile and flexible is the pronunciation of the vowel sounds "ah-oh," "ah-oh-ee," "ah-oh-ee-oo." This is to be repeated ten times each at ten different times a day. A sentence which is approved by many elocution teachers for the exercise of the lips is "Most men want poise and more royal margin."

ATMOSPHERE FOR BEAUTY

Surround Yourself With Things That Will Enhance Peculiar Charms.

A woman writes: There is a new tendency among fashionable women—those whose entire lives are devoted to social pleasure—to consider themselves as central figures of a large picture, and to surround themselves at all times with an atmosphere proper to such a picture. In many ways this is a praiseworthy idea, for it tends to greater beauty and less ornateness. A generation ago, the house of a rich woman was crowded to discomfort with every sort of costly and useless knick-knack. Apparently the only reason for each article was its high price. And even to-day, when there is still another Renaissance in progress, there are houses of wealth cluttered with valuable and silly trifles, each one beautiful but all in such profusion that any one article is lost in the confusion.

Now we are beginning to recognize again that the first principle to beauty is simplicity—and the woman who wants to make herself seem beautiful must surround herself with an atmosphere of beauty and art. A Parisienne who has red-gold hair and greenish eyes keeps near herself a bowl of goldfish—there is one in every room in her house—for she knows the darting flashes of gold in the bowl help emphasize her own gold, and green attractiveness. A diminutive society leader in England, a woman with bright eyes and a quick, pretty manner, has canaries all over her house—for she herself is like a bright-eyed bird, and she knows that birds help make for her that atmosphere. And another woman, tall, dreamy, not pretty, but very clever, carries a large Persian cat about with her, where her friends carry pet dogs—the sleepy, indolent grace of the cat goes well with her type. So I ask you—while you cannot follow the fads of society—have you created for yourself the proper atmosphere? Do so at once.

THE KING'S "GODSPEED!"

Battalion Formed From Household Brigade, For Active Service

A battalion of infantry formed from the Household Brigade was inspected by the King in Hyde Park. The King was accompanied by Queen Mary and Princess Mary, and Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria were also present. The King congratulated all ranks on the battalion's smart and soldierly-like appearance and steadiness under arms.

"This is the first occasion in the history of the Household Cavalry," said King George, "that an infantry battalion for active service has been formed from its regiments.

"Remember that you are members of either the 1st Life Guards, 2nd Life Guards, or the Blues, and I am convinced that as infantry you will maintain the splendid traditions which are the pride of those regiments. I shall follow all your doings at the front with the greatest interest. I wish you God speed and good luck."

Petrol "King of War"

Petrol is the true king of this war. Without the motor lorry all these marvels would have been impossible. Petrol reigns supreme on the battered earth below, as he reigns supreme amid the clouds above. His two instruments are the car and the aeroplane. Both have helped to revolutionize the science of war.

"Cat" Shells

The Germans are using a new kind of shell, which contains gas. It makes a peculiar noise, like a cat mewing, before it reaches the ground, and the explosion is so slight that one can scarcely hear it.

THE SPEECH OF THE AIR

NEW DICTIONARY NEEDED FOR MODERN AVIATORS.

C. G. Grey, editor of the "Aeroplane," says: "One of the commonest words in the mouth of any aviator is 'stunt.' In its original and purest American sense a 'stunt' might be defined as any action which is difficult to do and not worth doing when done. Thereafter it came to mean anything that was more or less difficult to do, and so the aviator of to-day uses it to express anything of such nature, from producing the designs of a new and exceptionally efficient aeroplane, or from carrying out a daring and dangerous raid over enemy country, all the way down to fixing up some neat little new idea of his own on his machine, or to getting his machine down safely under awkward circumstances. A verb which has come into the language of aviation and so far as I know is never used outside of it, is to 'hotstuff.' Everybody has heard a cute business man described as being 'very hot stuff,' and from that the very early aviators, who lived from hand to mouth very largely by their wits, developed the verb, which indicated the obtaining of anything by means which, if not exactly illegal, were at any rate unconventional. Thus one might in those days 'hotstuff' the loan of an engine, which the hotstuffer could not afford to purchase, by representing that the aeroplane for which it was intended would infallibly break all existing records, though as often as not it was much more likely merely to break the engine, or else to break the proprietor thereof financially.

"To 'spike-bozzle a Zeppelin,' strictly speaking means nothing at all, but it does not take much of an eye to perceive that it expresses rather well the idea of attacking and destroying utterly anything which is 'spike bozzled.' 'Blimp' is the nickname used for the British 'S. S.' or 'Submarine Scout' airships. These funny little vessels, which are now quite familiar all round the British coast and to many places inland, somehow suggest by their appearance that they ought to have some comic nicknames, being as they are such excellent caricatures of the stately airships of larger size, and the word 'Blimp' has about it some subtle form which seems to fit them.

"Still another word which has almost come into official use is 'hickboo.' It is distantly related to 'hullabaloo,' and means any kind of official fuss, all the way from a wigging from one's Commanding Officer up the scale through a threatened court-martial, or an official strafing from some high authority, up to an official warning of an imminent raid by enemy airships."

SINGLE-HANDED DEEDS

Man of the Rank Who Have Set the Example

Why some men in the ranks were decorated continues to furnish thrilling stories of heroism. When his company was hotly pressed Lance-Corporal A. C. Lowry, 9th Royal Fusiliers, with two bags of bombs, held up an attack single-handed. Private A. J. McIntosh, of the same battalion ran along the parapet and dropped a bomb on an attacking squad. Private F. Warren, of the 8th Battalion, stood on the parapet throwing stones because his bombs were exhausted, and only desisted after being twice wounded. Lance-Corporal H. Titchmarsh, 7th Bedford Regiment, twice drove back enemy patrols within twenty yards of their lines, and later silenced a sniper and a machine gun. Acting Sergt. Starling, "D" Battery, 93rd Brigade, R.F.A., volunteered to stop two teams about to enter a village which was being heavily shelled. When he reached them shells were falling within fifteen yards, but he brought the teams to safety through a shell-swept area of 300 yards. Private R. Dixon, 3rd (attached 2nd) Border Regiment, organized and led a bombing party which drove out the enemy from one of our trenches, and then took command of all near him, organizing the defences and establishing communications. It is also of a private—W. Layton, 1st Shropshire L.I. (attached Brigade Staff, 18th Brigade)—that the following fine record is given: "He laid torpedoes under the enemy wire, guided a raid, was the first man into the enemy trenches, and accounted for several of the enemy."

RANGER'S INVENTION

Spiral Ladder Round Tree Serves For Lookout Station

On the summit of Brush Mountain in the Crater National Forest of southern Oregon, the top of a tall fir tree is used as a lookout station by a ranger who patrols the woods and is on a constant vigil for fires. In establishing his observatory, the man constructed a spiral ladder which winds about the trunk and extends to the uppermost part of the great tree. He did the work unassisted, and in a staunch and durable manner. The rungs of the ladder consist of heavy yew pegs driven into 2-inch auger holes, spaced at regular intervals and bored 1 foot deep into the tree. After these members had been put in place, their outer ends were connected and reinforced by a long railing, made of partly sawed Douglas fir poles.

Welcome the British

The following from Odessa, Russia, shows how Russia treats her allies: The British Armored Car Contingent has been here some days. The men were entertained at the Bourse by the municipality. A banquet was given to the officers at the Town Hall, Lieut.-General Marks said: "Great Britain has severed almost all the tentacles with which the black German octopus has been sucking the life blood of the world." A gala performance was held in the Municipal Theatre at which the men were loudly cheered.

WAS PURGED BY THE WAR

ROMANTIC STORY TOLD OF FREDERICK P. FARRAR.

Another man has emerged from the European war purged of disgrace. Frederick P. Farrar, of the French Foreign Legion, has been decorated for valor in the field, and acclaimed for conspicuous gallantry. He disappeared five years ago, after his many friends in England learned that, as the Rev. Dr. Frederick Percival Farrar, rector of Sandringham, domestic chaplain to Queen Alexandra, he had been dismissed from his court posts. He had not been heard of since in the United States or England, until a few days ago. For a year he has been fighting in the Foreign Legion, but it is not known under what name. His persistent courage finally drew attention to him. In addition to other honors, it is understood he was offered a commission in the British army by the King, but declined, preferring to fight in the ranks with his present comrades.

The former rector's wife was Miss Nora Davis, of Philadelphia, a sister of the late Richard Harding Davis. He had met her when he was a Philadelphia newspaper reporter, and they had been married only five months when his disgrace came. Farrar is a son of the late Canon Farrar, author of the famous "Life of Christ." He was graduated from Cambridge in 1897, and in 1905 he succeeded to the rectorship of Sandringham. Many celebrities were at his marriage at St. Andrew's, Westminster, to Miss Davis. Then suddenly it was reported he was suspected of an offence that made the retention of his office impossible. He is said to have refused to resign when asked. The next day he disappeared. It was reported later he was in British Columbia.

Eve Frightens Adam.

The war has brought Eve into her kingdom both as a mother and as a man. When I call Eve a man I mean what I say, a writer in London Opinion observes. She is doing a man's work in innumerable ways. The only thing that puzzles me is to find out anything she cannot do. She can drive a motor ambulance and she can run a great military hospital. She can turn herself into a surgeon and operate as skilfully as any man. She can make big shells. She can direct great business. I believe she could fight, if we allowed her to fight, as many women in the Russian army are fighting.

Her only limitation is her physical strength, and there are many women strong enough to beat their husbands physically as well as intellectually. There is no use in denying that men are afraid of Eve, with her brains, her industry, her sobriety, her honesty, and her perseverance. As a rival in any trade or profession she is by no means despicable. Eve is making the old Adam sit up. Her efficiency terrifies him. After the war Adam will be forced to wake up and work hard in order to keep abreast of Eve.

The most radiant and effulgent joke of the moment is the panic into which Eve has plunged all the old fogeys in the churches. Athelstan, Riley and Co. are frightened out of their wits by the prospect of seeing Eve placed on a level with Adam in the kingdom of heaven. The trade union of Adam is shrieking in terror at the idea of allowing Eve to speak in a mission hall. "The National Mission or Repentance and Hope" must be a male monopoly.

The cream of the jest is that without Eve the churches would be empty. Eve is the great churchgoer and the great church worker. Being a man, I know there is more need for repentance among men than there is among women, for men govern the world, and they are responsible for the state it is in to-day. Women are helping us to deliver the world from the stupidities of male misgovernment, but they cannot be held responsible for them. If they were to govern the world for the next hundred years they could not possibly make more mistakes than we have made.

Lumberjacks Overseas.

"Although the market prices of best English timber have doubled since the war, and there is a very good reason why we should ease our shipping whenever possible, many owners of private woods and parks decline to help the nation to secure some supplies, though others do what is possible."

This is the opinion which an expert British lumberman expressed to a London News representative.

"Canadian lumber-jacks," he continued, "are busy on Crown lands.

"As their trees have taken generations to grow I suppose landowners have come to look upon them sentimentally more or less as family heirlooms.

"There is a big demand for ash, oak, sycamore, beech, larch, and lime—the last-named for the manufacture of artificial limbs—and timber merchants will take as much as we can supply them with."

FRENCH CHILD AND THE WAR

SOME LITTLE GIRLS WRITE BRAVE LETTERS; OTHERS DIFFERENT.

The war fills the minds of French children at present to the exclusion of other subjects, writes La Raconteuse. I have seen hundreds of letters from little boys and girls, between the ages of six and twelve years, written either to their father "who defends us all," or to some brave poilu, "who is freezing the trenches." The letters written by the little girls are especially interesting. Psychologists, as you know, divide women into two classes, of which the one contains those in whom the erotic temperament predominates, the other those in whom the maternal instinct is the stronger. The letters written by the little girls may actually be divided into two exactly similar groups.

Read, for instance, this letter written by a typical little mother: "My dear soldier—My heart feels sincerely sorry for you, when I think of you living in those awful trenches. Just now it is so cold and freezes so hard, that everybody likes to sit near the fire. Please be sure and dress as warmly as you can. Put on your muffler, and if you have a nice warm hood, pull it well over your head and ears, as we little girls do when we go to school and home again. Very soon the weather will get better and the sun will make you feel warm. In the meantime, I wish you good luck and good cheer, and I cry with you 'Vive la France.' Yours lovingly, Simone Godrant."

Do you not see in these charming lines, with their picturesque solicitude and thoughtfulness, the little mother of a family who will in time make her children put on mufflers and hoods, when they leave their warm home to go to school in cold weather? Here on the other hand is a letter from a typical little sweetheart: "My soldier—Please do not get killed either on the battlefield, nor in the hospital. My soldier, I love you with all my heart. Susanne Goran, 23 Rue Ramey, Paris."

You get the same impression from the little girls' replies to questions asked them by their teachers. One question, for instance, was this: "What would you be in life if you had your choice?" More than half of the girls in that class replied that they would be nurses and look after the wounded soldiers, and many of them expressed themselves in very sweet and tender language, while some of the others chose to be modistes so that they could have beautiful clothes and "win the heart of a brave and handsome soldier."

Too Big For Army

If you were eight feet two and a half inches high, weighed 280 pounds, and could throw two men around wouldn't you think the army would be glad to have you? So thought a young Wiltshire innkeeper with those specifications. But he thought wrong. The ordinary Tommy's equipment wouldn't fit him. He would have to have everything made to order. His boots are size 13½. He couldn't get into an ordinary railroad car seat and had to travel with the baggage. So the military authorities, after wrestling with the problem, decided to let the giant keep on tending his inn. He was twenty-two years old and still growing when rejected.

THE HUN AT WORK

Lie Factory Produces Several For the Moslems

Of all the prodigious lies which the gentle Hun has spread abroad since the war began the magnet story is an easy winner. It was told to Mohammedans. It was retold in London by Bishop Stileman at the Church Missionary Society's meeting. This is it: "A giant German aeroplane, equipped with a huge magnet, has visited Petrograd, Paris and London and the huge magnet had succeeded in drawing up the Czar, the French President, and King George out of his bedroom in Buckingham Palace, and they are now all prisoners in Berlin."

In the East, said the Bishop, the Kaiser was called Hajji Mahamet Guilliame, and it was said that he lay three days and three nights before the Khaba Shrine, and that at the end a great voice came to him distinctly as the envoy of Allah, the Saviour of Islam and the Sword of the Lord, saying, "Arise and fight."

Another dangerous falsehood was about the object of the British in waging this war. It was said that they had the bones of all the Pharaohs in the British Museum, and that they should never be satisfied until we captured the sacred cities of Mecca and Medina, rifled the Prophet's Tomb, and brought his bones to the British Museum. Another lie was that the whole brood of the Hohenzollerns were descended from the sister of Mahomet.

ADMIRALTY WANTS 5000 MEN FOR THE NAVY FROM CANADA

Progress is being made with enlistment for the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, which is being caried on in Montreal, as well as all over Canada. Despite the great work the navy has done for the Empire during the first two years of the war, Canadian had no opportunity of enlisting in the Royal Navy unless they went home to Great Britain, and volunteered, serving at the British rate of pay. This rate of pay made such service impossible for men with families here, although a number did enlist in this way, several hundred joining the Royal Naval Volunteer Motor Boat Patrol and the Royal Naval Air Service.

With the enormous increase in tonnage in the Royal Navy since the war thousands of men are needed to complete the establishment. The Admiralty, realizing that many men in Canada would rather serve in the navy than the army, asked the Canadian Government to raise 5,000 men for the King's navy.

This was at once agreed to by the Canadian Government, as a part of Canada's half million men for the Imperial service overseas, with arrangements whereby men enlisting for sea service shall be given the same rates of pay and other considerations as the land soldiers with the expeditionary forces. No sea experience is necessary, and men physically fit between the ages of 18 and 38 are given the unusual privilege of joining the Royal Navy at full seaman's rank, at a wage many times that paid in the British navy, while they are rated two ranks higher than that allowed ordinary green recruits.

MAPLE SYRUP IMITATIONS

CANE SUGAR MIXTURE WAS SOLD FOR GENUINE ARTICLE.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—The report of the chief analyst of the Inland Revenue Department upon samples of maple syrup purchased during the year in various centres throughout Canada has been issued, and shows that out of 209 samples purchased as maple syrup by department inspectors in the open market, 172 were found to be genuine in the sense of meeting standard requirements for maple syrup as defined in the act; six samples met the requirements within such narrow limits as to engender suspicion, but were passed; thus giving 168 samples as probably genuine, 80 per cent. of the total collection.

Forty-one samples were found to be adulterated, being mixtures of cane sugar syrup with maple syrup.

Government inspectors visited five retail stores in Toronto, and, without disclosing their identity, purchased good labelled "maple syrup." Of the five lots of "maple syrup" purchased in various sections of Toronto analysis showed that only two contained genuine maple syrup.

An inspector purchased three bottles of syrup labelled "maple syrup" in one grocery, and states that the salesman guaranteed it pure maple syrup. It was found to be adulterated.

A visit to a second store and a similar purchase resulted in the analysis showing adulteration.

Maple syrup purchased in a third store received a certificate of "meeting legal requirements," signifying that it barely escaped being branded as adulterated, and was open to suspicion.

Two other samples, one purchased on Queen street west, and the other on Yonge street, passed the test, and were pronounced genuine.

Three jars of syrup purchased in Richmond Hill for maple syrup, but not labelled, were found to be adulterated.

The inspectors made two purchases in Aurora, also in the Toronto district, and both samples were found to be genuine.

Two purchases were made in Oshawa, one was genuine and the other adulterated.

CAPT. BURNHAM WRITES OF TRIP TO BATTLE FRONT

Boys in Trenches Send Message to Those at Home---Ship in Which Captain Returned in Constant Danger From Subs.

Having been asked to give some little account of my experiences since last July I am very glad to do so if they are of interest or can serve any good purpose.

We landed last Tuesday from a Cunarder which had just come from Saloniki and had missed there the fate of her sister ship by a narrow margin. We were sixteen days at sea and travelled about 4,000 miles, passing boats recently torpedoed and pursuing a zig-zag course to balk the subs. One day out from Ireland we were stopped by a French cruiser and our course was immediately changed, going south as far as the latitude of Florida. We were more than a week over-due and war vessels were sent out to meet us, they said, but we did not see any.

The Barbarous Subs

The newspapers do not contain one-quarter of the disasters at sea. The enemy submarines soon learned the despicable trick of sending out S.O.S. signals and when rescuers flew to answer torpedoed them. As a consequence no ship takes any notice of wireless messages and people out in ships' boats can get to land the best way they can.

We had 250 wounded men aboard coming home for further treatment and discharge. Fifty of them were minus either a leg or an arm. I had charge of one of the ships boats which were kept slung over the side. With the list of the ship in view after mine or torpedo strikes it, and with half of my 60 passengers unable to help themselves in such an event, and with ships sinking in from 3 to 10 minutes, the prospects were not at any time cheering. Still, one gets used to these things when once one makes up the mind to it, just as we did at the front, where large shells that shook the earth and nearly shook our teeth out exploded within a hundred yards of us and sent up a houseful of clay, failed to shake our nerves. Such is the nerve of a politician.

At the Front

Our visit to the front was most interesting and complete. We explored Ypres, which is a mass of ruins, and the region of Hill 60 and the Sanctuary Wood. The Germans were shelling it and the battle raged round about just as before. Ypres may come and go, but the glory of the Canadian there and at Givenchy (where Lt.-Col. Charles Ackerman was wounded) and Festubert will never fade. The general who failed to send up reinforcements to them is now wandering about England unemployed.

In Sight of the Foe

At the Vimi ridge and the Souches, where no less than three of our divisions hold the line, I visited the firing line, the front trenches and went out into the foremost sap and into the observation post, where, 40 yards away I saw Germans in their trenches looking past sandbags for any unlucky wight who might stick his head up. The minenwerfers, which the Germans send up high in the air to fall near by on the trenches exploded with appalling force and nearly shook our heads off. But the only sound that hurts the ear is that of the 18-pounder, which is sharp and high pitched.

When we went down to the Somme on the forward line the shells fell in some cases very near us, but it is impossible to see things as one must see them if it is to be "from start to finish, from Canada to the very face of the foe," unless all these things are taken as a matter of course just as the troops take them.

Saw the Tanks

We, of course, saw plenty of tanks and examined them. We saw all the generals and talked with them, from the Corps Commander-in-Chief down. We talked with the brave lads in the trenches and General Currie told me next morning that one hour after I had left a certain front trench it was raided by the Germans. Eight of the lads I had been talking to were killed, 14 wounded and the remaining man of the 23 held the trench with a Lewis machine gun! That is the sort of stuff our lads are made of.

A Message from the Trenches

I explained to them that if we are to get more recruits there must be a message from the boys in the trenches and they have sent one by me. On board ship when I told the wounded lads about it they asked to be allowed to sign it and it was worth a king's ransom to see them hobbling up at the double to put their names down in so good a cause. Two hundred of them were able to sign this appeal, or message which I am preparing for publication and use in the recruiting campaign. There is a vast deal to tell but it would take too long and what Canada wants and must have is recruits, not talk.

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM, M.P.

The boys at the front say, "Don't see us stuck," and stuck they must be if you do not prepare to reinforce them by next September.

HAD HONOR OF SALUTING KING

PTE. STAN. HARTLEY NOW WITH CONSTRUCTION BATTALION.

Pte. Stanley C. Hartley, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hartley, who left Peterborough with the 93rd Batt., was transferred to the 4th Pioneer Batt., and is now with the 127th Railway Construction Batt., writes home as follows:—

"I have been transferred from the 4th Pioneers to the 127th Railway Construction Corps. We got the opportunity to transfer, my chums and I, to a chance with the 127th. It is a good battalion with good officers. We are leaving for France next week and have over 500 horses to be taken along. I am driving a team on transport and have to get up in the morning earlier than most of the other fellows, to feed and clean the horses. We came in a draft from Crowborough to Borden Camp, Hampshire. It is a nice camp with brick buildings for quarters. It was built before the war for married soldiers. Toomorrow is Christmas Eve and Monday Christmas Day. We have our wills made out and our medals have our name and number. We can't get away for Christmas leave on account of being under 48 hours' notice from headquarters to leave for France. It will be a dry Christmas, but next year I'll be home. It is now about one year since I joined the army. Things are very dear over here.

I have travelled many miles since I left Canada and they used to call the Pioneers the tourist battalion, as we travelled so much. When you write tell me if you are getting your assigned pay and be sure to put my address the way I give it to you.

Pte. S. C. Hartley, No. 195,469, B Company, 127th R.C.R., Borden Camp, c.o. Army Post Office, as when we go to France the army office will find me.

I am well. I have seen Buckingham Palace and have had the honor of saluting the King.

I will close now, wishing you all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.—From Your Loving Son,

Fills Stomach With New Energy

Weak, Wornout, Gassy, Sour Stomach Revived and Made to Enjoy Food with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Convince Yourself With a Free Trial Package

Most of us eat three times a day and often forget that each meal should be disposed of in the stomach to make room for the next. The failure of the stomach to do this is called indigestion or dyspepsia, with its sour risings, gas, rumblings, pain, depression and the feeling of stuffiness when breathing is difficult.

The most effective remedy and the most reliable one, because you can get it at any drug store in the United States or Canada, is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, at 50 cents a box. Instead of depriving yourself of food or going on a starvation diet simply keep on as you have and let these tablets straighten out your stomach, digest the food and keep you in the fight. Send for a free trial package and prove how wonderfully and quickly effective they are. Mail coupon below.

Happenings at Hastings

HASTINGS, Jan. 9.— An enjoyable time was spent on New Year's Day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Scott, Asphodel, when their ten children, 21 grandchildren and other friends gathered together to celebrate with them the 50th anniversary of their wedding. A remarkable feature of the occasion was that every member of the family was present.

During the course of the day an address was read by the eldest son, Mr. J. Scott, while the eldest daughter, Mrs. Chas. King, made the presentation of a purse of gold to Mr. and Mrs. Scott. Their many friends hope that they may be spared to enjoy many more years of wedded life.

A quiet wedding of much local interest took place on Tuesday, Jan. 2, at the parsonage, when Rev. I. Snell united in marriage Mr. E. McConnell of Percy, and Miss Pearl McArthur, of Seymour. The happy couple left on the evening train for points west. Their many friends wish them much happiness.

Mr. E. Burnham of Peterborough was in town on Thursday.

Mr. F. Burridge has secured a position in Oshawa and left last week for that place.

Born—On Dec. 29, 1916, to Mr. and Mrs. J. Dickey, a son (James Gordon).

Miss M. Milligan of Toronto is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. C. B. Plant visited friends in Campbellford last week.

Mrs. John Stewart of Swift Current, Sask., was a guest at the home of her sister, Mrs. Wm Stillman, recently.

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Hess are visiting friends in Wooler.

Mr. A. Thomson occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning and evening.

Misses A. and G. Word of Villiers have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. J. Dickey.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Church has re-opened, having been closed on account of the Christmas practices.

Mr. J. C. Cameron of Peterborough was in town on Wednesday last.

The young men of the town gave a dance in the Town Hall on Monday night. All report a good time.

On Monday night of last week, in the Town Hall, a reception was given to Sergt. T. F. Learmouth, who has recently returned wounded from the front. Speeches of welcome were given by the reeve and clergymen of the village. Mr. Chas. Plant spoke on behalf of the council.

During the course of the evening Reeve W. Fowlds read an address and presented Sergt. Learmouth with a gold locket, inscribed, on behalf of the citizens of Hastings. Sgt. Learmouth replied in suitable terms and gave a short talke on life in the trenches.

The many friends of Mrs. Jas. Conney will be pleased to know that she is doing as well as can be expected after her serious accident.

Stamford Conservatives at their annual meeting adopted a resolution asking Premier Borden to use his influence to have conscription put into effect.

FATHER OF MODEL SURE LEWIS NOT THE SLAYER

Demands That Police Clear Mystery Attached to Murder.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10. —"I am convinced that my daughter Mazie Colbert, was not killed by Bernard Wesley Lewis, the young Atlantic City suicide. The police have been unable to give me any proof that my daughter died at Lewis' hands or that he had any connection with her death.

"I demand that the detectives continue their search for the murderer. They must not stop until he has been actually found and made to pay the law's penalty for his foul crime."

For the first time since he learned of the tragic and mysterious death of his daughter, Mazie Colbert, or Grace Roberts, James H. Colbert, white haired father of the dead woman, spoke publicly of the crime.

Only when he realized that the detectives had decided positively on Lewis' identity as the murdered did he make a statement, and only then in an effort to clear the name of the young man who he believes was not even acquainte with his daughter.

Lewis' Father Hires Detectives

Wenman A. Lewis, the wealthy father of the young man who killed himself at Atlantic City, came to Philadelphia and made arrangements for a thorough investigation by a large detective agency here.

It is said that Mr. Lewis is ready to spend his entire fortune to clear his son's name. Not only will he have the detectives ferret out every posible clue to an alibi for the suicide, but he will have them work to find the real murderer of Mazie Colbert, if it was not his son.

The police have found the "missing link" in the strong chain of circumstantial evidence against Bernard W. Lewis. They have learned positively that he had known Mazie Colbert for at least one year. They are convinced now that Lewis killed the woman.

Met Her "New York Friend"

The link was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Chambers, of Fifteenth and Vine streets, who told District Attorney Rotan that they had been acquainted with Mazie Colbert for some time. About a year ago they were entertained with several other persons at her apartment. A telephone call was received by her announcing the coming of another guest.

"A New York friend is coming to see me," she explained. A short while later in walked a dark-haired, handsome man.

"This," said Grace Roberts, according to the Chambers, "is Mr. Bernard W. Lewis." She explained that she had met Lewis at the automobile show here a short time before. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers did not see him after that night.

Today they saw Lewis' photograph in the papers in connection with Grace Roberts' death. They recognized him immediately, they say, as the man they had met at the apartment a year ago.

Model Said She Was "Broke"

Mrs. Chambeers told Mr. Rotan that she called upon Grace Roberts Thursday of last week and that the model had confided that she was "broke." When the police found the body there was but $9 in the apartment.

"I believe that Lewis and Grace Roberts got into a fight over money," said Mr. Rotan after hearing this. "They were both 'broke,' both needed money. There was no evidence of an orgy in the room. Possibly mutual recriminations on finances ensued and the killing followed."

Mrs. Chambers told the District Attorney that the diamond ring belonging to the slain girl, the disappearance of which has caused much conjecture, was not worn by Miss Colbert on the day before the murder.

LEWIS WROTE HE WOULD KILL HIMSELF

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 10. — Friends of Bernard W. Lewis, the Pittsburg broker, who killed himself in Atlantic City as the police were about to arrest him in connection with the murder in Philadelphia of Mazie Colbert, today learned that Lewis contemplated suicide on Dec. 17, when he wrote to one of his closest friends here asking that he take care of Mrs. Lewis and his daughter Betty.

The letter, which was received by James S. McFadyan, general manager of the Pittsburg Union Stock Yards, was mailed in New York at 11 o'clock the night of Dec. 17 last. It follows:—

"Before you get this letter I will have paid for my mistakes. You were one real friend upon which I could rely. This is my last request of you. Please, so long as you live, see that no harm comes to Laura and Betty, and tell Betty about all the pitfalls ahead of her, so she may miss them. I'd do this for you if the tables were reversed, and I ask you, in God's name, to look out for Laura and Betty. I am only a wreck now, but they must have some peace and happiness. Laura is a wonderful woman, and I'm paying tonight for wrecking her life. For what we've been in the past, Jim, make the road for father and mother and Laura and Betty as easy as possible. This is my last request.

"(Signed) Bernard."

Mr. McFadyan and Lewis had been friends from boyhood, but until the letter came on Dec. 18, Mr. McFadyan had received no word from him since he left the city in November in search of employment. Mr. McFadyan took no one into his confidence at that time but made the letter public today in the belief that Lewis, desperate because his money was gone and unable to face further disgrace, had taken his life as soon as he learned that he was to be arrested.

MAYOR DUFFUS AND ALDERMAN DOBBIN OUT OF THE CITY.

REEVE RYE ADDRESSES COUNCIL AT INAUGURAL

Assures West Side Representative Just and Due Consideration of all Matters---5 Per Cent. Added to Unpaid Taxes, Result of New Broom.

The inaugural meeting of the council of North Monaghan was held at the town hall on Monday, Jan. 8th, at 11 a.m. The new council is composed of the following members: Harold B. Rye, reeve; Jos. H. Bell, deputy; Thomas Henry, R. A. Dobbin, and John A. Williams, councillors. Each of the members took the declaration of qualification and office.

Reeve Rye addressed the meeting. He referred to the harmony and good will that prevailed last year, and assured Mr Dobbin that he wished him, as the only representative of the west side of the township, to bring in any matter which is necessary before the council, and the same would receive just and due consideration.

Communications were dealt with as follows:

From City Clerk Armstrong, re thanks of the committee to the members of the Monaghan council re the Quaker Oats fire.—Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Bell that the council hereby acknowledge receipt of the communication re the Quaker Oats fire, and extend their sympathy to the families of those who have met with such terrible deaths, and to the Quaker Oats Co., who have met with such a tremendous loss of property.

From the department of public highways re township road construction.

From C. A. G. Spence re Children's Aid Society, asking grant from council.—Moved by Messrs. Williams and Henry, that communication be received.

From the organization of resources committee, asking for full particulars of all grants and contributions given by the citizens and the council since the war broke out in 1914.—Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Williams that the clerk fill in the report referred to above and return the same to the committee in charge

From the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, asking for a grant.—On motion, Messrs. Dobbin and Williams, received.

Moved and seconded by Messrs. Dobbin and Henry that Mrs. F. A. Thomas be refunded the difference on the assessment as per schedule and the tax bill, a difference in assessment of $50, amounting to 98 cents.

From Bert Sanderson, applying for position as assessor at a salary of $150 and postage.—Moved and seconded by Messrs. Williams and Henry that the application be received and that the same be dealt with in the regular order of business.

Moved by Messrs. Henry and Dobbin that he question of the statute labor tax on Mr. W. R. Mather's property be referred to Mr. Peck for advice on the same.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Bell that the meeting refer back to deputations, and that Mr Thos. M. Hunter be heard. The question then arose regarding the bylaw authorising the tax collector to collect 5 per cent. after Dec. 20; it was fully discussed. Moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Bell that the bylaw authorizing the tax collector to collect 5 per cent. after Dec. 20 remain in force and that the 5 per cent. be collected according to the bylaw.

It was moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Bell that the reeve and Mr. Dobbin be a committee to engage an auditor for the accounts of 1916.

Appointed Assessor.

Bert Sanderson was appointed assessor, salary $150 per annum, payable half yearly, the above amount to include postage and other expenses, on motion of Messrs. Henry and Dobbin. The assessor suggested that the clerk advertise and ask anyone who has not been assessed properly in the past year to notify the assessor as soon as posisble, so that a proper assessment may be made this year; also, if there is any change in ownership of property, or any property being subdivided and sold, the name of the new owner be given, also lot number, plan number, and owner's address.

On motion, Messs. Bell and Dobbin, Mr. J. N. Lillico was appointed to look after Road Div. No. 2, pro tem, or until such time as the road commissioners are appointed for 1917.

Moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Dobbin that the question of the three days from Dec. 20 to 23 as advertised by the tax collector in the local newspapers and which was almost compulsory owing to abolishing the custom of collector going to the bank on Wednesdays, be confirmed, and that the tax collector be exempt from any obligation regarding said three days.

Bylaw No. 731 appointing Dr. T. N. Greer medical health and indigent officer for the township and defining his duties, was passed.

Long Swamp Road.

Mr. Dobbin reported that the work on the Long Swamp Road was done under Mr. Ward's commissionership and had been completed.

It was moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Williams that the township do not pay the Peterborough Hardware Co. $3 for cartage on cement.

The following bills were presented. Examiner Printing Co., supplies for 1916, $120.72; Peter Hamilton Co., grinding knife, $1.50; Clerk, re judge's voters' list court, $20.32.—

Moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Bell that the bills be ptid.

The following allowances were made under bylaw:

ICE HOUSE FOR FARMER

Directions For Building a Good Cooling Room

A 20x20 ice house with 12-foot studding is a practical sized building for farm use. A suitable sized ice house, and one that gives most practical results is 16x20 with 12-foot studding—building the cooling house on north side wall of building.

Under this plan the cooling room is attached to and forms a part of the north wall, with door opening into the cooling room from the north to prevent the direct rays of the sun at any time entering the cooling room. Dimensions of cooling room is 8x8x8, the top of which should be covered with some waterproof material—the roof built with a slight pitch in order that the water from the melting ice, which is placed on top and on three sides of a cooling room, will not drip and leak through the roof.

It is advisable to have one or more glass panels in door of cooling room so that in entering same the door may be closed and still permit enough light for convenient operation in cooling room. In filling the house with ice it is a common practice to pack the ice in a solid body to the desired height, leaving a space of 12 to 18 inches around the outside walls to be filled and thoroughly tamped in with hay or straw as the ice house is being filled.

Sawdust is, of course, most desirable for protecting the ice, but with most farmers is not available, and excellent results can be had from the use of hay or straw. Three to four feet of well tamped hay or straw should be placed over the ice as a final covering.

A report comes from Montreal by way of Chicago that Baron Shaughnessy may enter the British cabinet.

MAKING TREES BEAR

The Question of Cultivation Around Trees is Important

Hard, impervious soil is the tree's greatest obstacle to maximum thriftiness. Plowing the surface between and around trees helps, but when a tree is eight or ten years of age, or older, its roots go down several feet. The plough cannot break up the hard subsoil, and thus little or no relief is afforded the feeding roots by ploughing. In fact, surface ploughing encourages shallow rooting, which every horticulturist knows is bad for a tree.

To date the only practical remedy that has been found for hard soil is blasting with dynamite. Its use enables the orchardist to deeply stir and break the subsoil.

The blasting, usually an inch and a half soil auger being employed to put down holes to a depth of about three to four feet. One-quarter pound charge of a slow dynamite, five or six feet out from the trunk is generally sufficient for a tree under five years old. For larger trees from two to six charges, planted at different points around the trunk, will be required. The proper point to place the holes for the older trees is out at about the edge of the foliage line.

The effect of blasting is to break up the hard soil, enabling the roots to advance easily into new feeding beds; also to increase the water-storage capacity of the subsoil so that the tree may not suffer from lack of moisture during periods of drought.

Canadian Coins

In a report, Dr. James Bonar, deputy master of the Royal Mint, Ottawa, states that worn coin has received from the finance department in one year for re-coinage to the value of $166,424.97 silver, and $24.82 bronze. From a consignment of 18 bags, five bags were chosen at haphazard as delivered, and taken as a fair sample for estimating the age and wear and tear of the several denominations. The results for the two highest denominations showed a mean age of 42 years for the 50-cent piece, and of 39 years for the 25-cent piece, as against 36 and 34 respectively in 1912. The 10-cent pieces show a mean age of 34 years.

SERVICE TO ALASKA.

C. P. R. Steamer Will Make Three Trips for Tourists.

As was the case during the past season, the C. P. R. steamship Princess Charlotte will make three round trips in the Alaska tourist service next year, which becomes effective June 8th, 1917.

The list of tourist sailings between Victoria, Vancouver and Skagway, which has just been announced by the B. C. Coast Service, provides for three round trip sailings for the Princess Charlotte, seven for the Princess Alice and seven for the Princess Sophia, making 17 round trip sailings all told for the summer season of 1917.

The advent of the palatial steamship Princess Charlotte in the Alaskan tourist trade last summer was such a pronounced success that the company had no alternatve but to arrange for her return to the northern run next year, when it is expected tourist travel north will break all records. The schedule has been arranged earlier with a view to giving plenty of time for the arrangement of advance bookings.

The company proposes making a feature of this delightful travel route, and specially illustrated and descriptive literature is being prepared for distribution all over the continent. The accommodation on the Princess Charlotte will be largely reserved for parties booking in the East. A large number of inquiries regarding the northern tours have already been made in the East by parties who were unable to take the trip last summer.

President Wilson was again asked by the woman suffragists for a constitutional amendment.

Fortunate is the man who can eliminate the word revenge from his vocabulary.

The Roman Forum.

The Forum Romanum, the first that was erected in Rome, served equally for the purpose of trade and all public meetings as well as for the administration of justice by the consuls and other Roman magistrates. Later on, when the fora numbered some eighteen or twenty, they were divided into two classes, some for public meetings and the proceedings of the law courts and others for the various requirements of trade. The Roman forum corresponded to the agora, or market place, of the Greeks, and no Roman city was without this important centre of judicial, political and commercial life.

Japanese Hairdressers For Men.

The professional coiffeur for men is a much older occupation in Japan than that for women. There are records as far back as the thirteenth century of male hairdressers for men, for the samurai especially were very particular as to how the hair was done up, though as a profession the samurai was of somewhat later growth. It may be said, however, that during the later Tokugawa days the men appear to have appreciated in their wives and daughters the same careful attention to style of hair as was observable among their lordly selves. It is not without some significance that the first professional hairdresser for women was a man.
